TUCKER IN SCANDAL.

Mrs. J. A. Logan Is Complainant.

War Office Investigating Lieutenant-Colonel's Manila Record.

Cullom Aids Mother-in-Law and Wife in Getting the Inquiry Started.

Attentions Paid Widow in the Philippines Are Basis for Charges.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Following a conference at the War Department today between Secretary Taft, Senator Cullom and Mrs. William F. Tucker, formal confirmation was given to the statement published this morning that an official investigation is being made of the alleged scandalous conduct on the part of Lieut.-Col. Tucker, of the army, who is stationed at Chicago as Chief Paymaster of the Department of the Lakes.

The call of Senator Cullom and Mrs. Tucker was for the purpose of having the department make some sort of an announcement in regard to the action it had taken in the Paymaster's case. There was no disposition evinced by Mrs. Tucker to have the department call a halt in its inquiry.

The interest in the Tucker case is heightened by the recent reports that Lieut.-Col. Tucker and his wife, Mrs. John A. Logan's daughter, recently separated. Mrs. Tucker is now in Washington living with her mother, while her husband, Lieut.-Col. Tucker is stationed in Chicago, performing his duties as Paymaster of the Department of the Lakes.

BASED ON CONDUCT.

The complaint filed by Mrs. Logan is said to be based upon her son-in-law's conduct while stationed in the Philippines. Lieut.-Col. Tucker was assigned to duty in Manila several years ago and only recently returned and assumed his duty in Chicago.

There is no doubt that Mrs. Logan's action was most embarrassing to the department. Scandals, especially of a family character, and having the Philippines as their scene, are not relished by the army, because of their effect upon the entire service.

Several months ago an order was issued prohibiting officers from living with Filipino women, on the ground that such conduct was a disgrace to the service and the flag, and prescribing the penalty of dismissal for every person found violating it.

The department feels that in no case can it go behind this order, no matter how high the officer or how strong the political and other influence he may be able to muster.

CHARGES ARE GENERAL.

The War Department stated today that the complaint made against Lieut.-Col. Tucker was of a general character and requested an investigation of his conduct extending over the last two years and covering his career in the Philippines, San Francisco, Portland, Or., and Chicago.

Assistant Inspector General West now is at San Francisco, one of the places mentioned, and will go also to Portland, Or., for the purpose of ascertaining all he can in relation to the conduct of the Paymaster in these cities.

ADMITS SOMETHING WRONG.

Gen. J. Franklin Bell Makes Interesting Statement in Address to Army Officers.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LEAVENWORTH (Kan.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "There is a feeling," said Maj.-Gen. J. Franklin Bell, in addressing the army officers here today, "that there is something wrong in the army. It is known in Washington, and an effort will be made to correct it."

Gen. Bell's statement caused much comment among the army men who heard him. He gave no hint of his meaning, and left his hearers to form their own conjectures.

The speech of Gen. Bell was at the graduating exercises of the infantry and cavalry school, the signal school and the staff college, which were held today. Gen. Bell, chief of the staff of the army; Brig.-Gen. E. S. Godfrey, department commander; Brig.-Gen. C. H. Hall, Maj. Davila, Mexican military attaché, and a number of widely-known civilians were present. All the officers and women of the post were in the hall and added brilliancy to the occasion.

Gen. Hall, the service school commander, who presided, delivered a brief address to the student officers. Gen. Bell was accorded a warm greeting as he was introduced by Gen. Hall. Gen. Bell said he joined in the advice of Gen. Hall for the student officers to be modest when they returned to their commands. He added that they could not be too modest.

"Do what you are told to do, and do it cheerfully, although you may know it is wrong," was part of Gen. Bell's advice.

REFUSES TO TALK.

MANILA PAPER ENLIGHTENING.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Col. Tucker didn't remain long in his office today after several visitors had made casual inquiries regarding his matrimonial troubles.

"I have heard of the charges," he replied when Mrs. Logan's complaint to the war officials was mentioned.

"Will you wait to defend yourself in a court-martial or in court?"

"I have nothing to say whatever."

Under the caption, "Col. Tucker and Mrs. Platt," the Manila Times of May 28, received in Chicago today, throws new light on the Colonel's attentions to Mrs. Myrtle B. Platt, a former school teacher and a widow. The account is introduced with the words, "Loves Golden Dream is O'er," and deals with Col. Tucker's claim that the attentions he paid Mrs. Platt in Manila were nothing but those any army officer might have paid to any American woman.

"The Colonel's protestations hardly agree with the stories told about him and Mrs. Platt here, however, where their apparent mutual devotion furnished gossip for months," says the paper.

BALLOON FAD IS ON IN PARIS.

SEASON FOR AERONAUTICS IS AT ITS HEIGHT.

High Winds Add Zest to "Adventure, and in Some Instances Balloonists Are Driven as Far as Austria—Preparations Are Being Made for St. Louis Contest.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ballooning, like society, is enjoying a period of activity much resembling the stereotyped height of the season.

In the early part of the week, balloon trips were fast and furious, as the winds were very strong, mostly from the west and driving aeronauts as far as Austria. The trip made by Alan Hawley, with Charles Levee, from St. Cloud, resulted in a descent being made within fifteen miles of the spot where Mr. Hawley landed on a previous trip. The wind this time was from the southwest. Messrs. Hawley and Levee sailed over Brussels and passed through clouds heavily charged with electricity, where they witnessed the phenomenon of St. Elmo's fire. The descent was made in Germany, just beyond the Rhine.

The trial trip of Mr. Hawley's balloon, the St. Louis, will be made next week. This balloon has been built by Mallet, to be used at St. Louis.

Lieut. Lahm, who had a long siege of illness, had a relapse recently, but he is better now. He hopes to be able to take part in the contest at St. Louis, after all. He is still at Aumur, where he is attending the French Cavalry School. Willbur Wright is still in Paris, and he is said to be continuing negotiations for the sale of his flying machine, but nothing definite has been given out on the subject. The rumor is that the French government is likely to purchase the machine. It is also said that Henry Deubch de La Meurthe contemplates its purchase, but that is a rumor also. The most definite thing about the entire affair is the indefinite assurance that a definite statement will be made in a few weeks.

SHERIFF KIDNAPS PRISONER.

Missouri Officer Foiled in Effort to Have Requisition Honored in Iowa Resorts to Ruse.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ALBIA (Iowa) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That an Iowa requisition is [illegible] was demonstrated early this morning, when a Missouri Sheriff bodily kidnapped a prisoner out of Iowa after [illegible] Cummins had refused to honor a requisition for him.

Deputy Sheriff Hall of Columbia, Mo., came to Des Moines yesterday to seek a requisition for Granial Allison, wanted on the charge of criminal assault in Missouri. The Governor refused the petition, when the deputy sheriff worked a clever ruse. Wiring the Sheriff at Albia last night to have his prisoner waiting for him at the train, he arrived here early this morning, took the prisoner in an automobile and within a few hours they were across the Missouri line.

CHANGES ALIEN LABOR LAW.

Secretary Straus Construes Statute to Allow Admission of Foreigners in Trades Where Men Are Scarce.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One of the most important decisions in the interpretation of the alien contract law has just been made by Secretary Straus of the Department of Commerce and Labor.

It is to the effect that aliens may be imported under contract without violation of law when it can be shown that there is a scarcity of labor in the particular field for which the aliens are suited.

The specific case decided related to two lithographers who came to the United States under contract.

UNIONITE SPY BARES PINKERTON "SECRETS."

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BOISE (Idaho) June 29.—Morris Friedman, a former employé of the Pinkerton Detective Agency at Denver, who published his "adventures" and many of the confidential reports and records that passed through his hands in an attack on the agency, was a witness today in behalf of William D. Haywood. He said the Pinkertons had sent spies into many of the important unions of the Western Federation of Miners.

The call from the defense for Friedman to take the stand produced one of the sensational periods of the trial. He is a striking-looking young man with a shock of black hair and of marked Hebraic type. Heavy, thick glasses magnify his large, dark eyes, and his smooth-shaven face is very pale.

CHARLES A. SIRINGO,

[illegible] famous gun man who guards Harry Orchard constantly.

By name and occupation number he identified a dozen detectives, who succeeded in entering into the miners' unions, and he produced voluminous copies of the reports they made to the agency for transmission to the mine owners.

Friedman was a confidential official stenographer under Detective McParland, he testified, and it was part of his duty to recopy the reports of the operatives as they reached the office.

Friedman said in several instances that the detectives sent out by the agency in behalf of the mine owners managed to get themselves elected to high offices in the unions, and in a couple of instances they carried their daring roles to the extent of sharing all the hardships of real strikers and being finally deported from the country with real strikers, who went out before the militia came.

Ten feet from Friedman's chair sat George W. Redell, who, as a Pinkerton detective, worked up to leadership in the Telluride union, and, turning to him by direction of Clarence Darrow, the witness identified him. Redell smiled and touched his chest as Friedman pointed toward him.

Friedman said that one Pinkerton operative became chairman of the Strike Relief Committe at Globeville, and as such had charge of all funds and food disbursed there by the local union and general federation.

Friedman said that under instructions from his superiors at the Pinkerton agency this man first tried to beggar the federation by the lavish expenditure in behalf of the strikers, and failing in this he cut the relief down to the lowest point of stinginess, in the hope that members of the union might censure Mr. Haywood.

Friedman was twice interrupted to give way to other witnesses, and did not get beyond the identification, and a brief sketch of each operative employed in the espionage of the federation's strike operations, and the identification of several confidential reports. The latter were not read, and will not be offered in evidence until Monday morning, when Friedman will continue his testimony.

MAFIA IS OUTDONE.

Bulgarian Order Is World's Worst.

United States Government Is to Be Requested to Suppress It.

Society Is Responsible for Many Murders and Depredations.

Money Raised by Crime Is Used in Macedonian Expeditions.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There is in existence a secret society of Bulgarians, far worse than the Mafia, having organizations in every large city of the country, and with its headquarters at Granite City, Ill., according to John C. Palamaris, a Greek editor of No. 210 North Thirteenth street, St. Louis.

This society Palamaris holds responsible for hundreds of depredations and murders throughout the United States, and he will appeal to the United States government to break up the organization. Palamaris says the organization is the blackest in the world. It is known as the Kommitazis.

PRINCE FERDINAND A LEADER.

He says that Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria is one of the leading lights in the order.

"I know that this society exists, and I know positively that its headquarters are in Granite City, and its membership amounts to something like 30,000," said Palamaris today. "This organization has arms of all sorts and plenty of ammunition, and it could, if it wished, carry on depredations that would startle the world. The purpose of the society is to raise money to aid the main body in Bulgaria in fitting out expeditions to go into Macedonia to massacre and burn. Every member of the Kommitazis is required to pay monthly dues. These are sent to Bulgaria, with other sums raised through the criminal operations of the body.

COMPELLED TO PAY TRIBUTE.

"One of the favorite methods of the organization is to send threatening letters to Macedonian Greeks in the United States, ordering them to give various sums of money on penalty of their families at home being murdered by the organization. This was the case with me and several others here a short time ago.

"The shooting of C. N. Lanaris of St. Louis from ambush near Granite City, a few nights ago, well illustrates the methods used by this society.

"The kidnaping of men, women and children is one of the methods used by the society. Miss Stone, the American missionary, who a few years ago was held for ransom, was captured by members of this band. They employ the same methods in the United States that they used with Miss Stone."

"BILLY" SUNDAY TO BE SUED.

Evangelist Who Formerly Was Ball Player Fails to Appear Per Contract at Iowa Chautauqua.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DES MOINES (Iowa) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Billy" Sunday, ex-baseball player and evangelist, will find himself defendant in a suit for $5000 damages as a result of his failure to appear at the opening of the Midland Chuatauqua in this city as per contract.

The Chautauqua people announce that they will make an example of Sunday, to the end that the value of a contract between a Chautauqua association and a professional platform artist may be determined for all time. No word from Sunday had been received until his telegraphic announcement that his evangelistic engagements had compelled him to cancel all dates until July 4.

WARNED AGAINST DAN CUPID.

Teachers Trained at Expense of City Told They Are Not Expected to Marry for Ten Years.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PATERSON (N. J.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That teachers who have been trained at the expense of the city are not expected to marry for at least ten years after graduation, was the announcement solemnly made last night by President Thomas J. Reardon of the Board of Education at the commencement exercises of the graduating class of the Normal Training School here.

So many teachers in the public schools have been married within the last two years that the schools have been seriously handicapped and the Board of Education has had to go outside the city for recruits to fill the depleted ranks of teachers. It was this fact that led to the announcement.

CUPID HITS OCTOGENARIAN.

Chicago Man Over Eighty Years of Age Announces Fifth Experience With Hymen.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, June 29.—"Marriage," said Ossian Guthrie, 81 years old, last night, "is the natural state for man and woman. I am going to be married myself next Monday evening, and it will be my fifth experiment.

"If any young man desires advice from me on this subject, my best answer will be: 'I have tried it four times, and am willing to risk it once more at four-score and one.'"

GUNNING FOR MORE TAXES?

State Equalizers Running Down Rumor That We're Assessed Too Low.

An arbitrary increase in the assessed valuation of property in Southern California is said to be contemplated by the State Board of Equalization, which will sit at Sacramento from July 23 to September 30. Three members of the board—State Controller Nye, Jeff McElvaine of San Bernardino, and J. H. Scott of San Francisco—have returned to Los Angeles to complete an investigation started here several weeks ago.

Los Angeles, Riverside, Orange and San Bernardino counties are the ones most affected. Prof. Carl Plehn of Berkeley, the expert employed by the State Commission on Revenue and Taxation, is credited with the discovery that the assessed valuation prevailing in these counties is upon a much lower basis than that which exists in San Francisco and other counties in the State.

While none of the members of the State board will discuss the matter, and County Assessor Ward has shut up like a clam, it is said to be the belief of the equalizers that Los Angeles and its three sister counties pay taxes on not more than one-fourth of the real valuation, while it is claimed that many other counties pay on three-fourths of actual valuation.

It is up to Commissioner McElvaine, representing this section, to prove that there is some error in the report that has come to the board.

GIRL PILGRIMS RETURN HOME.

REAL LOVELY TIME DURING FIVE MONTHS ABROAD.

Happy, Tanned and Unchaperoned, Three Los Angeles Damsels and Daughter of Mayor of Minneapolis, Back from Journey Replete With Stirring Incidents.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Four American college girls returned today on the White Star liner Arabic from a five months' pilgrimage abroad, happy, tanned and unchaperoned.

The charming little pilgrims were Miss Ruth Haynes, daughter of Mayor J. C. Haynes of Minneapolis, and Miss G. W. Lavayea, Miss Mossbacher and Miss Clara C. Smith, all of Los Angeles.

The innocents had a great time from the very day they met in New York, February 1, until they tripped down the gangplank today, and once more touched American soil.

"Oh, yes, we will tell about that time," said Miss Smith, who volunteered to act as spokesman for the party. "It happened at Tangier. When the boat got to Tangier a storm had kicked up big seas, and we felt scared, as the tub—that is, the boat—was doing all kinds of queer antics, and the captain said he could not get up to the pier.

"Well, the next thing we knew, there was a little toy rowboat along side the tub. The little thing danced on the waves in a terrifying way, but the captain said it was Tangier in that or stay in the tub. At that, four of his Moorish sailor men picked us up in their arms and scrambled down the flimsiest kind of rope ladders, and dropped us into the arms of the Moors in the toy boat."

A visit to the Sultanic prison, near the palace, was not very interesting, but if these innocents abroad missed anything in Tangier they would like to have some one step to the front and let them know what it was. They ransacked the Sultan's palace and got a peep even into the royal harem.

PLANS BIG IRRIGATION MEET.

Executive Committee of National Congress to Gather in Chicago to Prepare for Celebration.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PALESTINE (Tex.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Chairman W. A. Beard of the Executive Committee of the fifteenth National Irrigation Congress, has issued a call for a meeting of this committee to be held in Chicago, July 6.

The congress will be held in Sacramento, September 2 to 7 and this preliminary meeting is for the purpose of laying plans that will make it national in scope and to outline a programme that will cover the interests of the entire country.

The Executive Committee members reside in many States and Territories. The call for a special meeting follows an extensive correspondence in which the move has been approved by practically the entire membership.

It is proposed to make the coming session a factor in a larger development of arid lands and the forests of the country.

SHEEP SHEARER WEALTHY.

BUTTE (Mont.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] John Cunningham, a sheep shearer of Shoshone, Wyo., who shears sheep for a "grub stake" to work his copper claims on Copper Mountain, has refused a cash offer of $125,000 for his property. Cunningham owns 160 acres of mineral ground which he located seven years ago, being the first prospector in the district. He holds out for $250,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, June [illegible]—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Three strik[illegible] phone girls—Annie Burke, [illegible] Tully and Mamie Egan—were [illegible] this morning on complaint of a [illegible] union operator, Ida Kendall, [illegible] charges that she was attacked by th[illegible]

She stayed in the store [illegible] some time as she was too fright[illegible] to go out. Late last evening [illegible] the warrants issued for the girls [illegible] they appeared before Judge Weller [illegible] morning, who set the case over for [illegible] week. The police are looking for [illegible] man, who abused the non-union [illegible] and they will make an [illegible] of him if he is captured.

ASSAULTED BY STRIKERS.

Late last night John Crowe, [illegible] union carman staying at the [illegible] Steward, a striking [illegible] Luke McGluke, a union roofer.

These two men met Crowe as he was going into a saloon across from the car barn. They began to abuse him, but being unable to make him fight, jumped on him and beat him into unconsciousness. Crowe was taken to the hospital, where it was found that he was suffering from a possible fracture of the skull, and doubt is held as to his recovery.

Detectives Charley Taylor and Bob Graham were detailed on the case and immediately arrested the offenders. On the way to the station the detectives were attacked by a mob, who tried to rescue the two men. The attack was so vicious that it became necessary for the officers to draw their revolvers and a number of shots were fired before the mob gave way. Steward and McGluke appeared before Judge Weller this morning and were held for a week pending investigation.

CAR TRACKS ARE GREASED.

Systematic greasing of the rails on the Fillmore hill from Fulton street to Hayes was indulged in yesterday, endangering the lives of all the passengers southward bound, but the police were unable to discover the offender. Several times collisions were narrowly averted.

Beginning in the early afternoon some miscreant or miscreants began putting grease or soap on the rails traversed by the north-bound cars. From Fulton street to Hayes is a very steep grade, and the cars find it a very hard pull at the best of times, but with the rails greased the ascent was impossible. Time and time again heavily-laden cars attempted the grade, only to slide back.

News of the greasing of the rails was sent to the Turk-street car barn, and thereafter inspectors were on hand at Fulton street to strew sand on the tracks before the ascent was attempted. Despite the vigilance of the inspectors, the greasing of the rails was continued industriously until midnight.

NEARLY CAUSED PANIC.

One car attempted to climb the hill with a crowd of men and women returning from the theaters, and it slid back with such lightning speed that a panic was narrowly averted. If another car had been waiting at Fulton street there would have been a collision, and probably loss of life. However, the track was clear, and the car sped along the level street until the motorman could bring it to a standstill.

After going to the expense of sending for Phillip Landau, a strike-breaker, arrested May 5 for assault to murder on the complaint of Walter Van Dervort, Judge Weller this morning dismissed the case against the man on the plea of insufficient evidence.

F. Ferguson, another strike-breaker, arrested on the same charge, on the complaint of R. Earl, also was discharged. These were among the men who defended their lives the first day of the strike.

THUG WEEPS IN COURT.

Man Who Helped Mob House Filled With Women Shows Emotion When Arraigned.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A. M. McDonald, the gentle soul who helped to mob a house filled with terrified women, and who was a member of a gang that attacked a Chutes car and tried to murder the car crew, wept copious tears when arraigned in court this morning.

Tears slopped off Andy's classic mug during the whole of his arraignment, but his co-thugs were somewhat comforted by the announcements that the notorious Union Defense League will contribute a lawyer who is not ashamed to take the case, and will pay all expenses.

This league brazenly advertises that it will pay for the defense of all persons arrested for committing outrages against United Railroads cars.

The eight ruffians indicted by the grand jury were all brought into court this morning, handcuffed, and walking two by two. Attorney Porter Ashe appeared as special prosecutor for the United Railroads.

Owing to the absence of Judge Cook, who will hear the cases, the entering of pleas was continued until July 8.

CALHOUN STANDS FIRM.

Soon Will Be no Vacancies for Strikers Seeking Re-employment as Individuals.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] This city is clinging desperately to the hope that the report is true of car strike being on the point of settlement. The report set the town wild last night. It was announced at the theaters. The audiences cheered. Some one shouted it at the ringside at a prize fight and the crowd yelled itself out of breath.

The papers pretended to be astonished this morning at the fact that Cornelius was not invited to be present when his own car strike was being settled or at least when negotiations to that end were being carried on with Calhoun. Cornelius, stung by thus being completely ignored by the other union leaders, made a statement tonight in which he said there is no prospect of the strike being settled.

What is worrying Brother Cornelius is the fact that, if the car men go to work individually as it now seems probable, it will be back to the conductors' bell for him.

Although both sides will not really tell the inside negotiations, Mr. Calhoun has not weakened or given in as may be seen by the statement issued by him to the Associated Press today. As stated heretofore in The Times, the thing that is compelling a settlement is the open rebellion of the unions against paying any more strike assessments to suport the carmen.

Mr. Calhoun's statement is as follows:

"The position of the United Railroads has changed in no particular in regard to the so-called Carmen's Union. There is not the slightest hope for the so-called carmen that this company will ever permit them to reënter its service, except as individuals. It is a fact that a large number of the former employés of this company did not desire to strike, and would long since have returned to work except for fear of bodily harm, not based on idle grounds, but upon actual threats. The most outrageous coercion has prevented these conservative men, who were formerly employed by the company, from applying as individuals for reëmployment.

"The company holds only the kindliest feeling for these old men, and has always been disposed not to hold them responsible for the strike, and to permit them as individuals to return to work on the company's new scale of wages, which is from 25 to 33 cents an hour, in accordance with years of service.

"The company recognizes no carmen in San Francisco except the men on its cars. It has more than 1000 permanent platform men now employed at 25 cents an hour, and new men are applying at an average of about twenty-five a day. There will soon be no vacancies open to the company's old employés at all. Under no circumstances will men now on the company's cars be discharged to make place for former employés.

"I received day before yesterday an application from the representatives of the former shop men, asking permission for them to come back to work, but I was compelled to answer the application with the statement that there were no longer any vacancies in the company's shops."

LAUCK AND GILLETT LEAVE.

RETURN TO SACRAMENTO.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29.—Adjt.-Gen. Lauck and the other members of Gov. Gillett's staff, with the exception of Col. Wilhelm, who, soon after the beginning of the street-car strike, established temporary headquarters in the Ferry Building, returned to Sacramento this afternoon, their presence in this city being thought no longer necessary. Col. Wilhelm will remain to keep the Governor informed regarding the situation.

CALL IT SERIOUS.

TOKIO, June 29.—Another serious report of anti-Japanese feeling in San Francisco has been received here that the city authorities have placed an embargo upon Japanese engaging in the business of intelligence agencies and have also refused them licenses of every kind, thus preventing them from engaging in any other business than that of a purely commercial character.

Should the report be confirmed it will serve to confirm the belief here that the display of anti-Japanese feeling in that city is based on racial prejudice.

ROGERS ARGUES.

APPEARS IN CALHOUN CASE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Earl Rogers of Los Angeles, made his first formal appearance in the Patrick Calhoun case today, by arguing before Judge Lawlor a motion to set aside the indictments.

His contention is that Calhoun cannot be compelled to enter a plea until Heney supplies him with that portion of the grand jury testimony which has been held back.

Rogers's reputation in Southern California caused him to be listened to with marked attention.

HENEY IS COMING.

TO GO TO CATALINA ISLAND.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Francis J. Heney will soon go South on a short vacation, to be spent on Catalina Island.

Mr. Calhoun and family will soon go North on a short vacation, to be spent at Shasta. Time is lacking for them to get any further apart.

For Heney, this vacation will be a belated honeymoon. He was married last fall, but as the graft prosecution was then in the process of launching he had no time for honeymoons.

HENEY'S TRICK EXPOSED.

Attorneys for Men Indicted Bare Device of Prosecutor to Steal Rights of Defendants.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29.—Arguments on motions to set aside indictments were concluded late this afternoon in behalf of President Calhoun, General Manager Mullally, Chief Counsel Ford and Assistant Counsel Abbott of the United Railroads, accused by the grand jury of bribing members of the Board of Supervisors.

Attorneys A. A. Moore, Stonley Moore and Earl Rogers of Los Angeles, argued for the defense, it being the first active appearance of the last named in the cases. Asst. Dist.-Atty. Heney replied for the State.

The two points chiefly disputed today were the right of the District Attorney to cause only a portion of the testimony before the grand jury to be recorded stenographically, and thus to deprive the defendants of a transcript of the most important evidence given against them, and the invasion of the constitutional rights of the defendants by subpoenaeing them to appear before the inquisitorial body.

Forty witnesses testified against the railway officials, but by direction of Mr. Heney the grand jury's stenographer, Miss L. H. Condon, took down the testimony of only twenty of them. Among the other twenty were Abraham Ruef and the seventeen Supervisors whose confessions of bribe-taking are chiefly relied upon by the prosecution for the conviction of Calhoun, Mullally, Ford and Abbott.

The object of the order excluding the stenographer from the jury room during their examination was, as agreed by Heney outside of the court some time ago, to keep the defense in ignorance of the strength of the case.

This measure of exclusion and deprivation was adopted by the Assistant District Attorney after the defendants had been subpoenaed and had refused to testify on the ground of that constitutional privilege which protects accused persons from the necessity of giving evidence which may tend to incriminate them and aid in their convicton.

The motions in these and the cases against Louis Glass, Eugene de Sabla, John Martin, Frank Drum, Mayor Schmitz and Ruef, now stand submitted and a blanket decision as to the setting aside of the indictments may be expected next Friday.

It is the understanding that at that time Judge Lawlor will announce that the first case against Glass—who as vice-president of the Pacific States Telephone Company is accused of bribing Supervisors to keep the Home Telephone Company out of San Francisco—will be called for trial the following Monday.

FLAYS WOMEN, FUR WEARERS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BELLINGHAM (Wash.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In an interview with officers of the Whatcom County Humane Society and members of the press today Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, the actress, unmercifully scored women who wear furs.

"Wearing of furs," declared Mrs. Fiske, "reveals the depth of criminal ignorance as appalling as the lack of understanding that so often tends a poor, irresponsible human being to the gallows or to prison. No woman with a spark of intelligence or humanity in her would wear furs if she knew of the unspeakable crime committed in the business of trapping.

"I once wore furs. I, like millions of others, lived in dull ignorance of what wearing furs meant. There are, of course, some skins that are obtained humanely and I hope that before long women will become enlightened on the subject of trapping and pledge themselves to wear no furs that have been obtained through prolonged torture of helpless living creatures.

CANAL IS GRAFT-FREE.

Taft Declares After Careful Investigation That no Scandal Can Be Found There.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, June 29.—"After investigation every charge which has been brought to my attention, whether apparently well founded or not, I have been unable to find a single penny of 'graft' going to any one in connection with the Isthmian Canal work."

This statement was made by Secretary Taft today when his attention was called to the statements that special accountants had been sent to the Isthmus to examine the books of the disbursing officers of the commission.

Secretary Taft answered that he had sent to the Isthmus a competent accountant to look into the methods of keeping the commissary accounts there and to prepare a new method whereby the commission would be able to ascertain better the cost of supplies and the proper price to which they should be sold to employés.

PLAN INDEPENDENT PACKERY.

Texas Cattlemen Charge Beef Trust and Railroads With Combining Against Them.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GALVESTON (Tex.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The cattlemen of Texas have declared war against the railroads and packers and will build an independent packery. The cattlemen charge the railroads and packing-houses with having combined against the cattlemen to the latter's loss of nearly $1,000,000 in claims alone within the last year, over 15,000 head of cattle having been killed in transit.

Data upon which to base claims cannot be obtained from the stock yards which are owned by the roads. The trust has reduced the price for cattle 28 per cent., while the packing-house products have been advanced 17 per cent. in ten months.

FIRE IN GLOBE.

GLOBE (Ariz.) June 29.—A spark from a fuse blowing out lighted in a celluloid film at the Alexander & Trimble automatic picture theater last night and the place was soon a mass of flames. Seventeen roomers above in the St. Elmo rooming-house had a narrow escape, and the place was completely gutted. J. M. Trimble was rescued from the burning building by Bill Thompson, badly burned about the head, face, chest, hands and legs. He was taken to the Old Dominion Hospital. Charles Alexander's cigar stand was gutted.

GETS DAMAGES AGAINST UNION.

Seattle Jury Gives Verdict for D. E. Johnson.

Allowed Thirty-five Hundred Dollars Solace.

Suspended in Violation of Typographical Laws.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A jury in the Federal Court last night returned a verdict for the plaintiff in the case of Don E. Johnson vs. the Seattle Typographical Union No. 202, awarding Johnson judgment for $3500 damages.

Johnson alleged that in October, 1905, he was forced to quit work as night foreman on the Seattle Times because he violated some rule of the union, and being unable after that to obtain employment, he was forced to go to Los Angeles, where it became necessary for him to accept employment in an open-shop office. He charged the local union with conspiracy and recounted the injuries which had resulted to him from the humility to which he was subjected. He asked for $30,000 damages from the union.

In the defense, the Typographical Union denied that there was any conspiracy to oust Johnson from the union and declared that Johnson's suspension, while not countenanced by the International Union, was due to a misconstruction by the Seattle Typographical Union of the laws of the international body and that the Seattle union, having acted without malice, could not properly be held for damages.

JOHNSON EXPECTS TO COLLECT JUDGMENT.

Don E. Johnson, the former union printer, who was yesterday awarded $3500 damages against the Seattle Typographical Union, No. 202, for unlawful suspension in October, 1905, and who has been employed on the Los Angeles Times since that time as linotype operator and manager of The Times' Linotype School, last night made the following statement:

"My suspension from the Seattle Typographical Union, which resulted in the loss of my position as night foreman of the Seattle Times, was the culmination of a number of trials held against me in the Seattle Union, in all of which the union found me guilty. I was first charged with un-union-like conduct in discharging a man for 'padding' his 'strings' and making false reports of the amount of work he had done. Because I refused to try to prove the man guilty when on trial myself—a thing not required by the rules of the international union, and manifestly difficult to do in a union office—I was found guilty and fined a large sum, something like $100.

"This finding against me the International Union promptly reversed. The local union then found me guilty of contempt for refusing to meet, unattended, a committee of the union, every member of which committee I proved to be prejudiced against me. I was again fined and censured. On appeal to the International Union the finding of the Seattle local was again reversed.

"Soon after, the Seattle union brought another charge against me of working below the scale when I charged an employer $2.50 for less than an hour's work, the employer at the same timt paying another union man $6 per day to do the work which he was wholly incompetent to perform. When placed on trial I stated that I had nothing but contempt for the instigators of the action brought against me. For this remark I was found guilty of contempt and fined a large sum, though on the original charge I was found not guilty but was put to a great deal of cost and inconvenience. On appeal, the International Union reversed this decision, practically ruling that I had a right as an American citizen to hold anyone in contempt and that I would therein not necessarily be committing a non-union-like act.

"The local union at this time was in a frenzy to get me out of the city and punish me for my winning appeals to the international body. To cap the climax, they therefore, in violation of both local and international union law, suspended me for thirty days without a trial and without going to the formality of filing new charges.

"The International Union, as soon as it could obtain the facts in the matter, ordered my immediate reinstatement with salary and expenses while I was laid off. In the meantime, however, the Seattle Times, being unable to dispense with the services of a foreman was compelled to discharge me and fill my place as they had no assurance as to when I might be permitted to resume my position.

"Owing to the many acts of persecution against me, all other employers of printers in Seattle were afraid to employ me in any capacity. I therefore, came to Los Angeles and secured pleasant and profitable employment on The Times which I found to be a happy asylum for those who cannot conscientiously work under present union conditions.

"I evidently proved all of these statements to the satisfaction of the Seattle Federal jury. The verdict is no surprise to me. I expect to collect every dollar of the judgment, inasmuch as I sued individual members of the union who were active in the conspiracy as well as the union and the court having held that the union is a partnership and the individual members thereof may be held liable for damages resulting from an act of the whole partnership."

POLITICAL SECRET IS OUT.

Action of Illinois Man in Declining Appointment After Once Accepting It Is Explained.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After a month's mysterious silence, which caused considerable embarrassment to Senator Shelby M. Cullom and President Roosevelt, what is said to be the true story of the reason why Lieut.-Gov. Lawrence Y. Sherman accepted an appointment from the President at the solicitation of the Senator, as a member of the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission, and, after his commission had been signed, declined it on the ostensible ground that a special session of the Illinois Legislature was to be held in the fall, has reached Washington.

It is said, on reliable authority, that a declination of Senator S. C. Pemberton of Coles county to abide by an agreement to resign the office of president pro tempore of the Senate on the last day of the regular session, to make way for Senator Orville F. Berry of Hancock county, and Mr. Sherman's loyalty to Berry are the real reasons why Sherman did not take the place.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Good old June! The month can usually be depended upon to do her duty. This year she has done more than that. She has restored to Chicago the confidence it had lost in its weather. She has been a compensation for the spring which Chicago didn't have. She has been more nearly normal than any June for years. The normal average temperature for the month is 66.3. This year the average has been 65.7. Maximum temperature today was 72 degrees; minimum, 64 degrees.

ORDER TAKEN FROM TOWN.

A Vigilance Committee of five, headed by the Mayor of Glen Ellyn, has given Dr. E. G. Highly just five days to disappear over the horizon of that thriving village. If he declines, he faces a coat of tar and feathers, a ride on a rail, or some other primitive but efficient means of speeding an undesirable citizen on his way, at the hands of the enraged inhabitants. Specifically, Dr. Highley is charged with forcing his attentions on Clara Wimpress, the twenty-year-old daughter of Charles Wimpress, a well-to-do farmer, three miles from Glen Ellyn, who is studying at Wheaton. Dr. Highley says he defies the warning, and refuses to leave the town, where he has resided for twenty years. He still has four days of grace.

OPERATORS NOT TO STRIKE.

Chicago telegraph operators will not strike tomorrow. This is the decision reached after a meeting of the Grievance Committee of the Commercial Telegraphers. Dissatisfaction over the discharge of W. M. Main, an old employé of the Western Union, threatened for a time today to precipitate a strike in Chicago. Main received a list of the non-union men working in San Francisco. He was discharged on the ground that he made a union bulletin of the list on the company's time.

ANARCHISTS IN FOR LIFE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ALBION (Ill.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Life terms in the State penitentiary were imposed by a jury today upon David and Albert Kellems, father and son, found guilty of the murder last December of Sheriff Alexander Compton. The death penalty would have been imposed, the jury said, but for the fact that the evidence showed that the father had taught his son to be an anarchist. An unusual feature of the trial was the fact that the men, who were believed friendless and were known to be without funds, were defended by eminent lawyers from a neighboring county. The money to pay these lawyers is alleged to have been raised by anarchists in Chicago.

FALLS ON NEEDLES—DIES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DES MOINES (Iowa) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Charles Short of Birmingham carried a darning needle in his vest today, and fell, the long steel piercing his heart and causing almost instant death. Short was in the habit of carying the needle in his upper pocket. It was loose, and while walking down the main street of the town he slipped on a banana peel, throwing him headlong on his stomach.

MILLIONAIRE TOZER DROWNED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. PAUL (Minn.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Frederick M. Tozer, millionaire lumberman, was accidentally drowned this afternoon in Balsam Lake, near St. Croix Falls, Wis. Mr. Tozer was sailing with several companions, when their boat overturned. Tozer was drowned before assistance could reach him from the shore.

GIVES NEGROES EQUAL CHANCE.

GOV. HOKE SMITH SUGGESTS NEW FRANCHISE PLAN.

In His Inaugural Address, Chief Executive of Georgia Favors Dividing Voters Into Six Classes, Without Reference to Race or Color. Claims Racial Differences.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ATLANTA (Ga.) June 29.—Hoke Smith was inaugurated Governor of Georgia today. Gov. Smith delivered his inaugural address from a platform erected in the open air.

He urged political reforms and advocated increased power for the State Railroad Commission. As to the elective franchise, he suggested placing voters into six classes, as follows, without reference to race or color:

"First—All persons who served in any war of the United States, the Confederate States or the State of Georgia.

"Second—Their lawful descendants.

"Third—All persons of good character who understand the duties of obligations of citizenship; or,

"Fourth—Can read and write correctly in English any paragraph of the Federal or State Constitution.

"Fifth—Owners of forty acres of land on which they live; or,

"Sixth—Owners of $500 worth of taxable property in the State.

"Any plan for the negroes which fails to recognize the difference between the white and black races will fail. The honest student of history knows that the negro had full opportunity for generations to develop before the days of slavery; that the negro race was improved by slavery, and that the majority of the negroes in this State have ceased to improve since slavery. Few have been helped by books. All have been helped who have been taught or made to work.

"The negro child should be taught manual labor and how to live. The negro teacher should be selected less by book than by character examination. Racial differences cannot be overcome by misguided philanthropists.

"Superiority does not justify cruelty. The man who breaks the law to punish a criminal is himself a criminal. There is no place in Georgia for riots and mobs. It is the duty of the Governor to exhaust the power of his office to enforce the law and to prevent lynching, and I shall perform this duty. I recognize the duty of the white man to be absolutely just to the negro."

TWO BANDITS CAPTURED.

Montana Posse Engages in Battle With "Hole in the Wall" Gang Members and Wounds One.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HELENA (Mont.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A special from Billings tells of a battle between Sheriff James T. Webb and a deputy and two members of the notorious "Hole in the Wall" gang of cattle thieves and train robbers who for years have terrorized Southern Montana and Northern Wyoming.

The battle resulted in the capture of two thieves, one being wounded, and the recovery of eight horses which they had stolen.

The Sheriff started in pursuit of the men with a posse, and picked up as guide Charles Hancock.

By cutting across the country they got ahead of the thieves, and upon their appearance commanded them to halt. Both sides began firing, which resulted in the wounding of one man, whose name is unknown, but who is supposed to be a former convict.

The other is Sam Ackerman, well known in gambling circles. It is expected the injured man will recover. He steadfastly refused to give his name.

CHILDREN ARE MADE OFFICERS.

Unique Plan Adopted by Iowa Chief of Police to Prevent Premature Fourth Celebration.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

COUNCIL BLUFFS (Iowa) June 29.—Chief of Police Richmond has struck upon a unique scheme to prevent the premature celebration of Independence Day by deputizing boys and girls to act as special police.

A long line of youngsters lined up yesterday and received appointments. Each was required to take the regular oath of a patrolman and the youngsters were assigned to specific districts.

The novelty of having the power of arrest over the boy in the next block has appealed greatly to the youngsters, who are showing their appreciation by keeping a sharp lookout on every boy who purchases fireworks, quite to the disgust of the dealers.

WASHINGTON.

FEAR OF WAR CHANGES PLAN.

Idea of Naval Base on Kiska Island Abandoned.

Belief That Station Could Not Be Defended.

Could Be Used by Enemy for Attacking Coast.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] For many months the Navy Department has been planning to establish a great coaling station and naval base at Kiska Island, in the Aleutian chain, which extends into the Pacific Ocean southwest from Alaska.

It is learned now that the project has been abandoned, due, it is believed, to the difficulty of defending such a station in the event of war with Japan.

When Congress last winter largely increased the appropriation for the navy's coal and coaling stations, it was understood that a generous share of the funds would be used for pushing the work of construction at Kiska, and it was even suggested that the station would be supplied with wireless telegraphy apparatus, which could be used in connection with that already installed in Alaska. It now appears that the opinion of the members of the general board has changed and no secret is made of the fact that the Kiska Island coaling station project has been abandoned.

Although officers of the department will not discuss the strategy problems involved in the Kiska site, it is believed that the problem of rendering the station defensible in time of war was one of the considerations which led to the change of front in regard to this project. The island is remote from every other fortified station of the army or navy, and it would, in case of a Far Eastern war, be the object of prompt attack by the enemy. To defend it would be a matter of the utmost necessity, as its possession by the enemy would afford him a valuable base with which to conduct an attack on the Pacific Coast cities.

REVENUE FROM IMMIGRANTS.

United States Government's Receipts Largely to Be Increased by Law Doubling Head-tax.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Changes in the immigration laws that should bring more than $2,000,000 annually into the United States treasury go into effect next Monday.

This sum represents the doubling of the head tax and an excess above the $2,500,000 that must be collected to defray the expenses of the Immigration Bureau of the Department of Commerce and Labor.

That this sum of $4,500,000 is likely to be annually collected at the rate of $4 on each immigrant, is based on the figures so far this year, which show the unprecedented influx of 1,100,000 aliens at this port.

All this comes out of the immigrant, who will pay the increase in the head tax when he purchases his ticket.

M'CLURE'S IS GOLDBRICKED.

Runs Two Installments of Ellen Terry's Autobiography, Previously Published in England.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, June 29.—Announcement was made today that the much advertised Ellen Terry autobiography of which installments appeared in the June and July numbers of McClure's Magazine, has been discontinued on the ground that a great deal of the matter appearing in the biography was contributed by Miss Terry in exactly the same words to the New Review, an English monthly, in 1901. There were to have been several installments.

Ellery Sedgewick, managing editor of McClure's Magazine in making the announcement, is quoted as saying:

"We had received three installments of the work before we made the discovery. We had put two installments in type and had had cuts made. These could not be stopped. We were getting ready for the third installment which was to be accompanied by many illustrations. After some debate we decided that we could not afford to give a lot of dead matter to our readers."

INDIAN KILLED BY POSSE.

Redskin Fights to the Death When Attempt Is Made to Eject Him from Reservation.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) June 29.—News was received today of the killing of an Apache Indian on the McDowell reservation, twenty-eight miles from here. The reservation is under the direction of Superintendent Goodman of the Phoenix Indian School and in the personal charge of W. H. Gill, missionary and subagent.

For some offense Goodman instructed Gill to force the Indian, now dead, off the reservation. A posse attempted to force the order, when the recalcitrant fired, wounding an Indian.

The posse returned the fire and the recalcitrant was killed. The Coroner, deputy sheriff, surgeon and others have gone to McDowell.

SPY BARES "SECRET"

whether Friedman entered the employ of the Pinkertons as a spy in behalf of the labor organizations, or his decision to make public his knowledge and the documents he took was reached after he was employed.

Aside from the introduction of Morris Friedman, the defense also offered a large amount of testimony covering Orchard's credibility, the dispute as to the time Orchard sold his interest in the Hercules mine, the treatment of Jack Simpkins, while a prisoner in the Idaho "bull pen," another motive for the murder of Detective Lyte Gregory, the whipping of men friendly to the strikers at Cripple Creek, and the circumstances under which the processes of the civil courts at Telluride were disregarded by the military authorities.

GIVE ORCHARD ALIBI.

Two witnesses swore that on the day the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mill was destroyed, Harry Orchard was at Mullen, which is eighteen miles from Wardner. They located him in a poker game, and one of them—Patrick McHale, a barkeper—swore that he sat in the game.

By various means, including a showing that McHale is a gambler, the prosecution endeavored to break down this testimony.

J. H. Ramey, who formerly operated stage lines in North Idaho, testified that Orchard came to him on May 2, 1899, and offered to sell him his interest in the Hercules mine for $400. Orchard testified that he finally sold for mine in February, 1897.

Frank Hough, who said he was sent to the "bull pen" in Northern Idaho in 1899, for reasons that he never knew, described conditions in that military prison and told how negro soldiers required Jack Simpkins to stand for six hours in the sun of a July day, refusing him water, and kept him up by menacing him with their bayonets.

Another cruelty witness was William Amole, once a watchman in the Portland mine, which acceded to the demands of the strikers at Cripple Creek and continued to work with union men. In picturesque language and real good humor, Amole told how, after he was first driven from the district, he sneaked back to get his furniture, only to be rounded up by the militia.

The soldiers released him, but he was set upon by a body of armed, masked men of the Citizens' Alliance. He testified that they took him six miles outside the town, and there cruelly whipped him with revolver butts and a black snake.

JUDGE ON STAND.

Judge Thereon Stevens, now of Goldfield, Nev., but once of the District Court of Telluride, traced the history of the relations between the courts and the soldiers in the troublous days of the strike. He testified that when the deportees tried to use the injunction to get back to their homes, the Governor returned the district to the control of martial law, and that the writ of habeas corpus and subsequent order for arrest for its disobedience against the military authorities in the case of Charles H. Moyer, were both disregarded by Gen. Sherman Bell and Capt. Bulkley Wells. The judge thought things had been very quiet in Telluride district, but under cross-examination said that some men had been killed in an attack on the Smuggler-Union mine, and that, subsequently, Arthur Collins, manager of the mine, was murdered.

There was also a showing that Detective Lyte Gregory had beaten up officers of the United Mine Workers, and the defense explained that this was offered as the foundation for the claim that somebody besides the federation might have desired his death.

DAY'S PROCEEDINGS IN HAYWOOD CASE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BOISE (Idaho) June 29.—The Haywood trial proceedings began today with the introduction of Dominick Flynn of Mullan, Idaho, who testified that he was a merchant. Flynn declared that Harry Orchard on April 29, 1899, the day of the explosion at the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mine, was playing poker in his place. This was the second witness to testify that Orchard was playing poker in Mullan the day he says he helped light the fuses under the mill at Wardner, eighteen miles distant. The poker game lasted from noon until 4 p.m., Flynn said.

He never saw Orchard after that day. Flynn declared he had not volunteered the information as to Orchard's whereabouts. Some time after his arrest a man came to him and asked if it was true that Orchard played poker in his store, April 29. One of the men who played poker with Orchard was named Patrick McHale. Flynn said he had spoken to McHale about the matter since Orchard's arrest.

McHale, who is a bartender in Mullan, followed Flynn on the stand. He said he played poker with Orchard in Flynn's cigar store in the month of April of 1899, and had never seen him since.

On cross-examination McHale said he gambled a great deal.

Frank Hough, a member of the Western Federation of Miners from Wallace, Idaho, who was in the "bull pen" in 1899, was then called to testify as to the conditions in the military prison. He said Jack Simpkins, accused of complicity in the Steunenberg murder, was a fellow-prisoner.

TO SHOW SIMPKINS'S MOTIVE.

The prosecution objected to this testimony as to the "bull pen," but it was allowed upon the statement of Mr. Darrow that it was intended to show the motive of Simpkins for acting with Orhard, both men, it being alleged, having a personal grudge against Gov. Steunenberg.

Hough said he was now a painter and paper-hanger. Some times he tended bar. He met Orchard at Wallace, Idaho, in 1905. Orhard said he had just come from Alaska. He also said that if it had not been for Steunenberg he would have been a rich man.

Hough said he was arrested in the general round-up. When he saw Orchard in Wallace, in 1905, he also saw Simpkins there, but had no talk with him.

James H. Ramey, a former stage driver, and rancher in the Coeur d'Alenes, was the next witness. He knew Orchard quite well, and met him on the road between Gem and Wallace on May 2, 1899, three days after the Bunker Hill and Sullivan explosion.

"He told me I was the man he wanted to see," said Ramey.

"He said he wanted to sell his one-sixteenth interest in the Hercules mine and get out of the country before the soldiers were in. He wanted $400 for his interest, saying the Hercules would make a mint some day."

Under cross-examination Ramey said that Orchard was riding horseback when he saw him.

"Did he tell you he had given a title to his property to a man named Cordova more than a year before this time?" asked Senator Borah.

"No, sir, I did not ask him about the title. I turned the proposition down cold."

Asked how he remembered the conversation Ramey said:

"When they struck it rich in the mine I thought a lot about the offer I had turned down."

Disposing of its witnesses in rapid succession, the defense next called James A. Baker of Slocan, B. C., a miner and prospector. Baker has been a member of the Western Federation of Miners since 1893, and from 1901 to 1905, was a member of the executive board of British Columbia. He was in Denver during a large part of the Cripple Creek strike and assisted in running the affairs of the organization while Moyer and Haywood were in jail.

Baker said he went to Cripple Creek in December, 1903, to establish a union store. He was arrested by the militia and taken to the commanding officer. When he told what his mission was, the officer said they didn't want any union stores in the district and advised him to take the first train out of town.

"What did you do?" asked Darrow.

"I took it," said Baker.

There was no cross-examination.

William Amole of Denver, who was a watchman at the Portland mine, Cripple Creek, up to the time the union miners were deported following the Independence depot affair, was called to give his experience during the deportation period. He said he was arrested and released several times and was gagged by t womasked men. He was cross-examined briefly.

"INFORMER" ON STAND.

Something of a sensation was caused by the calling of the next witness, Morris Friedman, who has written a book which he claims is an exposé of the Pinkerton Detective Agency's methods.

Friedman says he is now a newspaper correspondent. He worked as a stenographer in a Pinkerton office in Denver during the Cripple Creek strike, doing practically all the work of James McPartland, who has worked up the case against the Western Federation of Miners. Friedman said he became thoroughly familiar with the office work and methods.

Asked as to the placing of Pinkerton operatives in labor unions Friedman said a man named Crane became secretary of the Smeltermen's Union at Colorado City and was also chairman of the Strike Committee. Other operatives who were connected with unions in Colorado were Joseph F. Gadden, Charles H. Rhymer, George W. Riddell, P. B. Bailey, Cummings Lutlow, and Conibear. Friedman declared he handled most of the daily reports from these men for a year and a half.

Riddell was in the courtroom as Friedman began his testimony. He was identified by the witness.

Two of the Pinkertons were deported with the rest of the union men from Cripple Creek and Telluride.

"Do you know a Pinkerton named Londoner?" asked Darrow.

"Yes, sir."

"Was he a member of theu nion?"

"No, sir, Londoner was supposed to be a capitalist and trying to find out the secrets of Mr. Heinze."

The reference to the Montana mining millionaire called out a wave of laughter.

Friedman next told of an operative named A. W. Gratias, who was chairman of the Miners' Relief Committee at Globeville, just outside Denver.

"At first Gratias was instructed by McParland to make the relief bills as large as possible," said the witness, "in order to drain the Western Federation's treasury. This did not seem to work, so Gratias was told to cut down the bills to the lowest notch, so as to dissatisfy the men on strike."

The reports from the operatives in the various unions usually covered all that had transpired at union meetings, what the miners were doing in private, where they went in the evenings, etc. Friedman said he had copies of a number of these reports.

It was part of his duty to copy these and mail them to the agency's clients. Friedman said the Pinkertons spied on both the Western Federation of Miners and the United Mine Workers. The witness had not brought the copies of the reports to court with him, and was withdrawn until the afternoon session, making way for James Mooney of Missouri.

Mooney said he was a farmer, and also ran a coal mine.

"You do both?" queried Darrow.

"Yes, sir,; I'm what they call in Missouri a 'Jim Crow' farmer and a 'one-horse coal operator.'"

As a member of the national board of the United Mine Workers, Mooney said he was called to the Trinidad coal fields of Colorado, where there was a strike.

LYTE GREGORY DID IT.

"Our object," said Mr. Darrow, addressing the court, "is to show that Lyte Gregory of Denver, whom Orchard says he killed, had to do solely with this coal strike, and was in no way working against the Western Federation of Miners."

Mooney said non-union miners were being brought to Trinidad, and it was generally reported that Gregory and the detective agency with which he was connected was in charge of this work.

Chris Evans, national statistician of the United Mine Workers, was called to the stand after recess, and testified that while he was in Trinidad, Colo., he, too, was beaten up.

The prosecution challenged this testimony as immaterial and irrelevant, but Judge Wood allowed it on the statement of counsel that they expected to show that Lyte Gregory was responsible for the assault.

Evans was followed by John I. Tierney of Denver, a newspaper correspondent. Tierney said he was at Trinidad during the troubles there. He saw Gregory at that place. He described Gregory as a man 6 feet 2 inches in height, and weighing 260 pounds. Mooney had declared that the man who assaulted him was an exceptionally large man.

Next on the stand was Judge Thereon Stevens, former judge of the District Court of Colorado at Ouray. Judge Stevens is now a resident of Goldfield, Nev. Asked the purposes of Judge Stevens's testimony, Attorney Richardson replied that it was that peaceful citizens existed in the Telluride district of Colorado up to the time the militia came in and the deportation of the miners was begun.

Judge Stevens told of an injunction having been issued against the Miners' Union ordering a boycott of some merchants in the Telluride country. So far as he knew the injunction was obeyed and there was no interference of any sort with the court.

The witness said he had refused to grant an injunction to the deporters so long as the militia was in the district. After the soldiers were withdrawn the Citizens' Alliance continued to deport miners and then Judge Stevens granted an injunction to half a hundred of the deported men, allowing them to remain.

"What was done then?" asked Attorney Richardson.

"The Governor of Colorado proclaimed the district in a state of insurrection and sent the soldiers back. The deported men were not allowed to return.

ORDERED BELL'S ARREST.

Judge Stevens next told of having granted a writ of habeas corpus to Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners when he was arrested at Ouray. Gen. Sherman Bell and Capt. Bulkley Wells of the militia, had Moyer in charge and refused absolutely to produce him in court. Judge Stevens said he then issued a writ for the arrest of Bell and Wells. They both refused to surrender themselves.

Wells at this time was vice-president and general manager of the Smuggler-Union mine and a prominent officer of the Mine Owners' Association.

Senator Borah, on cross-examination asked Judge Stevens if he were in Telluride when an attack was made on the Smuggler-Union mine and several men were killed.

"Yes."

"A man named St. John and others accused of taking part in the attack were brought before you and you released them?"

"Yes."

"Wells succeeded Arthur Collins as manager of the mine, did he not?"

"Yes."

"And Collins was assassinated by being shot through a window at his house?"

"Yes."

Judge Stevens said he had never known either Moyer or Haywood. The Federal Court finally issued a writ of habeas corpus and the day it was issued martial law was declared off and Moyer released.

"Were you at Telluride when nineteen union men were killed—smothered to death in the Smuggler-Union mine?" asked Attorney Richardson on re-direct examination.

"No, sir; but I heard of it."

Judge Stevens was excused and Morris Friedman recalled.

Attorney Darrow spent some time with the identifying of half a score of reports which Friedman declared had been handled by him at Pinkerton detective headquarters in Denver. In order to give Judge Wood and counsel for the prosecution time to read the reports before passing upon them an early adjournment was taken until Monday at 10 o'clock a.m.

Vessel Is Towed from Pribiloff Group of Islands to Unalaska, When It Is Released and Japs Warned to Keep Away from Seal Grounds. Smugglers Caught on Border.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The steamer Homer, which arrived today from the Pribiloff Islands, brought word of the capture of twenty-nine Japanese seal poacherers at St. Paul Island of the Pribiloff group, by the United States revenue cutter Perry.

The Japanese sealing schooner was anchored outside the three-mile limit, but the poachers were pulling for the beach in five boats when discovered.

An officer and a prize crew from the Perry boarded the Japanese schooner, while another officer and crew in the Perry's steam cutter chased after the boats. The Japanese, each of whom was armed and provided with six rounds of ammunition, surrendered to the government officers, and were taken aboard the schooner, which was towed by the Perry to Unalaska. There were no skins found in the small boats, and only twelve on the schooner. As the schooner was outside the three-mile limit, and as no evidence of poaching in the way of skins was found in the boats, it was decided to give the Japanese another chance before confiscating the schooner.

The officers of the Perry were morally certain of the Japs' intention to poach within the forbidden limit, but as no skins were found in the boats, the Japs were sternly warned and released.

OPEN MEETINGS URGED.

Mining Federation Delegates Discuss Plan of Holding All Union Meetings in Public.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DENVER (Colo.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The plan of holding open meetings was the most important topic of discussion at the meeting of the Western Federation of Miners here today.

Joseph Cannon of Bisbee, Ariz., said that if the Federation had always held open meetings there would be "no trial now going on at Boise."

The entire afternoon session of the convention was consumed in considering that part of the acting president's report which refers to an attack made on the Miners' Magazine and its editor, John M. O'Neill. During the discussion some of the members took occasion to condemn the executive board of the Federation for supporting the course of the magazine in its promulgation of Socialism.

The discussion of Acting President Mahoney's report, which includes the matter of whether or not the Western Federation of Miners shall continue to affiliate with the Industrial Workers of the World, was temporarily side-tracked today and all pending motions in regard to it were referred to a special committee. After an hour's discussion it was decided to hold a session of the convention tomorrow.

DEAD CONVICT WARNS YOUTHS.

In Gallows' Shadow Story of Life Is Written.

Regret Expressed for Lost Opportunities.

Young Men on Downward Path Urged to Reform.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

JEFFERSON CITY (Mo.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An autobiography entitled "A Warning—A True Story of a Wasted Life," written in his cell by George Ryan, who was executed, with two other convicts, here Friday for participation in the penitentiary outbreak in 1905 which cost the lives of two prison officials and that of one of the convicts, has been sent to Warden Hall.

Ryan said that his object in preparing the history of his life was a warning to young men who have started on the wrong road, and for the purpose of trying to induce them to forego their evil ways and lead upright and honorable lives.

Ryan, as he was known to the penitentiary authorities, was reared in St. Louis. His parents and sister live there now, and he has withheld his right name in order to shield them.

Ryan says he believed in the parole system for juvenile offenders, and for any one, for that matter, save the most hardened criminals. Prison life only makes the criminal more hardened, he says, and ready to commit another breach of the law as soon as the opportunity offers, after his release.

TELLS OF VAIN REGRETS.

His autobiography comprising about 8000 words, traces his career from the first falsehood he ever told up to the last one, of his life. In part he says:

"My object in going so minutely into my whole life, particularly the early part, is to show in what insidious forms the first atom of moral depravity penetrates into the innermost recesses of the mind of a boy, who is gradually (by his own actions) losing the confidence of his father. Looking back on this stage of my past, I realise regretfully that there lies one of my many lost opportunities, as I could have done nothing so pleasing my father as opening my heart to him would have proved.

"I desire to say for the express benefit of any young man who may chance to peruse this history of a advice of his father and mother he will live to rue the day with a bitterness beyond conjecture, for there is no physical pain imaginable with which the pain of an anguished heart, deserted and forsaken, can compare."

Ryan says that gambling, more than drink, because he imbibed little, led to his downfall. He lost at gaming tables money honestly earned, then stole to recuperate his fortunes. His offenses gradually grew in magnitude until he held up a saloon in Kansas City and was sentenced to the penitentiary for eleven years. At the time he was hanged he was only 26 years old.

Ryan's statement was written unaided, his acquaintances and prison officials say. He received a public school education in St. Louis and in early youth spent time at the public library, reading the best works of fiction and American biography.

NO PEACE FOR LAW-BREAKERS.

In concluding his statement he wrote:

"I stand today the living example to which the slightest departure from the path of honesty will inevitably lead. Not in one case, not in ten cases, but in every case, is the reward the same. Not one moment of peace or satisfaction is there to be obtained from such a life.

"Setting aside the question of right and morals there is absolutely nothing in the life of an outlaw to envy. After a while money ceases to have any value in his eyes. He looks upon the public as his banker and cunning as his check book, good for any amount. All of his life is spent vainly trying to escape justice.

"He lives so hard he ceases to enjoy life. He knows that some day that, unless he is shot first, this justice will set to work, the trap will be laid and he will be the surprised instead of the surpriser in a crime. That is why he raises himself from a pilow, if he has one, at night, and listens to a strange tread passing his door; that is why he broods suspiciously for days upon a jesting remark or an unusual movement of a tried comrade or the broken mutterings of his closest friend sleeping by his side.

"Should the perusal of this paper lead one young man to a better life, I shall be entirely satisfied.

"I close."

COHAN SAVES BRIDE'S KISSES.

New York Actor Weds, but Is Stingy With Osculatory Salutes of His New-Made Wife.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Cheese it old pal, you're stealing my stuff," cried George M. Cohan, at Freehold, N. J., when Justice of the Peace J. S. White started to kiss the bride, who was Miss Agnes Nolan, a member of Mr. Cohan's company for several seasons.

"But, you know it's the custom."

"Yes I'm at the head of the history class when it comes to the chaste salute dope," interrupted the Yankee Doodle Boy, "but I'm saying this. You can call me a stingy thing if you like, but take this and run out and buy yourself some candy."

He slipped the justice of the peace a bill that caused a horse to run away in front of the building.

"He's the candy kid, you know," remarked Sam Harris, who was carrying the rice and old shoes and holding the hand of the bride's sister, Miss Alice Nolan, who went along to see that Agnes didn't get stage fright.

The justice of the peace was the most nervous member of the party.

"Now if you would like to run through the form before hand—"

"Never mind the stage setting, we want to get a glass of milk and an ear of corn and then hurry back to the show shop. This is payday, you know. Here take another bill and buy your wife some candy."

"SMILING JOE" RECOVERS.

Plucky Little Patient Who Underwent Heroic Treatment Is Released from Bamboo Frame.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Almost everybody has heard of "Smiling Joe," the plucky little patient at the Sea Breeze Home at Coney Island.

A year ago he was taken there and strapped to a bamboo frame, so that his little spine might have rest, while nourishing food and the salt air fought away the tuberculosis germs that had made him a cripple since his birth.

Today "Smiling Joe" is well. He has been released from the bamboo frame. He runs and romps and plays in the sand. His old pathetic smile now is a happy grin.

President Roosevelt visited Sea Breese last year and lingered long beside the cot of "Smiling Joe." The little fellow could hardly flutter his thin hand, but his brave smile was there, as he looked up at the man with big teeth and glasses that suddenly grew foggy. The President had to turn away and wipe his eyes when he looked down on that smile.

Joseph Harron is six years old. He was born afflicted with "bone consumption," and there didn't seem to be much hope for him. When the weather was cool, he was wrapped in blankets. But he was never taken indoors, except on very disagreeable nights.

FLINT SEEKS MORE HELP.

Los Angeles Postmaster Asks for Twenty Additional Clerks and Fifteen More Carriers.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] M. F. Flint, Postmaster of Los Angeles, had a long talk with Assistant Postmaster-General Hitchcock today in reference to additional help in the Los Angeles office.

He asked for twenty additional clerks and fifteen additional carriers, which will probably be granted. It is expected that an order for the additional clerks will be issued immediately, and that five extra carriers will be put on October 1, five September 1, and five November 1. There will also be additional rural carriers put in the vicinity of Los Angeles.

Postmaster Flint also talked with Hitchcock about the proposed automobile mail-wagon service in Los Angeles. The department favors the scheme, but it will not install the service until an investigation is made. Several cities are after this sort of service. If the officials decide that it is a good scheme, Los Angeles will be one of the first cities in which it will be installed.

REFUGEE BOYS ON OUTING.

Youths from San Francisco Camps Flock to Country to Get Close to Nature.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN JOSE, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] On the train from San Francisco this morning there were over 150 boys from the refugee camps of that city who were being taken out to the country for periods of various lengths in order that they may enjoy the freedom of an out-of-door life.

The lads were all dressed in khaki uniform, and were prepared to get close to nature.

In charge of Bertha M. Rice eighteen newsboys from the Columbia Theater refugee camp came down to go to the boys' outing farm near Saratoga, where they will spend a month in romping and roaming over the hills.

All of these boys—none over 14—have earned the money for their railroad tickets and uniforms. On Monday thirty-five more lads, who are to go to the outing farm, will come down from San Francisco.

It is the confidence of the people in Peruna that sells Peruna.

No advertising can make any medicine as popular as Peruna has become, unless the medicine has some intrinsic value.

All over the land men and women are recommending Peruna to each other.

They are doing this in spite of the prejudices against patent medicines, in spite of the physicians to the contrary.

No Definite Plan Thus Far Is Formulated.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Sir Henry Campbell Bannerman's House of Lords problem, the sal of which was heralded with a flourish of ram's horn blowing on opening day of the present session, has not created the sensation it was expected to do.

The Premier has played his part of ly champion diligently, but the importance attached to the resolution, which was passed by a majority is that it might be supposed represent the main issue upon which government intends to appeal to country at the next general election.

Considering how long the mountain been rumbling, the mouse produced very small and insignificant one. at all calculated to intimidate or the House of Lords. The proposal was distasteful to many members of the government. But, having introduced the subject in the King's speech, Premier was obliged to bring it forward at some period of the session.

The Premier's resolution has had respectful hearing lasting three days, it does not formulate a plan. His supporters in the press say it sufficient at the present juncture, the time for launching a definite being just before the next general election.

as the government is determined to be hustled into a dissolution that not be in the near future, the pith the proposal is that any party with a of members of the lower at any given time shall have the power of the imperial Parliament. To an impartial observer of the mentary machine, the real need present time is restraint rather extension of the power of the of Commons. The House has lost its power of initiative revision.

BEVERIDGE SEES CHAMBER FIGHT.

SENATAOR VIEWS ATTEMPT TO UNSEAT CLEMENCEAU.

Makes Sarcastic Comment on Extreme Rudeness of Premier in Not Resigning When Southerners Want Him to So Badly—Date of, His Marriage Not Yet Set.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Senator Beveridge of Indiana had an opportunity to see the French Chamber of Deputies in its liveliest mood yesterday. He arrived just as one Deputy was crawling over the backs of several colleagues in order to get at another, while in front of the Ministerial Deputy, Lasies stood enjoying a little private seance in apostrophizing Premier Clemenceau, who, with one eye half-closed, regarded his enemy with inattentive ease.

It was a noisy rather than dangerous chamber, for the government emerged from it with a good majority. The Indiana Senator remained until nearly midnight, saying he felt that he had seen enough fighting to last him for the rest of his life.

"My impression," he said to the correspondent, "is that it is rather indelicate, not to say rude, for M. Clemenceau to remain in power when these little men from the South want him to go so much. You feel they think he is ill-bred to remain. I never before saw a parliamentary assembly containing so much compressed wrath. It was a sight to be remembered."

Senator Beveridge, who is to take an automobile tour through the chateau districts, says the date of his marriage to Miss Eddy of Chicago has not yet been settled. Augustus Eddy, the bride-to-be's father, says there is a sufficient number of Indianans in Paris to call a "Hoosier committee" to settle the date.

"I am not anxious to hurry the occasion," he added. "I hate to lose the girl, but, like the darky on his deathbed, I guess I've got to be resigned."

KAISER TO VISIT ENGLAND.

King Edward Plans to Bring About Better Relations Between Germany and Great Britain.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] I have now received most positive information that the Kaiser will visit King Edward at Windsor toward the end of the year, thus bringing to a brilliant end a year notable for the number of royal visits.

Emperor William is expected toward the middle of November, when the King and Queen will, as usual, be in residence at Windsor Castle, but the visit will be brief and it will last less than a week. The Kaiser certainly will be invited to luncheon at the Guild Hall, and, as his visit is a state one, and as every effort will be made on both sides to make it the means of producing a more cordial feeling between the two countries, it may be expected that the invitation will be accepted.

Nothing has yet been settled as to the details of the visit, but I understand the King will take every opportunity to make it a memorable occasion to his nephew. Not only will family differences be removed, but the King will bring his great gifts of tactfulness and diplomacy into service so as to make the visit the direct inauguration of better relations between the two powers.

The usual apparatus for doing honor to illustrious visitors, a naval review at Spithead, a military review at Aldershot, a pageant through the streets of London and an array of imposing social functions, will be utilized to this great end.

DINE WITH INDIAN PRINCE.

American Women Attend Functions of Dusky Potentate, to Disgust of French Social Leaders.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "The American women seem to have been suddenly stricken with color blindness," laughed a witty French countess as she observed the Maharajah of Karpurthala bending over a lovely Yankee girl in the grand dining-room of the Hotel Ritz.

Truth to tell, the most fashionable American women here have been the dusky Maharajah's guests at the exquisite dinners he is giving at the Hotel Ritz. At the latest he entertained Mrs. Charles Carroll, Mrs. and Miss Marshall, Princess Radzivill and Frank Otis.

The French society women have turned the cold shoulder toward the Indian potentate, whom they regard as a semi-barbarian, and they recall their sisters from across the sea formerly showed the greatest repugnance to meeting French colonists whose complexions have been burnished by the African sun.

DESIRE CLEMENCEAU'S FALL.

Vatican Prelates Are Disappointed by Vote of Confidence in French Ministry.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ROME, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It is generally admitted in Vatican circles that great disappointment was felt over the vote of confidence given in the French Parliament to the Clemenceau Ministry, as it was believed here that the wine growers would cause a change of Cabinet.

Vatican prelates in a position to know are of the opinion that, even if an adverse vote had been cast against the Ministry, Clemenceau would not have resigned, but would have insisted on a dissolution of the chambers and a general election.

In the opinion of many of the prelates here who have followed recent French events closely, especially in the provinces, the French people are getting tired of the Clemenceau régime of war, led by the present Ministry against the church, and of the inevitable effects of the separation law.

LONDON, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The present season is more than ever a season for the Anglo-Americans. There is not a doubt that they are to the fore in everything that pertains to ordinary social amusements or to charitable functions. Mrs. Anthony Drexel has had lunches and dinners chiefly in honor of the Grand Duke Boris.

Mrs. Potter Palmer gave a small dinner last night, and several, both of Mrs. McDonald's and Mrs. Potter Palmer's guests, went on to Lady Paget's in Belgrave Square, who had a dinner and a small, informal dance.

At Hampton House, Mrs. Potter Palmer is again reigning this year. There will be several dinners in the near future, one of which, on July 5, will be followed by a concert, and another smaller one on July 10.

They were up about an hour, and coming down at Hook Farm, Bromley, about eight miles from London.

"This is my first and last time in a balloon without a gripping cord," said Hawley. "We passed through all sorts of weather, lightning, thunder and a terrible storm. We started up slowly, and had two quiet drops, then the rain let up and we shot up to about 8000 feet. It was absolutely impossible to get an equilibrium. We came down very swiftly and banged into a tree. We had not a bag of ballast left."

TEXAS CATTLE STARVING.

Die by Thousands in Lower Pecos District from Lack of Grass—Sheep Also Dying.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FT. WORTH (Tex.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Thousands of cattle are dying in the Devil's River and lower Pecos district of the Texas range country, according to John Dorian of Brownwood, who has just returned from an eight weeks' trip in that section.

He says that ground is almost absolutely barren of any kind of vegetation and that many of the live oak trees haven't leafed out this year. It has been so long since a good rain fell that the region is in a deplorable condition.

Mr. Dorian says one ranchman informed him that he had skinned 5000 head of cattle which had died from starvation. The sheepmen killed most of the spring crop of lambs in order to allow the ewes to live.

Dorian says in one place he drove across a four-section pasture where a local rain had fallen, and it looked like a wheat field, so green did it appear in contrast to the surrounding country.

DENVER, June 29.—[Exclusivve Dispatch.] When Mrs. Augustus Edwards Hawkins of No. 1211 Kalamath street found that her husband had been lured from his home by a siren's song she chose to seek death by saturating her feet with gasoline and applying a match.

The jealous woman followed her husband to the Union Depot and discovered that he met a woman there and boarded a train for the races. Then after he had come home she tried the awful death, but her agony was so great she screamed.

Hawkins extinguished the flames, but she said to him: "Aren't you glad you killed me? Now marry that woman. You mortgaged the house to get money for her while I went hungry."

Mrs. Hawkins will die.

HILL PLANS BIG PROJECT.

Control of Burlington Road Is Contemplated.

Great Northern to Buy Most of Stock Issue.

Northern Pacific to Control St. Paul System.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Instead of indicating the failure of some pet project of James J. Hill, the disbanding of the Burlington Company, chartered in 1901, is merely preliminary to the carrying out of the greatest railway project of the "Emperor of the Northwest," according to reports in local railway circles.

The substance of these reports is that Hill and the majority of stockholders of the Northern Pacific have decided that it is inadvisable to continue the arrangement by which the Great Northern and Northern Pacific jointly own virtually all the stock of the Burlington. Therefore, the Northern Pacific will sell all its Burlington stock to the Great Northern. The proceeds of the sale will be used by the Northern Pacific in part to purchase a controlling interest in the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul.

It is known to be the plan of the Interstate Commerce Commission to make a thorough investigation of the relations of the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Burlington railroads when the proceedings against the Harriman system are completed.

ORDERS PASSES CANCELED.

Missouri Attorney-General Tells Roads to Recall Free Transportation While Fare Law Is Tested.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A general demand has been made by Herbert S. Hadley, Attorney-General, that railroads of Missouri cancel their State passes.

The interstate commerce law prohibits the issuing of State passes, but there are thousands of State passes in the hands of persons other than employés of the railroads.

The amount of money lost to the railroads because of passes is variously estimated at from 5 per cent. upward, and this does not include passes to employés. The Attorney-General intends that these passes shall not interfere with the fair ninety days' test of the 2-cent fare law now in progress.

In a letter received by attorneys of the various railroads, the Attorney-General says:

"The pass is as much a discrimination as the rebate is unlawful and unjustifiable. A railroad as a common carrier should be open to all alike, on fair and equal terms."

NO CAR GRAFTING "RING."

Southern Pacific Finds, After Investigation That Bribery of Employees Was on Small Scale.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29.—Vice-President and General Manager E. E. Calvin of the Southern Pacific Company announces that a thorough investigation following reports that employés had privately organized a system for expediting movements of freight over Southern Pacific lines in return for bribes, has been completed, and shows that there is no such organization.

In the great rush of business to the Coast, hundreds of cars at the eastern foot of the Sierra are made up into new and shorter trains to take over the mountains. A few shippers, impatient at the delay, who have been sending out men to find out about their cars, bribed one of the yardmasters at Sparks, Nev., who, in making up trains could give preference to certain cars instead of following the rule that cars should be taken out in the order of their arrival.

The practice was not carried on extensively, but was confined to a few shippers. There is no "ring" of employés, and the guilty yardmaster has been summarily discharged.

Vice President Calvin stated that the congested conditions along the Ogden route have been greatly improved and the delay at Sparks, due largely to the heavy washouts of the spring and the fact that the Southern Pacific had to handle all of the Salt Lake road's business for two months, will from now on be practically obviated.

FEDERAL SUPREMACY URGED.

Speaker at Banquet of Grocers Alludes to State's Rights as Poetic Fiction.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, June 29.—Federal supremacy in all judicial matters involving rights of shippers and common carriers was strongly advocated last night by Levy Mayer at the banquet of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association.

"What I would like to see," he said, "is the wiping out of these imaginary boundaries called State lines, so far as the control of shipments of the common carriers is concerned. There are now in this country something like 2,000,000 freight cars, owned by 1000 railroads, and handling 1,000,000,000,000 shipments each year, each having its separate bill of lading.

"In the forty-five States and Territories through which these pass, there are 138 Federal judges, 274 judges of the highest State courts and more than 3000 judges of the lower courts of record, who daily are making conflicting railroad decisions, depending upon inconsistent local and State laws. The situation almost terrifies, especially when we take into consideration the possible legislation in the separate Legislatures and Congress.

"I deny that it is a question of centralization of government or of that poetic fiction—State's rights. In trade and commerce these lines are arbitrary, imaginary and should not exist. They must be wiped out or complications will arise worse than the blotting out of a mere political theory, which has no place in the trade and commerce of the nation."

ST. LOUIS, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain system reports that, for the fiscal year, ending on June 30, it will show the best record for earnings and improvements in its history.

The gross and net earnings will attain higher totals than ever before, notwithstanding large increases in wages and heavy expenditures, aggregating $3,000,000 or more, for general betterments.

Advance statements, estimating the earnings and expenses of the present month, indicate that the gross earnings will amount to about $48,500,000, and the net earnings to about $16,500,000.

The company will show an increase of about $4,000,000 in the gross earnings, and of about $2,200,000 in the net earnings.

There will be shown a reduction of approximately 1 per cent., the ratio of operating expenses to gross earnings.

LAYS TRACKS IN STOCKTON.

Western Pacific Finishes Putting Down Line in City Limits and Now Goes Northward.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, June 29.—[Exclu- Dispatch.] The Western Pacific Railroad has finished track laying inside of the city limits, and will now put down the tracks northward toward Sacramento.

The work through the city was slow, owing to a portion of the streets having to be torn up, but once out in the country the rails will be placed in position at a much faster rate. The grading has been completed, and sufficient material to build the line to the capital city is stored on the line of the Tesla road, which was purchased by the Western Pacific.

A track-laying machine is being used with good results. It handles the ties and rails at a fast rate, where there are no obstructions. Construction trains have been made up, and the busy scenes will be enacted north of this city for days to come. Two large locomotives arrived today from the East for the Western Pacific, and will be used in addition to those now in service.

It is expected that trains will be in operation between this city and Oroville before the end of the present year.

ASHEVILLE (N. C.) June 29.—Judge Pritchard, in the United States Court here today, enjoined the Railroad Commissioners of this State from enforcing the new reduced rate law, pending a further hearing upon the petitions of the Southern Railway and the stockholders of the Atlantic Coast line.

MUST RESIGN OR BE FIRED.

Sam Schenck Certain to Be Ousted from Office.

Sergt. Sparkes May Also Be Relieved from Duty.

Action of Drunken Commissioner Causes a Storm.

The resignation of Samuel Schenck as a member of the Board of Police Commissioners is said to be in the hands of Mayor Harper. The Mayor would neither deny nor confirm the report last night, but whether Schenck has resigned or not, his days as a member of the board are numbered. He must either resign or be removed for the reason that he has done more to disgrace the administration of Mayor Harper than anything that has transpired since the Mayor assumed office. There is one excuse for Schenck's having illegally arrested Bradner W. Lee and Kenneth Preuss and thrown them into jail Friday night. Schenck was drunk; that tells the whole story. He has been called upon in his official capacity to try members of the police force for drunkenness, and is said to have voted to punish such members. Now that he, in a drunken frenzy, has brought disgrace upon the entire department, it is impossible that he can retain his office. Schenck must go, if the Mayor is to continue to deserve the respect and confidence of those whose good opinion is worth having.

Another man whose removal would vastly improve the efficiency of the police department and who throughout the Schenck outrage proved himself unfitted for the position which he holds, is Desk Sergeant George Sparkes. Mayor Harper is said to be enraged over the almost cowardly manner in which Sparkes did the bidding of a drunken police commissioner and then reported to the Mayor what led the latter to believe that that commissioner was not intoxicated and that the two prominent citizens, who had been illegally arrested, were under the influence of liquor, when in fact the very opposite was true. Sparkes stated last night that he did not know that any of the persons concerned were under the influence of liquor, yet his position is such that, in the absence of higher officials, he is the executive head of the police department.

Sparkes possesses a "yellow streak" of such magnitude that it has frequently been commented upon by other members of the department. He has had long experience as a policeman, and is one of the kind who never does anything. Had a good man been on duty in his place when Schenck, the drunken commissioner, caused the arrest of two citizens for no cause whatever, Schenck would have been detained and his victims released. Instead, Sparkes fearing the consequences of Schenck's anger, did his bidding and thereby probably laid himself liable to a suit for damages for false imprisonment to say nothing of the displeasure of the Mayor and Board of Police Commissioners.

IN HIDING ALL DAY.

Schenck spent the day yesterday hiding out, fearful of facing the Mayor, fearful of facing the public. During the entire day, officers under the direction of Mayor Harper searched the city for him. He was not at his business address, in the Union Trust building. He was not at his home, No. 1922 Hobart boulevard. A woman answered the telephone when calls were made at the Schenck residence, and to all inquiries she replied that the commissioner and his wife had taken the train for San Francisco early Saturday, and that they would probably be away for a month.

This was not the truth. Late yesterday afternoon the Mayor's secretary, a warm friend of Schenck, found him, just where is not certain, but somewhere in the tenderloin district. His condition was still such that it was not deemed best to have him face his friends, and he was taken to Turkish bath establishment presumably for the night. Politicians of the Schenck class showed every disposition to shield him, and if they have their way he will not only remain in office, but will brazenly seek to justify his drunken actions.

CONDEMNED EVERYWHERE.

At the City Hall, the opinion prevailed that Mayor Harper was postponing action in the matter long enough to give Commissioner Schenck a chance to file his resignation. If this resignation is not forthcoming, it is believed that there will be an enforced vacancy on the Police Commission.

Schenck dreaded to face the exposure he knew was certain. On every street corner indignant business men were talking of the commissioner's insult to the young womanhood of Los Angeles. His friends tried to make excuses for the commissioner's condition on the false ground that he had not touched a drop for a year past. They tried to shift the blame upon Bradner W. Lee, whose word has never been questioned. They tried everything but refute the accusation brought by Kenneth Pruess that Schenck, a police commissioner, supposed to be one of the chief representatives of law and order, should stand on a street corner like a gutter masher and before a policeman and street loungers should make insulting remarks about an innocent young woman who happened to be passing by.

MAYOR MUCH CONCERNED.

Mayor Harper seemed to take the affair to heart. He held conferences with the members of the Police Commission during the day and seemed anxious to secure all the information possible regarding the case.

"Well, I suppose you want the name of the next Police Commissioner," said the Mayor in a disconsolate tone to a reporter yesterday afternoon. The remark was intended as a pleasantry, but it showed only too well what subject was uppermost in Harper's mind, and it boded no good for Schenck.

"The first thing I heard of the trouble," continued the Mayor, "was when Mr. Blach called me up and told me that Bradner Lee and Kenneth Preuss had been arrested. I wondered what the trouble could be, and called up the desk sergeant. He told me that both Lee and Preuss were drunk, and that Schenck was not drunk. He further stated that both men had created a disturbance, and had been booked on charges of disturbing the peace. Then Dr. Quint called me up. He said that Schenck had been drinking heavily, and that he was rasing h—ll. I told him to tell Schenck to come to the 'phone. Schenck told me that both Lee and Preuss were drunk, and that he had arrested them. I asked him if he wasn't drunk. He denied that he had touched a drop. He denied that he had offered to insult any one.

"I told him he had better go back to the tanks and see if he could not straighten things out. He called me up again and offered to meet me and prove to me that he was not drunk. I was too sleepy to consider such a proposition then, but now I wish I had gone downtown to see him. When he called up again he said that the younger man would not be quieted, and that he was afraid to let him out for fear he would fight.

"When I heard the men had been released, I called Mr. Lee to the 'phone. I asked him if he had been drinking. He said that all he had had was a glass of lemonade. I asked him if Schenck was drunk. He replied that the commissioner was under the influence of liquor. I asked him not to take any action in the case until he had talked to me, and he said he would not. Mr. Lee left for Coronado this morning and will be back Monday. I will then take up the case with him. In the meantime I want to see Schenck, if it is possible for me to get him.

"As I have said, I do not want to take any action in this case until I have talked with Schenck. One feature of the case that I do not like was the statement made by the desk sergeant, Sparkes. When I first called up he told me that Schenck was sober and that the two men were drunk. When I called him up later, he said that he was not positive, but that Schenck might have been drinking a good deal, but that he was not drunk. He said that the two men, Lee and Preuss, were not intoxicated, but that the tanks might have sobered them."

SPARKES CONDEMNED.

The action of Sparkes, who, as desk sergeant, officiated at the arrest of Attorney Lee, is condemned by members of the Los Angeles bar, as well as by his superiors at the Police Station. Attorney Lee had a right to demand bail for his client. Preuss had been arrested on a simple disturbance of the peace charge. Ten dollars is the ordinary bail for this offense. By Schenck's orders no bail was permitted, and Preuss was held the same as a murderer. When Attorney Lee, asserting his right as an attorney, asked for bail, Schenck then ordered his arrest. Sergt. Sparkes, according to his later report to the Mayor, could not help but recognize the fact that Schenck was under the influence of liquor, yet with the fear of losing his job or incurring the disfavor of the commissioner he caused the arrest of Attorney Lee and had him searched and thrown in the tanks with fifty or more gutter drunkards.

Attorney Fleming, Deputy District-Attorney at the Police Station, announced his willingness to prosecute Schenck to the limit.

"His actions have disgraced the city of Los Angeles and its controlling officers," said Attorney Fleming. "To think that our wives and daughters cannot walk the streets at night, even with escorts, without being subject to the insults of a man like this. It would have been bad enough if the remark had ben made by a hoodlum of the gutter, but it is beyond my comprehension how a man like Schenck, holding the office he does, should stand on the corner and make remarks about young women."

"Let a citizen come into this office and file information against this man Schenck, and even though it be only a drunk charge, I will issue a warrant for his arrest," said Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Ford yesterday. "Any information received at this office will secure a complaint, charging intoxication, battery or disturbing the peace."

LEE WILL PROSECUTE.

Attorney Bradner W. Lee made the following statement yesterday morning before leaving for Coronado:

"I will punish this man Schenck for this outrage. He is an official, and supposed to behave himself. He was intoxicated Friday night, and while in that condition used his authority to commit these outrages. How the police officers could stand about the station, seeing this man's condition, and yet act under his orders, is a mystery to me. I shall prosecute him criminally in the Police Court. I shall prefer charges against him with the Commission, and file a damage suit for false arrest. Then his conduct as an official will be brought to the notice of the grand jury. Nothing can turn me from my purpose."

METCALF SOON TO TELL PLANS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Secretary of the Navy Metcalf, who left Washington this morning for the Pacific Coast, on a combination official trip and vacation, said that by the time he reached San Francisco he would be able to state whether any additional warships will be sent to the Pacific.

The most probable change in the immediate future is the recall from Asiatic waters for the Pacific Coast of the armored cruiser division, consulting of the West Virginia, the Colorado, the Maryland and the Pennsylvania.

BOYCOTT THREATENED.

Washington Officials so Construe Japanese Address to American Business Men.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Reading between the lines of the statement issued by the Japanese Chamber of Commerce, assembled at Tokio directed to President Roosevelt and also to the American Chambers of Commerce, the officials in Washington see clearly the implied threat of a boycott against American goods entering Japan.

The boycott declared by Chinese merchants against American products two years ago in resentment of the treatment accorded Chinese of the better class entering America in the course of their travels around the world, was productive of better conditions, for the administration exerted all of its power to ameliorate the rigors of the exclusion laws and to facilitate the entry of Chinese merchants and students. Therefore, it is assumed the Japanese merchants have decided to have recourse to the same method of showing their resentment against the treatment accorded their people in San Francisco.

They have, however, first served notice of their intention on the American interests, so as to afford them an opportunity to avert the boycott by bringing pressure to bear upon the merchants of the Pacific Coast, now supposedly in need of eastern assistance.

MANHUNTERS ARE AT WORK.

Sheriffs' Posses From Four Counties Continue to Search for Yosemite Stage Robber.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FRESNO, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Sheriff Chittenden stated tonight that in all probability the lone bandit that robbed Yosemite stages last Monday would show up shortly near North Forks. The last seen of the man he was heading for that section.

Sheriff Proudy of Mariposa county, Sheriff Swaine of Merced and Sheriff Johns of Madera county are working personally on the case with deputies. Sheriff Chittenden of Fresno county has two deputies in the field. The forces are working together, each party keeping in touch with the others. According to the theory of the man hunters an attempt will be made by the bandit to break through the cordon at North Forks. An excellent description of the man is now in the hands of the officers. Some apprehension is felt that he will succeed in getting twenty miles north of Shaves and catch the Mono Pass. If the bandit succeeds in doing this an escape through Mono Pass to Nevada county could be easily effected.

It is now believed that the bandit cached some provisions in the mountains before the stage robbery. With these supplies he will not have to appear to get further supplies for some time.

Eyeglasses Not Necessary

Eyesight Can be Strengthened, and Most Forms of Diseased Eyes Successfully Treated Without Cutting or Drugging.

That the eyes can be strengthened so that eyeglasses can be dispensed with in many cases has been proven beyond a doubt by the testimony of hundreds of people who publicly claim that their eyesight has been restored by that wonderful little instrument called "Actina." "Actina" also relieves sore and Granulated Lids, Iritis, etc., and removes Cataracts, without cutting or drugging. Over seventy-five thousand "Actinas" have been sold; therefore the Actina treatment is not an experiment, but is reliable. The following letters are but samples of hundreds we receive.

Mr. S. M. Walker, corner Carolina and Palmetto sts., Los Angeles, Calif., writes: "About two years ago my sight began to fail rapidly. I consulted so-called scientific oculists and had special glasses made, but all to no avail. I bought an Actina and in less than thirty days threw away my glasses. Thanks to Actina I can read or write now for hours every day. I would not be without it for any amount of money."

Mrs. Charles Longstreet, No. 210 W. 14th St., New York City, writes: "It gives me great pleasure to recommend Actina. Having suffered much with my eyes neither any treatment nor glasses availed, I was induced to give Actina a trial, and after a few weeks' use of Actina, I am able to read or write without that intense pain. My eyes are now so strong that I can use them freely."

E. R. Holbrook, Deputy County Clerk, Fairfax, Va., writes: "'Actina' has cured my eyes so that I can do without glasses. I very seldom have headache now, and can study up to eleven o'clock after a hard day's work at the office."

"Actina" can be used by old and young with perfect safety. Every member of the family can use the one "Actina" for any form of disease of the Eye, Ear, Throat or Head. One will last for years, and is always ready for use. "Actina" will be sent on trial postpaid.

If you will send your name and address to the Actina Appliance Co., Dept. 89N, 811 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo., you will receive, absolutely FREE a valuable book—Prof. Wilson's Treatise on Disease.

JAP SMUGGLERS CAUGHT.

Many Little Brown Men Are Captured While Trying to Slip into States from Canada.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Within a few days at least forty Japanese have been caught smuggling into the United States through Whatcom county. In one seizure sixteen of the Asiatics were taken, and officers of the Immigration Department are patrolling the international border hourly, expecting to arrest Japanese who have stolen across the line.

For months the brown foreigners have been worrying the immigration office north of Bellingham, and it has just been discovered that the Japs have reached Bellingham by making wide detours. Sixteen were seized at Ferndale and none had the necessary papers.

It is believed here that, baffled in their attempts to cross the Mexican border, the invaders are trying to get on from the north with a rush. Evidently they are taken in charge by Japanese agents as soon as they get a few miles past the boundary line. Few of them have money and it is believed they are contract laborers.

HOME DAMAGED BY FIRE.

Midnight Blaze at Magnolia Avenue House Damages the Building and Furniture.

The house of C. F. Hamilton at No. 1015 Magnolia avenue was partially destroyed by fire last night at midnight.

It started from the explosion of a gasoline heater in the kitchen on the first floor. The flames followed up a vent pipe and did the chief damage in the second story and in the roof.

Mrs. Hamilton ran upstairs and rescued a 9-year-old daughter, who was asleep.

Much damage was caused by water. The estimated loss is $5000 on the building and $7000 on the furniture.

A Wonderful Exhibition and Extraordinary Sale of $10,000 Worth of Finest African Ostrich Plumes

The Exhibition

An exhibition and sale of $10,000 worth of the finest African ostrich plumes. These feathers were not made for special sale purposes, but are the finest quality of stock and the richest colorings; all have long flues and that soft, supple effect. The exhibition on display in our north windows and in our showrooms is certain to attract thousands who no doubt will take advantage of this opportunity to become familiar with the methods of feather production.

All the new street and evening shades decreed for fall—brown, navy, emerald green, bronze, old rose, garnet, pearl gray, mauve, ciel, pink, etc., as well as black and white.

The Special Sale

We're going to make this sale the greatest ever held in Los Angeles, one that you'll remember for many days. We're going to save you fully ONE-THIRD TO ONE-HALF ON EVERY PURCHASE, and that, too, in the face of a great scarcity of stock and steady advance in price for the coming season. Fashion dictates that ostrich plumes will be more popular than ever in the fall, so make the best of this opportunity to secure highest grade goods at a very low figure.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

GIRLS WILL HAVE NEW QUARTERS.

SCHOOL PRINCIPAL PURCHASES TWENTY ACRES.

Pays Sixty-three Thousand Dollars for Land South of Oneonta Park. Fruit Association's Vice-President Accused of Defrauding—Statement of Burlington's President.

Office of The Times, No. 28 S. Raymond ave.

PASADENA, June 29.—Twenty acres just south of Oneonta Park were transferred yesterday to the Huntington Hall School for Girls for the reported price of $63,000. The sale was made through the William R. Staats Company. This property formerly belonged to H. E. Huntington. It overlooks the San Gabriel Valley and is one of the finest pieces of land near Los Angeles. It is understood that Miss Florence Housie, principal of the Huntington Hall School will at once erect a handsome building, and that it will be ready for occupancy at the beginning of the school year of 1908.

BURLINGTON PRESIDENT SPEAKS

"There is nothing more to the story of the cancellation of the lease held by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway Company from the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad Company than convenience of the office force," said George B. Harris, president of the railway concerned, tonight at his Pasadena residence. Mr. Harris continued:

"Under the lease from the Burlington and Quincy Railroad to the Burlington Railway Company no stocks or bonds or securities in any shape were ever issued, and as the leasing company never had any relations with the public and after consideration by the people concerned never would have there was no use in duplicating reports and other office business. The cancellation of this lease by mutual agreement of the parties concerned does not foreshadow any new railroad programme by James J. Hill, who owns a majority of the Burlington stock, nor is it made necessary by any rulings of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The leasing company, the Burlington Railway, was organized for the purpose that never materialized and it is now useless to discuss that feature as no stocks were ever issued and the public is not concerned to the extent of a dollar. On July 1, the Burlington Railroad will resume control of its road and that is all there is to it. The dispatch in The Times of yesterday is correct in every detail and I can only add thereto that no stocks or bonds were ever issued by the leasing company."

Mr. Harris arrived in Pasadena Wednesday and is visiting with his family. His presence here is made necessary by the serious illness of his wife's mother, Mrs. M. L. Pitts, who, after a lingering illness of many years' standing, seems about to slip over the divide. He is a unique figure in railway circles, having entered the service at the age of 11 years and has worked himself up to the presidency of one of the greatest railway systems of the United States. He will remain in Pasadena for some time.

FORMER CHIEF ARRESTED.

One of the amusing incidents of a campaign of reform occurred yesterday when former Chief of Police W. W. Freeman, appeared in Judge McDonald's court to tell his honor why he did not have a little bell on his bicycle. Freeman is now the proprietor of Freeman's Detective Agency and Protective Patrol. When he was arrested, he did not take the matter seriously and neglected to appear in court at the proper hour. Judge McDonald sent for him and demanded an explanation. Freeman said that he had recently lost a part of his bell and supposed the part remaining made enough noise to satisfy the law. The court thought otherwise and Freeman paid $1.

NEWS NOTES.

Under the auspices of the Anti-Saloon League, "Stainless Flag Day" will be celebrated in all the Protestant churches of this city today. A temperance mass meeting will be held in the Baptist Church at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Playa Del Rey is the place selected by the local Salvation Army for its children's outing on July 9.

The Home Telephone Company has installed a new switchboard which greatly facilitates business with Los Angeles.

On behalf of the Santa Fé, Attorney E. W. Camp yesterday paid over, under protest, the disputed taxes covering the land rented to the Barber Asphalt Company, and several lumber concerns. The city claims the right to collect about $2000 in taxes from the lands and the railroad maintains that they are part of its right of way and included in the assessment made and confirmed by the board of equalization. This case has been in court for considerable time, and the city officials claim a victory in the payment, under protest or otherwise. They say the courts were about to affirm the right of the city to tax these lands.

With the arrival of the cars of the Pacific fruit express, which will take the place of the Armour company, dissatisfaction is expressed by the shippers of citrus fruit. The new cars will hold 409 boxes as against 384 boxes in the old cars, but the shippers say that this gain in holding capacity has been made at the expense of the space needed for ice tanks.

NAVAL MILITIA PLANS.

Grounds in Readiness at Venice for the Encampment of the Divisions.

VENICE, June 29.—Tomorrow the first two divisions of the naval militia of California will arrive at Venice, where the annual encampment takes place from June 30 to July 12. The Third Division, stationed at San Diego, under command of Lieut. D. M. Stewart, will arrive by steamer. The Los Angeles Division of Engineers will arrive in camp Sunday. In the absence of Lieut. Woodbine, who has gone north to join Capt. Bauer on the cruise south on the Alert, Ensign George E. Link will be in command.

Lieut.-Commander Ray Costerisan will be in charge of Camp Gillett at Venice until the arrival of the Alert, on July 3. Officers headquarters have been built on the cricket grounds, together with mess quarters and two great brick ovens. Everything is in readiness for the arrival of the troops from the North, who will come on July 3, under command of Capt. George W. Bauer.

The officers of the U.S.S. Alert are: Capt. George W. Bauer, commander; Lieut. George E. Kammerer, executive officer; Lieut. William Speck, engineer; Lieut. T. B. W. Leland, surgeon; Lieut. H. Pierce Smith, navigator; Lieut. C. C. Dennis, paymaster.

CANAL CITY RIPPLES.

The subject of Miss Mabelle Biggart's sunshine sermon at the auditorium Sunday morning will be "The Ministry of Sympathy."

The circulation of the petition for the disincorporation election continued this evening and at 8 o'clock 226 signatures had been secured. Registration Clerk Brown was on the beach, ready to add the names to the register of any who would be entitled to vote at the election, when it is called.

SAY FINANCES ARE O.K.

Ocean Park City Officers State That Report of Records in Bad Condition is Wrong.

OCEAN PARK, June 29.—The rumor has been industriously circulating during the past few days to the effect that there was something wrong with the status of the city's finances. The statement was to the effect that the sum of $12,000 had been expended and the records did not show where it had gone, or to what account it should be applied. This discovery was understood to have been made in the preparation of the financial statement of the city, which is due July 1.

When seen this evening and asked as to the truth of the statement, City Clerk Plez James said the rumored discrepancy was absolutely false and without foundation in fact. He said he was at work on his financial exhibit, which would show $45,000 in the treasury and every cent properly accounted for. He said there was no discrepancy of any sort and no trouble of any kind in making a balance. City Treasurer Dallugge made the same statement.

BIG CALL TO CHURCH.

Beach churchgoers are called upon to keep their eyes on Pasko. Rev. E. W. Pasko of the Methodist Church occupies a half-page in the local newspapers today inviting the public to turn out tomorrow and listen to his sermon on "Civic Righteousness and Civic Unrighteousness." This method of drawing a crowd to the churches is an innovation in religious life at the beach and in the expectation that something of a sensational nature may develop it would not be surprising if the front seats would all be occupied tomorrow.

RELIEVED OF STAR.

Lewis Jacobs, member of the local police force, has been relieved of his star for the period of one month. And thereby hangs a tale. Jacobs is supposed to have been relieved of duty for insubordination, in refusing to obey the commands of Capt. Mills; but according to C. L. Foster, who is at the head of the department, Jacobs's action in connection with the passing of a bogus $3 gold piece is responsible for his relief from duty. The presence of the coin was reported to the police and Jacobs found the young man who was attempting to "shove" it. Jacobs examined the token and pronounced it O. K., and so abiding was his faith in its genuineness that he took the piece into a Venice store and secured good money in exchange for it, handing the genuine coin to the man who had tried to pass the bogus shiner. Jacobs was to call and redeem the coin, but before he did so the merchant had passed it out to an innocent customer and the incident reached the ears of the government's secret service men, who have been busy trying to discover the coin, with the hope of running down the counterfeiters. But meanwhile, the man who originally had the spurious coin is among the missing.

OCEAN PARK POINTS.

D. Donohue has completed the installation of a $12,000 ice manufacturing plant on Marine street, and will at once begin to turn out ten tons of ice per day.

W. E. Devore and family have gone to the Lake Tahoe country, where they expect to pass several weeks in the enjoyment of an outing.

G. W. Glazier has arrived here from Salem, Mass., with a purpose to go into business and become a permanent resident of the beach.

M. D. Katz and family have arrived at the seashore and will pass the summer season here.

W. P. O'Meara and family are here from Salt Lake City and will pass the summer by the sea.

J. A. Harper and family of El Paso, Tex., have come to the beach for the summer season.

Alexander Burness and family are here from San Bernardino and will spend some time on Navy street.

A. F. Wehrle and family of Denver have come to the seashore for the summer and are at home on Kinney street.

SANTA MONICA.

SANTA MONICA, June 29.—The building permits issued during the week represented $10,000 worth of new work. This raised the aggregation of the month's permits to $94,500. Among the structures just started is a $5000 residence for Felix Peano in The Palisades.

M. Phipps has arrived here from the East at the request of the City Council, and will make an expert examination of the situation, with a view to the preparation of plans for the installation of the Dittler asceptic sewer system. The plant is to cost approximately $25,000, but if the company's plans are not accepted the plans and inspection are to cost $1500.

Ocean avenue, which was recently graded and oiled will be reopened to travel tomorrow, it having this evening been accepted by the City Engineer and Street Superintendent. The street had been traveled for about a month since the improvement was finished, but as the work had not been accepted the contractor closed the street a week ago. There was some trouble over the grade, it being alleged that after the grade had been made, the street railway company changed the grades of its tracks. The closing of the street followed, pending the acceptance of the completed contract.

SAN PEDRO NOW HAS TROUBLES.

CITY TREASURER THREATENED WITH INJUNCTION SUIT.

Property Owners Declare Officials of Municipality Are Holding Office Illegally and May Tie Up Salaries and Improvements Until Courts Give Decision—Man Rescued.

SAN PEDO, June 29.—Opponents of the present city administration declare their intention of testing the validity of last year's election by which San Pedro became a city of the fifth class. The recent action of the Trustees in reopening saloons on Sundays is the primary cause of the action.

Today a communication was served upon City Treasurer Joseph A. Weldt, which stated that if he should pay out any city money under the present administration an injunction suit would be filed. The communication was signed by John T. Gaffey, Henry C. Downing, V. C. Allen, M. L. Campbell, A. P. Fere, O. C. Abbott, Sr., P. E. Berry, N. O. Anderson, F. W. Reynolds and John Keagg. The text of the letter is in part, as follows:

"It appears that grave doubt exists as to the legality of the acts of the present officers of the city of San Pedro and to the minds of some there is absolute certainty that their acts are illegal. We therefore respectfully suggest that you refuse payment of any and all demands drawn upon the City Treasury of San Pedro until the validity of the reorganization of San Pedro as a municipal corporation of the fifth class has been established by the courts."

Mr. Weldt stated, this afternoon, that he had referred the communication to his attorney, Frank Karr, for consideration. Should suit be brought the action would probably tie up all salaries and municipal improvements indefinitely.

RESCUES MAN ADRIFT.

Capt. Fred Widing, master of the schooner Santa Rosa Island, which arrived this morning from the island of that name with a cargo of cattle, picked up F. Trader, who was adrift in an open boat which was leaking badly. Trader had lost his oars.

SHEEPSKINS AWARDED.

The graduating exercises of the High School were held in the Auditorium last night. Rev. John L. Pitner delivered an address, and Miss Margaret McGlashan, one of the graduates, read an excellent essay on "Industrial Education." The following received diplomas from Frank Burns, president of the Board of Education: James Thompson and Misses Margaret McGlashan, adeline Coombs, Hilda Johnson and Florence Petty.

IN PERIL BY BONFIRE.

Long Beach Child Approaches Too Near and Her Clothing Catches Flame.

LONG BEACH, June 29.—Little Katherine Walsh, aged 4 years, while playing around a bonfire in the yard at the family home on Termino avenue this afternoon was badly burned and her life only saved by prompt action of two playmates. The children were dancing around the flames, and Katherine, going too near, her dress caught fire. The terrorized child started to run when her playmates turned a stream of water from a hose on the burning dress and extinguished the fire, although not until her arm and the left side of her face were badly burned. Medical aid was given the child, and as the fire was not inhaled, the little victim will recover.

Several days ago Harry Lord and Mrs. L. N. Foster, clerks in a local book store, suffered paralytic attacks within three days of each other, a strange incident which led to medical investigation by Drs. Wood, Jones and Bates as to the probable cause. They have agreed that the cause was due to a leaking gas engine in an ice cream factory next door. Only a thin board partition separates the two basements, while an open window in the book store basement furnished a draught which sent the gas fumes upstairs. Illuminating gas, when inhaled, goes to the brain, produces a congestion and, rupturing an artery, induces a blood clot, which is responsible for the paralysis. Mr. Lord has partially recovered, his face only being affected, but Mrs. Foster, whose entire side was paralyzed, is still in a serious condition. The owner of the gas engine has promised to have it overhauled at once.

Ed Rand, proprietor of a garage, did an involuntary act of playing torchbearer today and is nursing a badly burned hand, through a peculiar accident. Rand was working on a disabled auto at Sixth and American. He had drawn the gasoline from the tank, and the handful of waste with which he was wiping became saturated. An assistant struck a match to light a cigarette, and the flaring head of the match flew off and lodged in the waste, which blazed instantly, burning Rand's hand before he could throw it from him. As a result, young Rand will not be able to go into camp next week with Co. H, of which he is an active member.

Local pulpits Sunday will be occupied by visiting pastors attending the Endeavor convention. Rev. H. H. Bell of San Francisco will preach at the Methodist Church; Rev. H. O. McQuilken of San José, at the Presbyterian Church; Rev. J. H. Garnett, Santa Ana, at Christian Church; Rev. W. T. Patchell, San José, at Plymouth Congregational; Rev. M. M. Kilpatrick of Pasadena, at United Presbyterian.

Victor Gunn, an employé of Fellows's boatyard at West Long Beach, caught his left hand in a planer today, lacerating the member so badly that amputation of two fingers was necessary.

Mrs. Wellborn, a nurse at the County Hospital, had her purse stolen while sitting on the beach today. It contained, besides valuable papers, all of her money, and Mrs. Wellborn was compelled to seek a loan from strangers in order to get home.

One hundred children of McKinley Orphans' Home, Los Angeles, under the care of Mrs. E. W. Gilmore, picnicked at Alamitos Bay today, coming through the city on special cars.

Flags on the bath-house were at half-mast today, because of the death of Mrs. Archer, wife of the manager of the institution.

The Edison Electric Company, whose gas tank collapsed several weeks ago, have received their new steel holder, and expect to have it in commission in two weeks.

An automobile belonging to Don Henderson caught fire at Pine avenue last night, and before it could be extinguished the woodwork was badly charred and damaged.

The board of school trustees held its last meeting today, and closed up the business to date. Rev. Charles Pease and Harry Barndollar retire, their places being filled by William Schilling, Sr., and F. C. Yeomans. Prof. J. J. Morgan, supervising principal, also retires, being succeeded by Prof. James D. Graham of Pasadena.

MORE HANDSOME PRIZES.

Winners in Avalon's Fishing Tournament Will Be Well Rewarded. Crowd of Visitors.

AVALON, June 29.—Still the prizes come. Yesterday brought two handsome gold medals which cap the climax for worth and beauty in the list of prizes in the fishing tournament now on. They are both of solid gold and finest workmanship. They are given by E. H. Brewster and Thomas McD. Potter. The former's gift is for the largest fish of the season taken on a nine-ounce rod and nine-thread line. Potter's is for the largest white sea bass of the season.

LONG FACES RAISE PRICES.

The price of a shave in Avalon is 25 cents. The anglers, perhaps, are in part responsible—their faces are so long. After the taking of two tuna yesterday, the fishers started out filled with enthusiasm and hope, this morning, but there was no enthusiasm on their return this noon. Most of them report that there was "nothing doing."

BAND'S FIRST CONCERT.

The full band will give the first of the season's evening open-air concerts, Monday evening, at the new band stand at the foot of the Island Mountain Railway.

ISLAND BREVITIES.

Dr. W. B. Powers of Redlands won the Light Tackle Club's button of membership this morning on a twenty-one pound albicore.

Miss Bertha Bosbyshell arrived at camp "Stay-awhile," today, accompanied by her guest, Miss E. Langon, of Marshaltown, Iowa.

Dr. J. C. Kirkpatrick is here today to inspect his new house, which is being built on the terrace.

Mr. and Mrs. James V. Baldwin and W. E. Baldwin are at the Metropole.

Philip Zobelein and Miss Rose Zobelein registered at the Metropole today.

Mrs. D. F. Warnock and her friend, Mrs. "Jack" Campbell, were among the arrivals today.

The "Saturday crowd," this noon, numbered nearly 500. Several hundred more visitors will be added by the evening boat.

SOLDIERS' HOME.

SOLDIERS' HOME, June 29.—Two concerts in Memorial Hall this week were provided by the home management against that peculiarly French affliction known as ennui. The first of these was given on Thursday evening by the "Novello Quartette," comprising Mrs. Catherine Colette, soprano; Mrs. Norma R. Robbins, contralto; Henry S. Williams, tenor; Jackson Gregg, baritone, and M. F. Mason, accompanist, all of whom, on Sundays, constitute the choir of the First Presbyterian Church in Pasadena. The versatility of the quartette, which gave several numbers in character, was highly enjoyed by the old boys in blue.

On Friday evening the tenth concert of the Home Orchestra was assisted by Miss Florence Bland and F. W. Seager, accompanied by Miss Helen Weiner, who rendered several vocal numbers.

Cyrus W. Ball, late Co. K, First New York Mounted Rifles, is appointed sergeant of home company L vice Cunningham, resigned. The latter, who is a practical surveyor, will leave Monday for Safford, Ariz., to fulfill an engagement in segregating claims in the coal fields of Navajo county.

Uncle Sam Post, W.R.C., of Los Angeles, entertained comrades of the post at luncheon, al fresco, on Tuesday, at Curtin's Grove, on Pepper avenue. Baskets of goodies provided by the thoughtful women, furnished a bounteous feast, and an enjoyable day resulted.

DEATHS.

John Maybohm, late detachment of Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, a native of Germany, admitted from Downey in 1890; died June 25, aged 80.

James Griffin, late Co. C, Second Vermont Infantry, a native of Ireland, admitted from Las Vegas, N. M., in 1890; died June 20, aged 67.

James A. Brown, late Co. K, Fifty-eighth Ohio Infantry, a native of Pennsylvania, admitted from Long Beach, May 20, 1907; died at that place June 20, while on furlough, aged 65.

MONROVIA.

MONROVIA, June 29.—The annual picnic of the Farmers' Club at the Orange-avenue school grounds yesterday was attended by nearly one hundred members and guests, among the latter being fifteen members of the County Poultry Breeders' Association. At the banquet table under the pepper trees, Dr. Winslow presided as toastmaster. Mrs. C. H. Sarwine, who has been the club secretary for four years, was re-elected and, in recognition of her faithfulness, was presented with a handsome cut glass bowl. At the close of the formal programme Mr. and Mrs. Widdy, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Spence, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Selman and Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Volmer were elected to club membership. The organization now has about 250 members.

Maurice Conley, arrested by Constable John Thomas for plundering a sheep herder's camp in the Puente Hills, was given thirty days this morning by Justice Holloway. Conley had packed his booty, including a generous supply of mutton, on a burro when he found a demijohn of fermented grape juice. The deal was practically off from that moment.

Ben Frees and Kenneth Harvey of Monrovia and Will Bacon and Gordon Maddock of Duarte have entered the Ocean Park tennis tournament, which opens July 2.

Mrs. E. F. Spence, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Kathleen, and sister, Miss Kate Spence, has gone to Yosemite Valley for a month's vacation.

The recently-appointed board of health held its first meeting last evening, and elected Dr. C. C. Browning president; J. A. Crandall, vice-president, and Dr. R. D. Adams, secretary.

Miss Margaret C. Casey of Toledo, O., a cousin of Father Geary, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, is a guest at the parish house, and will probably spend several months in Monrovia.

Prof. W. J. Black and family left this morning for San Diego, where they will locate for the summer.

Did You Ever Track a Rabbit?

Do you remember how easy it was to follow up the foot prints, and track him to his hole? You had not seen the rabbit, but you know he is there because all tracks lead to it and none lead away. Tracking the symptoms of chronic disease is as easy and plain to the EXPERT as tracking a rabbit is to you.

Drs. Shores know the different "tracks" each disease makes; they know from the symptoms what the trouble is, and what caused it—and, when once they have "tracked down" a chronic ailment, they KNOW from years of experience WHAT TREATMENT IS REQUIRED TO CURE THAT AILMENT.

If you have suffered for years and are tired of treating with Tom, Dick and Harry; if you are doping yourself to death with alcohol and narcotics, under the name of "Patent Medicines"—CALL A HALT. Use your common sense. Consult Drs. Shores, the EXPERTS, FREE OF CHARGE, and learn exactly what your trouble is and how it can be cured. It's free NOW—but is worth a fortune to you. Come and bring your friends.

CATARRH IN THE HEAD AND THROAT.

This form of catarrh is most common resulting from neglected colds—quickly cured with little cost by Drs. Shores' famous treatment.

"Is your nose stopped up?"
"Does your nose discharge?"
"Is your nose sore and tender?"
"Is there pain in the front of head?"
"Do you hawk to clear the throat?"
"Is your throat dry in the morning?"
"Do you sleep with your mouth open?"

You can easily be cured now—don't let it run into complications.

THE BRONCHIAL TUBES.

When catarrh of the head or throat is neglected or wrongfully treated, it extends down the windpipe into the bronchial tubes and after a while attacks the lungs. Quickly cured with little cost by Drs. Shores' famous treatment.

"Have you a cough?"
"Do you take cold easily?"
"Have you pain in the side?"
"Do you raise frothy materials?"
"Do you spit up little cheesy lumps?"
"Do you feel you are growing weaker?"

Don't risk neglecting these warnings—stop the disease before it reaches the lungs.

OF THE EARS.

Catarrh extends from the throat the eustachian tubes into the ear ing partial or complete deafness cured with little cost by Drs. mous treatment.

"Is your hearing failing?"
"Do your ears discharge?"
"Is the wax drying in your
"Do you hear better some others?"
"Is your hearing worse when a cold?"

HOW TO MAKE YOUR LIFE HAPPY AND SUCCESSFUL

Your Life Story Read From the Stars—Mme. Velma Keith, Through a Life Study in This Realm, is Daily Starting People on the Road to Success and Happiness

Would you achieve success? Would you know and experience the pleasures that come from leading instead of being led? Would you win merit in the eyes of those with whom you come in contact and create a favorable impression wherever you go? In short, are you tired of your present aimless, hit-or-miss existence and lack of ability to create favorable impressions?

Then listen. Many years ago the wise men and philosophers discovered that all nature seems to be in harmony, that all portions of the universe—sun, moon, stars, planets—seem to bear a direct relation one to the other, and to be governed by certain changeless relations termed laws.

Delving still deeper into the realm of nature they discovered that this inter-dependence exists everywhere and includes the human race. Through a careful consideration of these phenomena they learned that not only are both vegetable and animal life on this earthly planet influenced by the other planets and stars, but that this influence is so strong and virile that man's history may be read through the study of his natal conditions. Thus we have the birth of the science of astrology, or solar biology, as it is often termed.

Palmistry, through the markings of the hand, in its turn supplements its sister science. Phrenology enables us to read the possibilities of life through the careful study of the human skull.

These three sciences dovetail one into the other so as to permit of the reading of one's life from infancy to old age. Through the primal law of the universe, harmony, and the manifestations of this law on the many different pages of the book of nature, certain favored persons are enabled to read the life story of men and women by the considerations, and their possibilities as revealed further through Phrenology and Palmistry.

Even more wonderful are the truths of Psychic Mentality, when a person gifted by nature can close her eyes and see in all clearness and vividness the entire outline of your life. Released from its earthly prison, the soul mind of a person will wander in the infinite realm of space and bring to you, through the medium of the Clairvoyant, the wonderful truths of nature. To such a person your life, past, present and future, is as an open book.

Los Angeles is favored at present by the presence of one of the most wonderful and successful of Psychics and Astrologers, Mme. Velma Keith, who is now permanently located in her own private home at 746 South Broadway, enjoys a world-wide reputation in her line. She is one of the favored persons to whom, by gift of nature has been granted the dominance of the subconscious or soul mind. Through her marvelous powers she leads you from the byways of misapplied efforts and directs your steps along the path of natural adaptation.

Her knowledge of the associated science of Astrology, Palmistry and Phrenology is the result of a lifetime's study. Add to this the wonderful power she possesses as a psychic through her divinely appointed mentality and you will not be so filled with surprise at the great and ever-growing success with which she has met elsewhere and is meeting here.

By the study of your characteristics, as delineated by both your palm and your birth chart, she will reveal to you the things that have passed in your life. Having drawn aside the veil woven by the swiftly passing years and thus gained your confidence through the revelations of your past, Mme. Keith will peer into the broad vista of futurity and show to you the things that are in store for you.

Mme. Keith, it must be truthfully said, employs none of the mysterious machinery, which often serves to make spiritual manifestations suspicious. She impresses her gifts upon the people who consult her without the employment of a single mechanical agency. She uses neither darkness nor mummery in her readings. You walk into her parlor, where strict privacy is maintained at all times, and sit down quietly at her desk with no more mystery than if she were your lawyer. You find yourself consulting a lady who respects you and respects herself, who indulges in no oracle vagueness, but gives you facts which startle you by their accuracy.

The cost of reading is but $1 if you are satisfied; not one cent if you are not. Remember the place, 746 South Broadway. Hours from 9:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m.

AUTO BURSTS, STARTS FIRE.

Much Damage in Casitas Pass Country Originates in Queer Way.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

VENTURA, June 29.—Word was brought to town this afternoon that the whole Casitas Pass country near the Wadleigh rancho was on fire, started in a peculiar way. A Los Angeles man passed through this city last night, stopping here for repairs to his auto. He went on this morning, and when near the ridge, beyond the Wadleigh ranch, a hot box suddenly developed in the Craig machine.

This ignited the gasoline tank, and there was an explosion, which blew up the machine and set fire to the dry grasses all about. The day being exceedingly hot, the flames spread fast. Just at this time, W. L. Valentine happened along with his auto. The alarm was spread, and Col. Slosson and some of his forest rangers hastened to the scene.

After helping Craig get his machine out of the road, it being practically ruined, Valentine hastened to this place to get help. It is feared the fire will do great damage.

There are a good many people in Upland who are violating with impunity one of the State laws by the burning of rubbish on or near their places at this time of year, without the necessary permit of the fire warden.

In the month of June the Upland Citrus Association paid to its members $35,081.22. Just about as much more is expected in returns from fruit shipped this month. This is only one of eight packing-houses here, although the largest.

Friends of the county division plan are working hard for success, and mass meetings are to be held at Ontario this evening, at Upland Monday, July 1, and at Cucamonga July 6. There are a good many reasons, it seems, for the stand so far taken against the plan, by residents of the colony, and one of the principal ones is that San Bernardino county is out of debt, and has a comfortable balance in her treasury.

Mr. and rMs. Reid B. Bordwell have returned from their honeymoon trip to Coronado, and are now living on First avenue, Upland.

B. A. Woodford, manager of the Southern California Fruit Exchange, and a resident of Upland for a number of years, has sold his residence here, and will remove to Claremont.

MEN TEACHERS SCARCE.

Supply of Schoolmasters Runs Short in Orange County and Demand Is Unsupplied.

SANTA ANA, June 29.—There is a scarcity of men teachers in this county, says County Superintendent of Schools Carpenter. Carpenter says that a number of country schools are calling for men principals but that there are none to be had. The county school board adjourned today until August when it will meet to make some suggestions in regard to the course of study. No radical changes are contemplated. Only one teacher's certificate was issued by the school board this year, that one being a grammar grade certificate to Miss Eva Pray of Long Beach.

William Bowers, caught stealing junk copper from the Edison Electric Company, has decided to plead guilty and go to the penitentiary. This will be his third term. He was sent up for two years from Los Angeles on a petty larceny charge with a felony prior.

One of the biggest social events of the year was the end-of-the-season meeting of the Ebell Society of the Santa Ana Valley at Elks Hall last night. Addresses were delivered by Mrs. E. D. Buss of Bakersfield, State president of the Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. J. W. Bishop, retiring president of the Ebell, and Mrs. S. M. Davis, the recently elected president. Some beautiful silver was given Mrs. Bishop by the society of which she has been president for two years.

Diplomas were given last night by the Santa Ana Hospital Training School to Misses Ruby E. Matthews and R. May Northrup.

TONG WAR POSSIBLE.

Officer of Santa Barbara Lottery Company Draws Big Prize and Life Is in Danger.

SANTA BARBARA, June 29.—Local Chinatown is shaken to its core. Two tongs are at war. It all started over a lottery ticket. A lottery company operates here, although the police have no official knowledge of it. It is because a rich prize was drawn by one of the officials of the company that the Chinamen are believed to be coddling guns and knives under blouses and in their sleeves. Santa Barbara is looking for fireworks before the Fourth.

The official of the lottery company referred to is said to have drawn $1500. Early yesterday morning a meeting of the company was held, at which a crowd of Chinese was present. It is said that the grafting official will be in danger of death if he attempts to press his claim.

OPPOSE IMPROVEMENT.

The residents of Anacapa street yesterday decided that a common dirt pavement on that thoroughfare was far better and cheaper than asphalt or any form of paving. They oppose the proposition to repave the street, declaring that paving would deteriorate the value of their property.

HAS CARNEGIE MEDAL.

Samuel Stow, wearing a Carnegie medal awarded for extreme bravery, returned to his home in this city yesterday afternoon from Oregon. He is a graduate of the University of California, and was employed as superintendent of a paper mill in the north. At Willamette last winter he rescued a man from drowning.

T. O'Hearn, the young man who recently "borrowed" some of Tailor Ilige's fancy clothing and sold the property, pleaded builty to a charge of larceny yesterday, and Judge Price sent him to jail for sixty days.

H. S. Dukes has about completed the erection of a four-room cottage out on Florida avenue. Mrs. W. E. Hyer is building a five-room bungalow on her property on Florida avenue. A four-room cottage for J. D. Ankrum is about completed on Juanita street. E. C. Reed, who has recently become a land owner here, will begin the erection of a bungalow in a few days. E. Hays of Iowa, who, a few weeks ago, bought ten acres, is building a home on Saboba street.

Granville, the three-year-old son of John A. Wright, died yesterday, after an illness of several weeks. The case is a particularly sad one, as Mr. Wright had buried his wife within the last six weeks.

WOUL STOP BULLFIGHTS.

San Diego Citizens Ask President's Aid in Abolishing Contests at Tia Juana.

SAN DIEGO, June 29.—A mass meeting was held last evening at Germania Hall, the largest in the city, to give opportunity for expressions of opposition to the bullfights, conducted at Tia Juana, just below the international-boundary line. The bullfighting was denounced by a number of speakers, and a petition to President Roosevelt, asking him to use his influence and his good offices for the suppression of the brutal sport, received many signatures. The President is asked to intercede inasmuch "as these sports draw almost the entire body of their spectators from the citizens of the United States, greatly to the demoralization and degradation of our people." The petition will be forwarded to Washington within a few days.

ADVISE NEW ELECTION.

After a conference with the leading attorneys of San Diego, City Attorney Puterbaugh has advised the Common Council that in view of the question of validity raised against the recent issue of bonds, it will be better to call a new election rather than try to get an opinion from the Supreme Court or have the proceedings of the bond issue examined by Dillon & Hubbard. It is expected that the Common Council, at the meeting Monday evening, will accept the findings of the local attorneys and order a new election.

SAN DIEGO NEWS NOTES.

Word has been received that an excursion of Imperial Valley people, under the auspices of the Imperial Valley Board of Trade, will arive here on Wednesday, July 3.

Yesterday's Forecast and Report.

U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, Los Angeles, June 29.—[Reported by A. B. Wollaber, Local Forecaster.] At 5 o'clock a.m. the barometer registered 29.85; at 5 p.m., 29.82. Thermometer for the corresponding hours showed 66 deg. and 86 deg. Relative humidity, 5 a.m., 68 per cent.; 5 p.m., 41 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., northeast, velocity 2 miles; 5 p.m., southwest, velocity 14 miles. Maximum temperature, 92 deg.; minimum, 62 deg. Barometer reduced to sea level.

Weather Conditions.—The northern disturbance has advanced to the upper lake region, and unsettled, rainy weather has prevailed during the last twenty-four hours in the Northern States west of the lake region. A moderate disturbance is central this morning off the South Atlantic coast, and showers are quite generally reported along the Atlantic seaboard. Elsewhere, fair weather has prevailed. The high area off the Northern California Coast continues to advance slowly inland. Under its influence, the weather in Los Angeles and vicinity will continue fair during the next thirty-six hours, with no important change in temperature.

Forecasts.—Local forecast for Los Angeles and vicinity: Fair tonight and Sunday; north to west winds.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29.—The pressure has changed but little during the past twenty-four hours on the Pacific Coast. Over the Rocky Mountains there has been a moderate rise. Light showers have occurred in Washington and in Utah. Fog continues along the central coast of California. The temperatures are about normal throughout California, except at Los Angeles, where there is a rise. Forecast:

San Francisco and vicinity: Fair Sunday, with fog in the morning and at night; fresh west wind.

Santa Clara Valley: Fair Sunday, with high fog in the morning; light north wind.

Sacramento Valley: Fair Sunday; moderately warm; light south wind, changing to northerly.

San Joaquin Valley: Fair Sunday; continued warm; light north wind.

Los Angeles and vicinity: Fair Sunday; continued warm; light east wind, changing to west.

Arizona: Fair Sunday and Monday.

NEEDLES, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Colorado River has risen one inch in the last twenty-four hours. The weather here is hot; temperature 116 deg. in the shade.

YUMA (Ariz.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch from the U. S. Geological Survey.] Gauge height Colorado River, 28.60 feet; yesterday, 28.70 feet.

Flow of Rivers.

The following is a statement of the estimated flow of certain Southern California rivers and streams in Yosemite Valley, in cubic feet per second, or second-feet, one second-foot equaling fifty miner's inches. The record is furnished by W. B. Clapp, engineer in charge of Water Resources Branch of the United States Geological Survey in California.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKETS.

Business closed at noon yesterday with dealers satisfied with the week's trading. Sales were not of immense volume, but most commodities sold well for this season of the year, and with the exception of local ranch eggs, all paid a broad margin of profit to the brokers and jobbers.

The continual decline of the egg market is a subject of comment in produce circles, and with the dropping of ½c more from the price yesterday morning there seemed foundation for the prediction made by brokers of a lower level of prices to be reached than has been known for sometime. The market was weak at the new prices, and the opinion prevails among brokers that 1-cent should have been cut from the egg quotation yesterday morning instead of ½ cent. Dealers are declining all varieties of eggs and the best from each district or storage house go into the fancy local candled case. This method may be questionable from a standpoint of truth, but it undoubtedly gives to the consumer a better selection of eggs. The extras taken from Eastern and local storage stocks are in most instances as good as the local ranch, which become much heated under present weather conditions.

Butter is steady as quoted.

In the fruit market most commodities cleaned up well yesterday morning. Watermelons were in too large supply. Few grapes were offered. Cantaloupes cleaned up early. Apricots declined to 1.25@1.50 a big box. Black figs were freely offered at 75@1.00 a box. Dewberries are out of the market. Strawberries are abundant.

Onions were exceptionally strong.

Poultry of all kinds was in good demand for over Sunday wants. Prices were firm and unchanged.

Garden truck was scarce and prices were steady.

Fish was in limited supply and the demand was heavy.

The receipts of produce as reported for yesterday's exchange were as follows: Eggs, 410 cases; butter, 20,606 lbs.; cheese, 2000 lbs.; potatoes, 1151 sacks; onions, 9 sacks; beans, none; sweet potatoes, none.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

SHARES AND MONEY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, June 29.—The stock market made some stand today against the disappointment caused by the failure of the New York City bond offering. The small number of bids for the bonds did not in fact come as a surprise to the banking world. In spite of the confidence in its success which had been built up in the stock market for speculative effect it appeared that most of the selling prompted by today's disappointment had been completed yesterday and prices were bid up again today. Assistance was given to this movement by the circulation of rumors that the bank statement would prove an agreeable disappointment. The statement failed to reflect [illegible] alleged in these rumors and the cash loss ran to the full figure of the estimate. There was some loan contraction, however, evidently the result of calling in of funds placed in the market pending the necessity for their employment in the payments of dividends and interest which begins on Monday. The professional movements among the stock operators showed confidence that the conditions would redound to the benefit of the strike market and they took hold of stocks. Foreign markets also were affected by the expectation of coming relaxation in the coming money market. Prices rose to the highest level of the week in the final dealings and closed strong without important reaction. The bond market held steady although very dull, and was not affected by the unfavorable investment inferences from the New York City bond failure. Total sales of bonds, par value $980,000.

GENERAL EASTERN MARKETS.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, June 29.—Wheat prices upon the local exchange broke two cents per bushel today because of the heavy realizing sales. At the close the September delivery was off 2@2 1-8, corn was down 2 1-4@2 3-8, oats were 2-8@½ lower and provisions were unchanged to 2½@5c higher. The wheat market was weak all day. Prices at the opening were off nearly 1c and the decline continued until another cent had been added to the initial loss. The market was entirely a "weather" affair. In the southwest where harvesting was in progress the weather was clear and warm, while in the northwest, where the spring wheat crop was said to have been greatly in need of moisture, rains were quite general last night. More rain was also predicted for tonight in North Dakota and Minnesota. Longs and commission houses sold freely the entire session and the offerings were taken chiefly by shorts. The market closed weak at almost the lowest point of the day. September opened 3-8@7-8c lower at 97 3-4 to 98 1-4c, declined to 96 3-8 and closed at 96½@96 5-8. The corn market was weak on free selling by cash houses. Excellent weather for the new crop and the decline in wheat were the main reasons for the selling pressure. The market closed weak. September opened 1-8 to 1-8@1-4c lower at 53 3-4@53 7-8 to 54 7-8, declined to 53 1-2 and closed at 53 5-8@53 3-4. Prospects of heavy deliveries Monday on July contracts brought out liberal sales of July oats by Longs and caused weakness in all options. The slump in wheat also tended to depress the market. September opened 1-8 to 1-4c lower at 37½ to 37 5-8, sold between 37, and 37 3-4@37 7-8 and closed at 37 1-4@37 3-8. Provisions were dull. The feature of the trading was liquidation of July owing to the likelihood of large deliveries on Monday. A five-cent advance in live hogs offset these sales and had the market steady all day. At the close September pork was up 2½@5c, lard was unchanged and ribs were 2½c higher.

New York Cotton Market.

[BY PRIVATE WIRE TO FRED DORR.]

NEW YORK, June 29.—Market strong and active; visible supply statement bullish and crop news getting more bullish as it becomes daily more apparent that the crop has not improved as has been expected with such favorable weather. Journal of Commerce report on Mississippi, Arkansas and Tennessee says fields are clean and well cultivated. Trading was active and the crowd that sold the market so heavily in order to break the eleven cents were heavy buyers this morning and are still said to be short a long line. The western belt forecast calls for continued hot clear weather, although rain is needed.

Weather generally fair today and tomorrow, except showers today in the Carolinas and Georgia and eastern cotton belt. Chronicle advices say weather has been satisfactory during the week.

Many correspondents report improvement. Rain would be beneficial. Boll weevils increasing.

DEAFNESS CAUSED BY RUSTY EAR BONES

How the Tiny Parts Get Bound Together and Cause Deafness and Head Noises.

A WONDERFUL CURE.

Did you ever notice how rust tightens up the bearings of a machine which has seen out in the weather—how it welds the many parts into one solid piece, so the machine won't run?

Now a cold, catarrh, scarlet fever and many other ailments have the same effect upon the delicate little joints of the Ear Bones that the weather had on the bearings of that machine.

Disease binds all these little bones together until often they become one solid bone. The joints have become "rusted" by congestion and inflammation. Then sound vibrations are not strong enough to move these "rusted" bones, this interferes and prevents vibrations from reaching the nerves of hearing, and the brain receives only a muffled or indistinct impression, or no impression at all. Then you are deaf.

To remove rust and make a machine useful again, you move it backward and forward a sufficient number of times to work the rust out, and in that way the bearings are loosened up, it runs freely, and its usefulness is restored.

Now, I have invented a machine of such wonderful delicacy that it loosens up the "rusted" joints of the Ear Bones safely and surely, just as you "loosened up" the machine. AIR WAVES move these little bones backward and forward one-thousandth of an inch at a time—and from 800 to 1600 times a second. In a short time these little joints move easily and freely. Sound vibrations are again strong enough to make them respond.

Then your hearing is restored, because the rust is gone. And the world is once more full of life and sound. You no longer live in a tomb of silence.

There is no element of doubt or uncertainty about my treatment.

Ask for my FREE BOOK "Deafness, Its Cause and Cure"—and understand and know yourself WHY and HOW it is simple and easy for you to regain your hearing.

ONLY QUESTION OF SHORT TIME.

FRANCIS MURPHY AWAITING THE CALL OF DEATH.

Fearless in Armor of His Faith He Faces End of Life's Journey—Physicians Say He May Die in a Few Hours or May Live for Days—Sons Nearer His Bedside.

Francis Murphy is waiting on the threshold and the door of death is ajar. Suffering, but brave with the hope instilled by a consciousness of rightful endeavor, this gentle soul may wing its way into the infinite at almost any hour. It may be today, it may not be for a fortnight. But when the summons comes Brother Francis Murphy will answer, fearless in his faith: "Here am I."

The friends and family of this gentle, steadfast man and all of those who have come in touch with his unselfish heart are bowed with sorrow, selfish for the loss that will be theirs.

Meanwhile, he is waiting for another meeting here. With the strength which a deep love for the children God has given him, he put aside the hand of Death. On their way to receive their father's blessing and farewell, are three of the sons of the dying man. William, John and Robert S. Murphy are speeding across the continent as fast as steam can bring them. They are expected to arrive tonight. The other son, T. Edwin Murphy of Philadelphia, reached this city last night.

At the home of his daughter, Mrs Wayland Trask, and with his other daughter, Mrs. Josephine Holmes, beside him, Francis Murphy was last night resting quietly, but he was so weak that Drs. J. J. Still and J. H. Davisson refuse absolutely to permit any of his friends to see him. At a late hour they announced that it is only a question of a short time when the end of earthly life will come.

AWFUL THIRST CLAIMS HIM.

Los Angeles Man Perishes Miserably on the Desert in Riverside County.

Dying from thirst with his lips pressed to the steel of the track in an effort to secure moisture, Samuel Anderson of Los Angeles was found on the desert near Monad by the crew of a Southern Pacific train, late Friday night. Tenderly the victim of the awful thirst was lifted on the train and hurried to Palm Springs. And there, on the rough boards of the station platform, with a lantern shining across his blackened face, Anderson died in the midst of the sun-baked waste he loved.

Conductor Kammerling, on one of the front coaches, noticed the man as the night train from Indio rumbled along the track. He signaled the engineer and the train was stopped. A dozen carmen hurried back to the switch and there found Anderson. The man was almost nude. He had torn his clothing from his body, and his garments were scattered along the track for more than a mile. His face was swollen and almost black from the heat, and he was lying with his lips on the rails trying to secure a drop of moisture.

The figure moaned when the railroad men touched him. He was hot as the sand about him, and his eyes stared like those of the dead. When he spoke it was in a thick, low voice. Constantly he begged for a little water.

Despite the efforts of the trainmen Anderson could not be saved. The Coroner, who was on the east-bound train, examined the remains, and they were taken to Colton, where an inquest will be held today. According to a report received from Indio, Anderson left there Thursday night to walk to Palm Springs. He had lived on the desert at different periods for years, and was not afraid of the dangerous trip.

Anderson was a mechanic, and Special Agent Huey of the Southern Pacific is endeavoring to find his relations in this city.

CRARY EXONERATED.

Coroner's Jury Places no Blame on Driver of Auto That Caused Leland's Death.

Allan Crary, driver of the automobile which on Thursday night ran down and killed Benjamin Leland, near Seventh and Figueroa streets, was exonerated from all blame by a Coroner's jury yesterday morning. A complete investigation of the details of the accident was made, Deputy Sage appearing for Coroner Lanterman and Prosecuting Attorney Fleming conducting the examination of witnesses.

Crary told a straightforward story of the accident. He said he had been driving the machine a a low rate of speed, and that Leland brought the accident upon himself by becoming confused. Other witnesses corroborated this testimony. A dozen witnesses testified that the machine had been going at a very low rate of speed, and seemed under perfect control.

A statement from physicians to the effect that Leland was a morphine fiend, and was evidently under the influence of the drug at the time of the accident, went far to explain the cause of Leland's peculiar actions.

W. H. Smiley, a contractor, who was on a street car and saw Crary's machine pass, testified that in his opinion the automobile was traveling at a rate of forty miles an hour. This evidence was contradicted by a dozen other witnesses, and the jury promptly exonerated young Crary.

THEY MAKE PROTEST.

Property Owners on North Bunker Hill Object to Quality of Street Work There.

Property owners on North Bunker Hill avenue, between Alpine and New Depot streets, are still in trouble over the improvement of that highway. Some time ago they made complaint that the work was being held up by the contractors, Withers & Crites, in order that the Berg & Oxby Brick Co. might have the opportunity to haul away the clay in the big cut and make it up into brick.

Finally the grading was gotten down to the proper level, and the contractors began the cement curbs and sidewalks. It is said that one side of the street is about completed, and the quality of the work is arousing a protest.

A petition will be presented to the Board of Public Works and the City Council tomorrow, asking that the contractors be compelled to tear out the cement work already done and replace it with better material. It is the claim of the protestants that the curb lines are irregular; that the sidewalks are crooked and that such a small quantity of cement has been used in the curbs that it can easily be crumbled with the fingers.

NEVADA STOCKS.

SAN FRANCISCO LIST.

(Exclusive Service to The Times by the Los Angeles Stock Brokerage Company, ground floor Citizen's National Bank Building. Quotations are guaranteed by the Western Union Telegraph Company.)

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29.—The San Francisco Stock and Exchange Board will be closed from noon Saturday, June 29th, until Monday morning, July 8th; this being the annual summer holiday of the Exchange.

It is well that the holiday comes at this time, as the strike of the Western Union Telegraph employees has practically suspended business during the past week. Mr. Lamb, superintendent of the Los Angeles offices, has stated that it is his expectation to be able to recontinue the quotation service on the opening of the Exchange on the morning of July 8th. It is expected that with the resumption of business heavy trading and more activity than has been the case during the early part of the summer will take place, as the mines of Goldfield are producing heavily, and from a mining standpoint, great activity prevails throughout the districts. This, of course, must have its ultimate effect on the stock market. The "Shorts" have got themselves badly pinched, and had it not been for the failure of one of the big San Francisco houses, a bull movement would undoubtedly have been commenced. The "Shorts" will be glad of this opportunity to run to cover, and better conditions are expected to prevail in the near future.

The loss though any cause of your bonds, life insurance policy or other valuable papers would no doubt cause you to regret that you neglected renting a safe deposit box for their safe keeping, but your regret would not remedy the loss. An ordinary box large enough for all such papers costs but a trifle and can not be opened by anyone but yourself or someone given written authority by you and identified by you.

THE CITY IN BRIEF

BREVITIES.

A choice 50-foot lot absolutely free. We have just acquired a large tract of land at a new townsite which has just been organized in Los Angeles county. Near the line of the Owens River Aqueduct, and in order that it may become known in the quickest and most effective manner we have decided to give away absolutely free 100 lots. All we ask in return is that each person who gets a lot will give us the names of at least three persons who might become interested and to whom we might sell other lots. The 100 lots will be given to the first 100 replying to this notice, only one to a person. The location of the tract is an ideal one. The land being almost level at an elevation of 2000 feet. The soil, a fertile loam unsurpassed in the State of California, and the finest of artesian water on the tract. The lots are full size, being 50x150, free and clear of all incumbrances or restrictions, the first 100 will be given absolutely free as above stated. Papers will be made out by a responsible abstract company, through which the transfer will be made and the only item of expense to you will be the cost of the papers, this will not exceed $5, and includes deed, notary fee, and certificate of title. The 100 free lots are equal in location and value to any other lots in the tract. They will be reserved accordingly as the requests are received. No two lots adjoining will be given away nor will more than one lot be given away in the same family. Upon receipt of a postal or letter you will be given necessary information, etc. This proposition is bona fide, and means just what it says. Our object in advertising this great offer in this way is to avoid the confusion which would arise in so many people coming to our office and enables us to award the lots in the order the replies are received. Address O, Box 32, Times Office.

How to become beautiful. A college where you have professional training in all branches of beauty culture is MacDonald's Hair Dressing College, 204 Mercantile Place, suite 38 and 40, near Spring street. Why not embrace this opportunity? We guarantee careful and skillful work at reduced prices. Investigate our system of teaching; you can at least improve your own appearance. Hair dyeing, bleaching and manufacturing a specialty. Exclusively for ladies; evening work by appointment. Home phone F832.

Hardwood Floor: Blot out all thoughts of dissatisfaction and in future have us do your work, and we will do it right. Our men are expert mechanics, reliable and trustworthy, and all contracts are under the personal supervision of a member of the firm. We put down plain, parquet, and ornamental wood floors, renovate and repolish old floors. Weighted brushes, wax and cleaner for sale. Coöperative Hardwood Floor Co., Inc., 215 Mercantile Place. Phones, Home F4297; Main 5192.

The "Ville de Paris," 317-325 South Broadway, will sell tomorrow $10 lingerie hats at $5, and a line of $5 and $6 embroidery hats at $2.50. They are the proper styles for your Fourth of July outing, and such remarkable reductions will certainly make this popular department more than busy Monday. Fashionable women manifest the greatest interest in "Ville" millinery sales, because "Ville" hats have an original touch that gives them that individuality not obtained in ordinary shops.

Hardwood Floors: If you are thinking of having polished floors we should like to quote you prices on our special wax flooring. We guarantee it never to "cup up" at the joints nor to shrink as so much inferior flooring does. We renovate old floors and make them like new. "Nonpareil" floor wax and "Nonpareil" floor cleaner for sale. John A. Smith Floor Co., 425 W. 7th st. Established 14 years. Tel. Main 2668, Home F6629.

Florentine Hair Dressing College has such demand for graduates they have been obliged to enlarge their college and now have the largest in the West, teaching beauty culture, hair dressing, manufacturing of hair, etc. Short time, small expense required. Hair dressing free, shampoo, 25c, other prices in proportion. 227 Mercantile Place, corner Broadway. Suites 2 and 3. Home phone F7287.

FINAL ANNOUNCEMENT

This is the last general announcement of our "Quarter Off" sale of pianos. Although a few of these pianos remain unsold, we will not devote any more advertising space to them. We anticipate closing out those left, within a few days, but in any event they will not be put back in regular stock. They will be sold at a quarter off, whether tomorrow, next week or next month.

Tomorrow may be your last day to choose from Kranich & Bach, Schmor, Emerson, Estey, Sterling, Huntington and Mendelssohn pianos at a quarter below the regular price. One or two of each style remain unsold.

These are new pianos, remember—good, new uprights from the best factories in the country, guaranteed by the manufacturers and ourselves. No old styles—no second-hand pianos, but fresh, clean goods, never out of our store.

PIANOS
Reduced a Quarter

You will remember we started this sale about a month ago with the determination to close out 75 instruments in order to reduce our stock. The fact that the sale is a genuine one—as our sales always are, has made it a great success. To sell nearly 75 pianos within a month—besides doing our regular business is a record we are proud of.

Are you going to take advantage of this chance to save a quarter on your piano investment? The terms are ridiculously low—$6, $8 or $10 monthly payments is all we are asking.

Tomorrow will be a good time for you to visit our store. Suppose you come and test some of the pianos, or, if you prefer, bring along any one you like to test them for you.

TROUBLE BUBBLE DOUBLES SIZE IN HOT VENICE-OCEAN PARK SQUABBLE.

SENSATIONAL discoveries are claimed by Ocean Park City Trustees in connection with the heated movement by Venice people for disincorporation of the city of Ocean Park. It was asserted by a Trustee and a city official yesterday that important records are missing from the municipal files. The records are said to have a weighty bearing on the tangled situation, in that they relate to Abbot Kinney's activities in Venice.

If the records really are gone, and a hunt yesterday failed to disclose them, it may be that they have been borrowed by some one who has failed so far to return them. City Attorney Anderson could not find them in a search through the files.

VENICE

Startling disclosures will be made by the Ocean Park officials tomorrow, it is claimed, that will put the entire disincorporation movement to sleep, effectually calling off the Doge of Venice, Abbot Kinney, and his followers. (Mr. Kinney says they are his leaders, however, and that he is only a "looker-on.")

While all these events are eventuating thick and fast, there are a good many people in Ocean Park who profess to know nothing of the merits of the case.

Not so in Venice, which, though apparently a city by itself, really is a part of Ocean Park, and which is the place where the fire was started under the now bubbling trouble kettle.

CITY SEAT AT VENICE.

Venice, in fact, is the seat of the Ocean Park city government. It is there, among the minarets and the canals and the gondolas, that the Ocean Park City Hall is temporarily located, in upstairs rooms of one of Abbot Kinney's buildings.

It is there that the city dungeon is situate; there where the Chief of Police, who lives in Los Angeles, makes his headquarters when called by telephone and transported by trolley to quell disturbances; there where the sewage of all Ocean Park and Venice is carried in pipes and put through a purification process; there also where the sewage of all Santa Monica is carried and dumped; there, or near there, where the beautiful new Ocean Park City Hall is rearing its walls; there, but there, that will do.

Troubles have been multiplying between Ocean Park and Venice ever since Abbot Kinney started to build his Americanized duplicate of the famed Italian city. The difficulty has reached its height now with the movement inaugurated by the Venice people to disincorporate Ocean Park, which is a city of the sixth class. A smell is at the bottom of it all.

The petition for disincorporation, bearing the required number of names, has been filed with the Trustees of Ocean Park. Some action probably will be taken on it tomorrow at the regular meeting of the board.

MAY DELAY ELECTION.

If the Trustees choose to act promptly, it is said the disincorporation election can be called within a few weeks, but there may be delay in calling the election. Reverting for a time to government under the county laws, the plan of the Venice people is to reincorporate all of Ocean Park as the city of Venice, elect new Trustees and start all over again.

Viewing these possibilities, some of the Ocean Park Trustees say that what now is known as Venice may incorporate as a city of the sixth class if it so desires, but that Ocean Park proper is likely to vote for annexation to Santa Monica.

While the smell already mentioned is said to have brought on this war, there are numerous other disturbing features.

A fight over the location of a magnificent new bath-house is on. The Ocean Park Trustees claim that Kinney is trying to steal part of the water front of a street in Venice.

It got so hot that women of Venice sat on the cement piers of the bath-house to prevent the Ocean Park authorities from blowing up the foundations.

The women won.

Another Venice bath-house is mixed in the same muddle. The building is owned by Kinney, but he is not allowed to step inside. Five Pinkerton detectives are on guard within. Old gondoliers dip lightly now along the watery way as they near the bath establishment, for there's no telling how far the detectives will go in detecting.

SOME COMPLICATIONS.

Kinney's miniature railroad that runs around Venice cuts a figure. Kinney's streets that have not been dedicated to the city are a factor. Piers, sidewalks, ocean currents, fire protection, City Hall location, the smell already twice mentioned, and a score of other things enter into the situation.

Merchants of Venice and other residents of the resort say the time has come to stop the warfare. They say it can be stopped only by throwing out the present Board of Trustees and starting all over again.

The Trustees and City Attorney W. H. Anderson, whose law office is in Los Angeles, say this revolutionary move will upset property values, tangle the tax situation and create general pandemonium.

Both sides declare that the squabble is hurting the resort business; destroying confidence in the ability of the people to govern themselves.

On the other hand, visitors are flocking down to the sea to watch "Mayor" Burks and Doge Kinney shake fists menacingly over the bloody chasm.

But to get back to the smell that has brought on the trouble: It has its rise near Short Line Beach, which is about four blocks south of Windward avenue, Venice, where the sewage of Santa Monica, Ocean Park and Venice, after passing through the septic tank, empties into the sea. The sewage at this stage of the proceedings is supposed to be smelless. Short Line Beach and people in Venice say this is not so.

SEPTIC TANK BUCKS?

They say the fault is due to the overworking of the septic tank by the Santa Monica sewage.

The Trustees maintain, however, that the tank works better with an abundance of sewage than with a small quantity. They profess to be glad to accommodate Santa Monica because, in doing so, they are helping Ocean Park.

If it isn't one thing, it's another. The smell led to hard feelings. Hard feelings led to the discovery by Trustee Jones of Ocean Park that Kinney had built the foundations for his new surf bath-house right across the end of Horizon avenue, which is one of the few streets in Venice that have been dedicated to the city.

To shut off access to the ocean this way was declared to be unlawful, and the Trustees, acting under legal advice, ordered the foundations destroyed. A street superintendent resigned rather than carry out the order. The foundation still stands.

Trustee Jones, who once was a partner with Kinney in the real estate business, up to the time they had a falling out, declares that he has not been influenced in his action by the fact that he is heavily interested in a bath-house near Pier avenue in Ocean Park.

Which brings up the matter of the feeling in some quarters that the entire row has been started by commercial jealousy on the part of both the Abbot Kinney Company and people engaged in conducting amusement enterprises in the vicinity of Pier avenue.

The Santa Monica sewage used to empty into the ocean at Pier avenue, which is the dividing line between Santa Monica and Ocean Park, but the outfall pipe was broken several years ago. Besides, the beach front was filling rapidly with seaside homes, and the health of thousands of people was menaced.

TOKIO GETS CITY HALL.

Then there is the fuss over the location of the new City Hall of Ocean Park. Kinney wanted the municipal building on Windward avenue, in the center of Venice. He offered a location but the Trustees say he demanded an outrageous price for foundations he had built there for another structure. The Trustees would not make the deal.

Along came David Evans, now but not then a member of the Board of Trustees. He offered the city ten lots away back in the residence section of Venice, far from the buzz of business. He agreed to convey the lots for $5000 and then donate this amount to be used in building. The people already had voted $10,000 for City Hall purposes, $5000 for a site and $5000 for the building. Now they are just completing a $15,000 building.

But the Venetians say it is too far away to be of much use to the people of Venice or Ocean Park proper. It is at a station on the electric road, known as Tokio.

The Trustees point out that the City Hall is nearer to Pier avenue and Venice than is the City Hall of Santa Monica to the southerly boundaries of that city.

And so it wags back and forth.

"We are given many things that we do not want, and we are denied many things that we do want," say the Venetians.

"We have given Venice greater consideration than any other section of the city," retort the Trustees.

FIRE HOUSE BONE.

Another bone of contention: Kinney wanted the fire department headquarters in Venice, but he already is maintaining a volunteer department, with a high-pressure salt water system, and the Trustees located the engine-house on Rose avenue, in the most thickly populated section of the city.

When Kinney laid out his dream city he offered it as a part of the city of Ocean Park. It never was accepted, the grounds being, according to the Trustees, that the Doge would not dedicate the streets.

Finally, it is said, Kinney offered to deed the streets, but it was found that he had reserved a thirty-five-foot strip down the center of Windward avenue, this strip being reserved for railroad purposes by a Kinney company.

Kinney said he did that simply to prevent some horrid railroad company from pulling the wool over the eyes of the Trustees at some later day and marring the main business street with tracks.

The Trustees object, also, to a railroad line that was permitted by Kinney to run from Lorelei street onto the pier. It was used in the building of the breakwater at the end of the pier.

Another objection from the Trustees is that Kinney got a permit to build a pleasure pier at the foot of Horizon avenue, and immediately proceeded to build a bath-house. The Trustees say the lines of a pier have failed to appear. It is in front of this old bath-house that Kinney is building the new one, on the cement foundations of which the ladies sat, like Patience on a monument, waiting to be blown up.

The permit under which this old bath-house was built is one of the records that seems to be missing from the city records.

"GRAB," SAY TRUSTEES.

Kinney says the Trustees at one time encouraged him in building the new bath-house over the end of the street, on the ground that it would be a fine addition to the architectural features of Venice.

Now the Trustees say this is not so; that Kinney is trying to grab city property worth at least $20,000.

Again, the Trustees assert that Kinney, by building his minature railroad on Lake avenue, has driven automobile and carriage travel over a roundabout line through the center of Venice to Ocean Park and Santa Monica. This avenue was once the county road that connected with the exten-

DIOCESAN INSTITUTE.

The annual institute for the teachers in the various Catholic sisterhoods working in the diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles will open at Santa Monica, in the Academy of the Holy Names, July 22. Because of the meeting of the National Educational Association in Los Angeles, which many of the sisters wish to attend, the diocesan institute will last but one week this year.

For the repose of the soul of the late John F. Francis, an anniversary high mass will be celebrated at St. Vibiana's Cathedral, July 5, at 9 o'clock.

IN PATH OF LEWIS-CLARKE.

Pasadena Boys Plan Journey Over Old Trail.

Going to St. Louis in Canoe from Astoria.

Thence Continue by Water to New York City.

Fired with the ambition to go over the route taken more than a century ago by the famed Lewis and Clarke expedition, W. James Corwin and Joseph Giddings, Pasadena boys, are completing plans for a journey by canoe from the mouth of the Columbia River to St. Louis on the Mississippi, and from there to make the trip in their boat to the mouth of the Hudson River at New York City.

It is estimated that more than five thousand miles will be covered by the dauntless young voyagers before reaching the salt water of the Atlantic in the New York harbor. Many hardships confront them and before getting much more than fairly started on their canoe trip they may encounter insurmountable obstacles, for there are portions of the Lewis-Clarke route that are said to be extremely difficult for travelers.

Besides, the young adventurers have little to guide them but the journals of Meriwether Lewis and William Clarke, who made the trip from St. Louis to the mouth of the Columbia in the first years of the last century. So far as is known, no one else ever undertook the complete journey by boat.

THE LONG TRAIL.

The plan of these latter-day explorers in search of adventure is to start in a canoe from Astoria at the mouth of the Columbia, follow it up to the mouth of the Snake River and on, and on until finally reaching the headwaters of the Missouri, traversing that stream ti its confluence with the Mississippi at St. Louis, thence proceeding down the latter river to Cairo, Ill., where they will turn into the Ohio River. Up the Ohio and through canals they will proceed to Cleveland, thence onto Lake Erie and into the Niagara River, following it to the Erie Canal, and through that waterway connecting with the Hudson River. Down the Hudson to the Atlantic will be smooth sailing for a power boat.

Dangers and difficulties are ahead of the pair, but they expect to encounter no insurmountable obstacles. There are falls and dams and rapids to contend with; there are places on the route where they will have to pack their boat for several miles through rough country; they may run out of gasoline fuel for their engine. All of these things have been considered, but with strong faith in their ability to get through, the boys expect to leave here on July 15 for Astoria, where they will get into their canoe and begin the long journey.

Corwin is 25 years old and is the son of Mrs. Mary Corwin of No. 51 Bonnie avenue, Pasadena. Giddings is 22 and lives with his father, J. R. Giddings, at No. 1313 Colorado street in the same city.

NIFTY LITTLE CRAFT.

The boat in which the trip will be undertaken was built by Corwin, who also constructed the engine that is to propel it. Fifteen feet long, the vessel resembles a launch in its visible lines, but below the water line it has the form of a canoe. The engine with which it is fitted is of two-horse-power, and is placed in the stern. The weight of the little craft, with the outfit of the travelers and a ten-gallon supply of gasoline, is 150 pounds.

Tests that have been made with the boat indicate that it is well fitted for the hard river travel to which it is to be subjected. When stripped of externals, it can be reduced to a weight of fifty pounds, a fact that is expected to prove most agreeable when it is found necessary to make long detours around falls and rapids.

A silk tent is to be carried, and enough provisions to keep the travelers for several days at a time. They expect to camp alongshore by night, and will make the trip in a leisurely

Joseph Giddings (left) and James Corwin, Pasadena boys, who have built a canoe in which they propose to journey from the mouth of the Columbia River to St. Louis over the route of the Lewis and Clarke expedition, and then make the trip by river and canal to New York City, a total voyage of about five thousand miles.

CLOSED PURSE FOR LOAFERS.

Machinists Tire of Paying for Dead Strike.

Santa Fé's Bonus Plan and Open Shop Win.

Head and Hand Work Beat Agitators' Jaw.

Desperation is upon the walking delegate, relicts of the old strike of shopmen on the Santa Fé, long since settled by the establishment of the open shop in Los Angeles, San Bernardino and over the entire system. A movement is afoot among members of the Machinists' Union to cease paying "strike benefits" to the loafers, who for more than two years have drawn fat salaries for "agitating" and keeping up the pretense that a strike is still on. The drain is too great on the workers who are called on to support the drones. The Santa Fé beat the strikers with the "bonus system," which has killed unionism on its lines.

A frantic appeal for continued assistance has been made by C. W. Smith of San Bernardino, one of the striking machinists, who is employed to dupe members of the union throughout the country into the belief that the "strike" still exists, and that there is early prospect of a "settlement."

Smith rides around San Bernardino in an automobile, while the strikers who have not scattered to the four winds loaf around a "union" saloon in the Gate City, squandering the funds contributed by deluded fellow-unionists, who are led through a weekly publication issued by Smith to believe that there really is a strike.

The statements contained in Smith's organ are the only indications even to union-labor members that there ever was a strike on the Santa Fé.

WANT TO STOP WASTE.

Despite Smith, however, the national organization of machinists is about to take a vote on the question of declaring the Santa Fé strike "off," and thus stopping the waste of good money on loafing agitators.

The general public in Los Angeles, San Bernardino and other cities on the Santa Fé system forgot long ago that there was a strike of the machinists, boilermakers and blacksmiths.

San Bernardino, though, has good reason to recall the day that the union bullies succeeded in persuading members of their organizations to lay down their tools, for the shackles of the union-labor pirates began to fall from the city on that date, and strikes and boycotts no longer are known.

When several hundred men walked out of the San Bernardino shops, the biggest maintained on the Pacific Coast by any railroad, the knell was rung for union-labor despotism in that city.

Since then there have come hundreds of skilled mechanics, some to Los Angeles, some to San Bernardino, some to Bakersfield, Point Richmond, and other California cities, and they all have gone to work in the places of the strikers, where they are earning higher wages by individual effort than unionites in their trade can obtain by bulldozing methods in the tightest of closed shops.

MAKES CITY PROSPER.

As an indication of the prosperity that has come to the railroad men and to the city of San Bernardino by the change, the president of one of the five banks of that city stated yesterday that the monthly pay day of the Santa Fé, last week, was the best that the city ever had known. One bank alone paid more than $60,000 on paychecks held by mechanics, all working in the open shop.

Still, this man Smith runs around in his automobile, yelling "scab" at the clean, honest and capable workmen who have established themselves with their families in San Bernardino. They pay no attention to the mouthings of the loafing trouble-breeders.

Merchants in San Bernardino, who at first were bluffed by the laborites with threats of boycott if they served non-union men, are begging the latter now to trade with them, for most of the strikers have left, with bad debts in their wake, while the new men are paying promptly for what they get from merchants who could not be bulldozed by the unionites.

The men who took the places of the strikers are the greatest gainers. The "bonus" or individual-effort system has brought them into clover. The adoption of this system in any shop is fought strenuously by the labor unions. It encourages men to do their best instead of to lie back and see how little they can do in a day. The more they do, the more they get. This is contrary to union principles.

NEW SYSTEM POPULAR.

So popular has the system become on the Santa Fé, both among managers and men, that an extension of its workings to other departments is contemplated as rapidly as possible. A meeting is to be held soon at Topeka to consider various phases of the subject.

It is reported by shop officials that machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, car builders and other mechanics are able to earn 20 to 30 per cent. extra money each month under the system. With but little, if any, overtime, numbers of the men have earned from $25 to $50 a month, in addition to their regular wages.

Under conditions existing before the strike, the union men worked ten hours a day at 38 cents an hour, or $3.80 a day. They demanded $3.80 for an eight-hour day, insisted on a closed shop and passes for walking delegates. They would not work with non-union men, and used to break and steal their tools if they could not force the independents into the union.

The Santa Fé refused the demand. The open shop and the bonus system followed.

Now the men working under the bonus, or individual-effort system, are guaranteed $3.80 a day, and as much more as their ability fits them to earn.

With a smaller force of men, the railroad company is getting out 20 per cent. more work at the San Bernardino shops than it did before the strike. There are no drones; no union-labor committees constantly running to the officials with "grievances."

HOW BONUS IS PAID.

Harrington Emerson of Topeka, Kan., is the originator of the individual effort system, and the Santa Fé employs a number of supervisors, each in charge of a grand division of its lines. They report to H. W. Jacobs, assistant superintendent of motive power of the company. Speaking of the bonus system, J. L. Sydnor of San Bernardino, supervisor of the work on the Coast lines of the Santa Fé, says:

"The system depends on the indi[illegible] of both employer and employé. The former does not arbitrarily reduce wages, for he has found a better way to economize. The employé does not arbitrarily make demands for increased pay, for he already has increased his own income far above the rate any employer would grant.

"Irrespective of the individual effort gain, they both, at the time the wage earner is employed, enter into an agreement as to his regular wages. This contract wage may be changed from time to time, as conditions change, but, whether it rises or falls, it has nothing to do with the profit-sharing plan.

"The employer must make all conditions of production as good as possible, and these include the comfort and well-being of his employés.

"The employé must exert his individual effort to do his best under the conditions afforded.

WORK ON SCHEDULE.

"The method adopted by the employer is similar to that under which train crews are paid. A certain schedule is adopted for operation of trains, and the train and engine men are expected to make the schedule. But if they fail through no fault of their own, they receive time pay, though the train stands still.

"But if they make extra effort and run more miles than the schedule calls for, they are paid for the extra mileage.

"In the various shop departments a schedule is made out, a reasonable standard time being set, such as any skilled man ought regularly to make, and a schedule on which any good foreman ought to insist.

"For doing the work in standard time, the employé receives 20 per cent. increase above the hourly rate. He is paid this extra 20 per cent., not to work beyond reason, but to use his brains as well as his hands, to be his own foreman, to help keep conditions as they should be, to assist the employer in maintaining high efficiency in tools and machines.

"If for any reason he fails to make schedule standard time he still is paid an extra amount until time and a half has been used on the job. If he falls below time and a half, he still receives his regular hourly rate.

"But if he performs his task in less than the schedule set, he gains by just that much.

"For instance: The standard time for a certain task is one hour, the rate is 25 cents an hour. For doing this certain work in one hour, the man receives a bonus of 5 cents, making a total of 30 cents for the hour.

CAN DOUBLE RATE.

"But, if he be skillful enough to do this work in half an hour, he is paid 30 cents for these thirty minutes, or at the rate of 60 cents an hour.

"If he takes two hours for the job, he is paid 50 cents, or the regular rate of 25 cents an hour.

"Each job is totalled up at the end of the month for each owrkman, his efficiency being determined by dividing the schedule time by the actual time, and at this rate of efficiency the bonus is paid.

"The gang foreman is paid a bonus depending upon the average efficiency of the men under his supervision; and the department foreman is paid a bonus dependent upon the efficiency of all the various gangs and the manner in which the work has been scheduled through his department. Each department has a set schedule for each engine, and every part must be completed by that time.

"This method is utterly different from the piece-work system with which it sometimes is confounded. In day work the employé is paid for his time. He gets the same wages whether he works extraordinarily well or very poorly. In piece work he is paid for output, time being no consideration. Under the individual effort system he is guaranteed his regular hourly rate, irrespective of out put. It is the foreman's duty, as well as his own, to avoid unnecessary delays. By increasing his efficiency he increases his remuneration. His hours are definitely fixed; his nights and Sundays are his own. Overtime being recognized as an evil, both by employer and employé, it is eliminated as far as possible. Time and one-half is paid for overtime when it is performed.

"The system has worked most satisfactorily to all interests on the Santa Fe. Apparently it has come to stay."

EARLY-CLOSING PROGRESS.

Movement Gains Headway Among the Merchants and Most of Them Adopt Idea.

The Saturday-night closing movement has gathered headway during the past week ,and a majority of merchants are getting into line. Every department and dry goods store has agreed to close early Saturday nights throughout the year, and Saturday afternoons during July, August and September. A number of other merchants have followed this example. The clothiers, furnishers and shoe dealers are practically unanimous for closing Saturday nights, but have not agreed to give a half-holiday Saturday afternoons during the hot season. A final meeting of the clothiers, hatters and furnishers will be held tomorrow in the rooms of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association. It is expected their action will be favorable to the closing movement.

Arrangements are being perfected for a jubilee meeting to be held probably on Friday night, which every merchant and his employés will be invited to attend.

Today the ministers will probably take up the subject from the pulpit. The Church Federation has indorsed the movement and petitions have been placed in the hands of more than one hundred ministers to be circulated among their parishioners.

WHITE IS UNDECIDED.

Harry White, former Mayor of Seattle, and representative of Gov. Gillett at the ceremony incident to the ground-breaking for the exposition to be given in Seattle, is still undecided whether he will accept the appointment of commissioner to the exposition. He said yesterday that he contemplates an extended European trip, and this may interfere with his duties as commissioner, in case he accepted. White is not only an enthusiastic Californian, but is also familiar with conditions in Washington.

ANTELOPE VALLEY CASE.

E. M. Durant, Antelope Valley cattle owner, and his foreman, William Doyle, will appear before the United States Commissioner tomorrow to arrange for their hearing on a charge of inclosing government land. Mr. Durant contends he is innocent of the act charged. The case will be watched with interest, as many of the ranchmen in the Antelope district have inclosed lands which may ultimately be proved government property.

ASKS RECONSIDERATION.

A resolution was unanimously adopted by the City Club yesterday asking the Board of Supervisors to reconsider its appointments on the County Highway Commission. The club met at the Westminster Hotel for its luncheon. Lee C. Gates spoke on "The Future Los Angeles."

FOR INDIAN COMMISSIONER.

An entertainment was given at Sherman Institute last night in honor of Commissioner of Indian Affairs Francis E. Leupp. Miss Angel De Cora and Mrs. E. E. Newton accompanied him.

ENDURES TILL EVE OF DEATH.

Threatened With Gun, Wife Seeks Divorce.

Life Gradually Wearing Out Under Marital Yoke.

Strain of Farm Work Kills Unborn Child.

Bernice May Keppel, telling the story of the gradual wearing out of her life in a marital career which destroyed her courage and her health, yesterday stated on the witness stand that she had borne the strain, "off and on," for seventeen years because she had thought she ought to endure it.

"I tried to live with him because I believed it was the right thing to do," she sobbed.

All through her testimony she wept feebly, like one whose spirit no longer holds the strength to weep aloud.

Before the corroborative testimony of Mrs. Alice Serrat, mother of the girl who herself was the mother of dead children, had proceeded very far, Judge Bordwell interrupted her.

"That's all I want to hear," he said. "The woman is entitled to divorce." And Judge Bordwell is considered to be a stern disbeliever in divorce.

The plaintiff, at 16 years of age, had been graduated from school into matrimony, in a small Iowa city. With her husband she had lived there for a year, and then he had exchanged his town property for a farm.

"He used to leave the place and be gone for days," Bernice Keppel testified, "and I had to take care of the stock. He used to treat me cruelly because I did not take care of the place as he expected me to."

She is of the frail type, in physical and mental qualities, which does not harden and grow rugged, adapting itself to harsh environment; and yet, she was of the type that endures.

"My first baby was born dead," she sobbed, "because of the strain of the work on that farm."

In 1902 she had been permitted to pay a visit of five months to her mother, who had come to Los Angeles from Iowa. In this period her broken health was restored and some of her shattered ideals of life reborn.

"He wanted me to go back to him," she said dully, "and I went. I lived the same life over again."

BRIGHT RAY OF HOPE.

A few months later a bright ray of hope had come into her dreary existence. The Iowa farm was to be sold and the life for which nature had not fitted her was to end. Her husband had decided to make his home in Los Angeles.

In joyous anticipation Bernice Keppel had signed the deed, her thoughts dwelling delightedly on the sunny city where she expected to find once more the joy of life.

And then Cyrus Keppel had changed his mind. From the Iowa farm they went to a farm in Western Kansas.

"The old life over again," said the woman on the witness stand.

Another child was born, and lived. And in his struggling life the once defeated mother found a new will to live. It could not last, however, in the environment to which she was so little suited. She felt it going, month by month, till her life became a desert of emotion once more, as it had been on the Iowa farm.

"For seven years we lived there," she testified. "When little Albert was four years old and while my husband was in Arizona looking after some horses, I grew so sick that I had to call a doctor. He asked me about my life, and I told him. He told me I must leave the farm and go back to my mother in Los Angeles.

"I came here." The tear-stained face lighted up a little at the memory—but the shadow settled down again and the voice broke once more.

"I went back," she said. "He wanted me to go."

Meanwhile, however, Cyrus Keppel had tried to secure a divorce from her on the ground of desertion, but dropped the suit.

At last he had come to Los Angeles to make a home. The witness stated that it was not a happy one, though for one short period he had tried to make it pleasant for her, after the crowning tragedy of her life.

"Little Albert died," said the witness in a hushed voice. "He promised he would do better then; he promised it by the deathbed. He kept his promise for a little while."

DEATH SOFTENS HIM.

Under the softening influence of death he had deeded the Los Angeles home to his wife. Some time afterward, when that influence had worn off, he asked her to mortgage the place as he was in need of money.

Perhaps with a vision of other prairie farms before her, Bernice Keppel had found strength to refuse.

"He brought out a revolver," the plaintiff testified, "and began cleaning it, saying he was going to kill me. I told him I did not care, that I was ready to die." Then she left him, going to her mother.

An old neighbor of the family in the Iowa town, Wright by name, who also had come to make his home in Los Angeles in later years, took the witness stand.

"I am 76 years old," he said in response to a question. "Yes, I knew her since she was half grown. I lived in the same school district with her, and she and my daughters went to school together.

"Yes, it was known that Keppel was generally irritable. In the time before they went away to live on a farm it was felt about there that the little girl had a great deal to put up with."

Mrs. Serrat testified that her daughter had been in perfect health as a young girl, and was in good health still when her husband took her away to the farm.

"The first time she came out to me she was sick, but got better before she went back. She was much worse when she came here from Kansas."

It seemed she might have told a great deal more, but Judge Bordwell, who has said that every dissolution of marriage is a wound upon the body of society, said she need not say it.

Cyrus A. Keppel is a real estate man with offices in the First National Bank building.

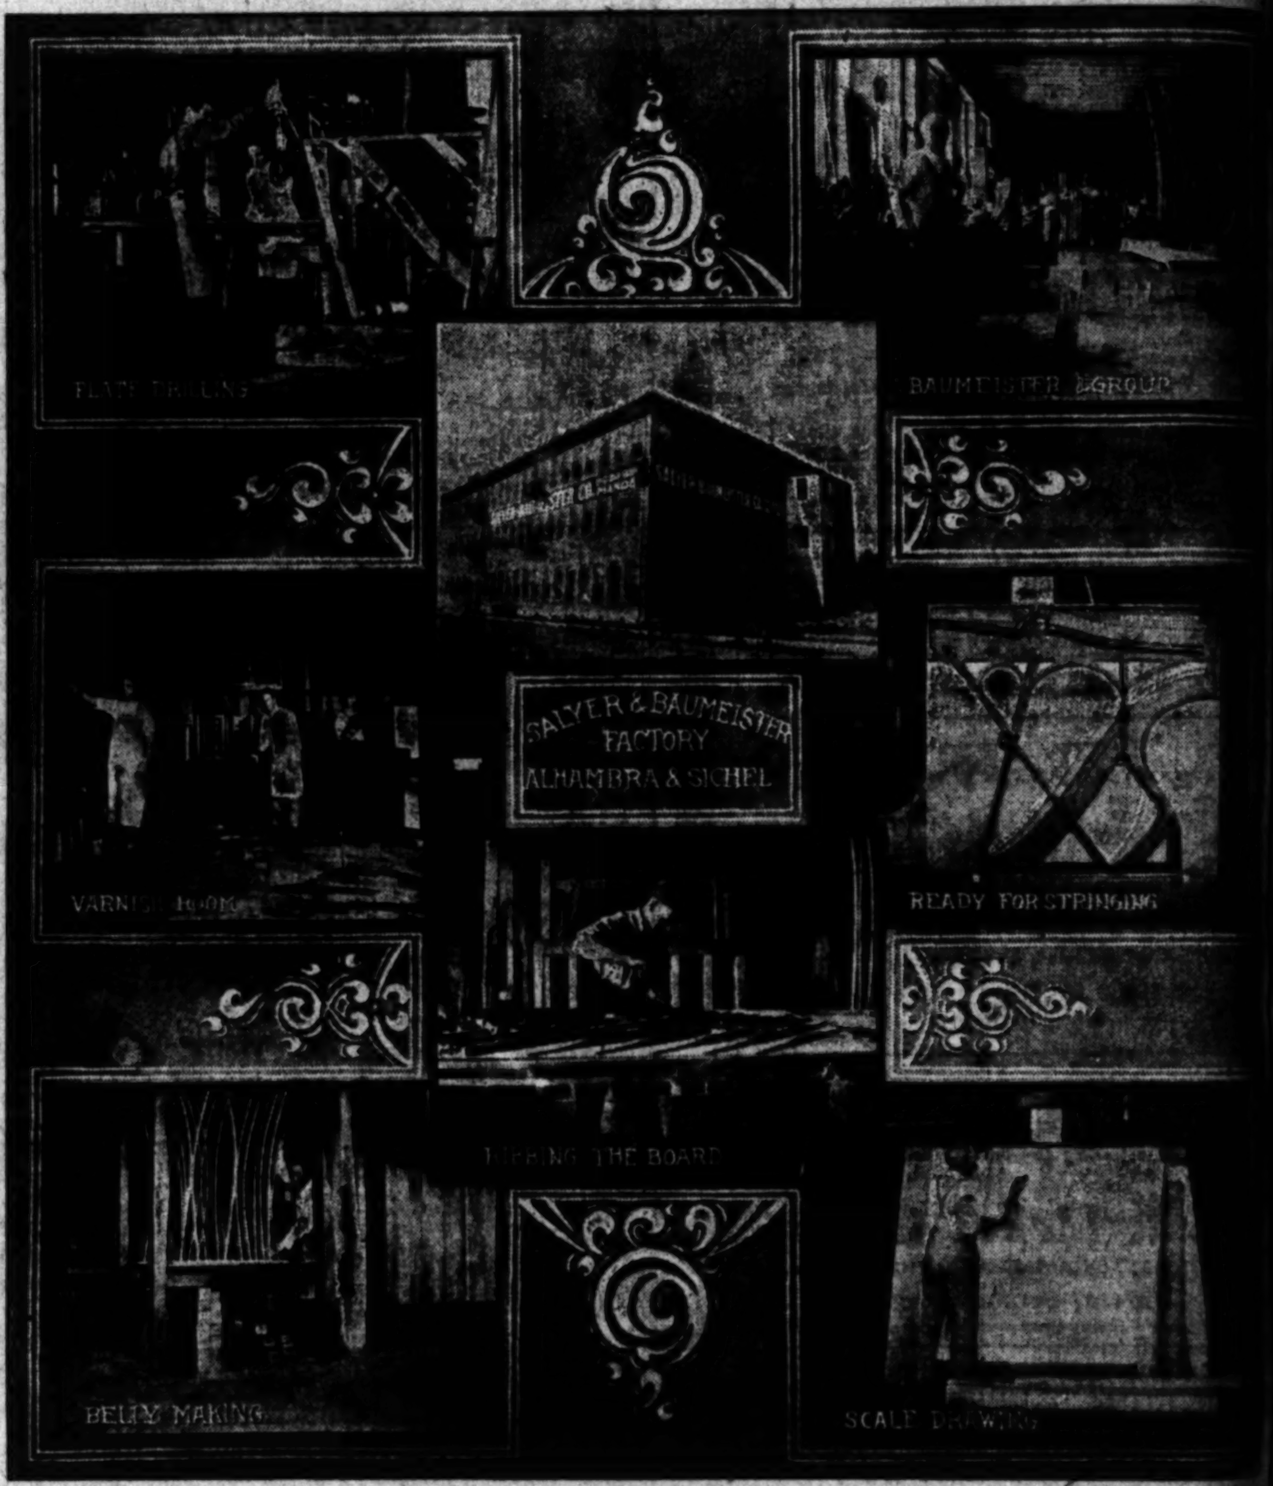
SALYER-BAUMEISTER

PIANOS

...Made in Los Angeles...



We take great pleasure as well as pride in announcing to the readers of the Sunday Times the completion of a lot of Sal meister pianos—the first ever manufactured in Los Angeles. We do not mean that we assemble the parts, for we make everything that goes into the piano. The case, back, pin block, hammers, sounding-board—are all made here; even the cast, drilled and finished in this city. This leaves only the ivory keys, the action and part of the hardware to pay freight the East. If anyone tells you that pianos can't be built here, ask him to go over to the corner of Alhambra Avenue and Sich and say that to Baumeister, the Master Builder. Should you meet a doubting Thomas or a commercial Tory who is down products and friendly to the foreign manufacturer, tell him for us that you will stake your life on the proposition that no lay his finger on a point of superiority in his leader over the home piano, no matter how gray headed its reputation. These geles pianos are in fact first class in every particular.

HOME PRODUCTS AGAINST THE WORLD

No, you hadn't heard of this but it has been going on quietly since about the first of the year. This city, you know, is a great place to attract celebriti Baumeister is with us for the rest of his days. But let us get back to his story. In 1868, as a young man skilled in cabin the Master Builder entered the establishment of Steinway & Sons, where he remained for over eight years mastering ev of the trade so far as is possible with any one concern. For five years thereafter he worked for Weber, then two years wi at which time he became a member of the firm of A. Baus & Co. In 1894 he began the manufacture of the Baumeister many hundreds of which we have sold in this city, giving almost universal satisfaction. We were all the while sending for Baume pianos—we sent for Baumeister just once, and here he is, working like a Trojan to outdo all previous records in the productio high-class, artistic pianos. We promise our friends that we share this ambition with Mr. Baumeister very heartily. We that merit wins and that we shall have success—surprising success from the start. We are making pianos as good as mone skill can produce. We believe the public will be quick to appreciate and respond to an earnest and sincere effort along lines. We cordially invite intending purchasers and others to visit our ware rooms and factory, and on our part we pledge selves to put out such pianos as not only we shall be proud of, but that the high character of the pianos shall appeal strongly to pride.

Baldwin Refrigerators for Government Hospitals

...Twenty-Second Year...

The Baldwin Refrigerator Company has been notified that its proposal to furnish the U. S. public health and marine hospital service with refrigerators for the current fiscal year has been accepted, making the twenty-second consecutive year that this important branch of the government service has adopted the Baldwin dry air refrigerator for use in all its hospitals and quarantine stations. So highly were these refrigerators regarded by the surgeons and stewards as far back as 1884-1885, that one of them was included in the government exhibit at world's exposition, New Orleans, marked "Standard refrigerator for hospital use."—Burlington Free Press, August 18, 1906.

The autos now have to go through Venice and it is feared that some of them stop on their way to the attractions at Pier avenue, which are reached from Venice over a speedway that runs a block back from and parallel with the wide cement walk along the ocean front.

It is said that Kinney now has agreed to grade and improve Lake avenue so that the autos can go that way if they wish, but there is a tangle between him and the city as to the grade.

THIRDLY AND LASTLY.

On top of everything else, and there is a good deal more to tell on both sides, it is asserted by some of the Trustees that Kinney, in building his breakwater, brought about a condition that is adding acres and acres of ocean front to his possessions, while other sections down the beach are being cut away.

With these few remarks and many more, the situation has reached the point where the Trustees are about to take up the petition of disincorporation. Grave complications may follow this step, City Attorney Anderson says. The Venice people say it is their only remedy for conditions that do not suit them. The Venice Chamber of Commerce even now is preparing to follow the first petition with another.

The trustees admit that some of the circumstances operate in favor of the Venice movement. They say that Ocean Park proper never will accept the name of Venice; that the older section will go into Santa Monica before it will give in to the demands of the people down the beach.

POWDER SCATTERS BOY.

Too Previous Celebration of the Fourth Proves Bad for Lad at Safford, Arizona.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) June 28.—A too-previous celebration of Independence Day at Safford resulted in disabling one lad from participation in the exercises of the Fourth. Rolla Bingham, aged 14, ignited five pounds of black powder in a sheet iron can and then sat on the can. In the resultant explosion, Bingham was disintegrated to a remarkable degree, considering the fact that he was not killed. He was blown high in air and considerable sized sections of anatomy were distributed around about, the matter of burns being of importance as well.

The W. C. Greene string of racers, which has been wintered at the Territorial Fair Grounds near Phoenix, has been sent to Cananea, Mexico, where Greene expects to build a fine track and to start horse racing on a grand scale in northern Mexico.

George Truman, retiring secretary of the Territorial Board of Control, has been appointed superintendent of the Territorial Fair, to succeed Vernon L. Clark, who has resigned after service in the two fairs thus far given.

Agostin Pina, Mexican Consul at Phoenix, has been appointed Consul General for Mexico in Arizona.

At Buckeye, about thirty-two miles west of Phoenix, yesterday, George W. Crooks committed suicide by shooting himself in the head with a rifle. He was 47, a native of Iowa, a resident of the Buckeye neighborhood for the past two years. He had a wife and seven children and was in good circumstances, with a well-improved and profitable farm. The suicide is charged to recurring and seemingly incurable headaches.

"MAYOR OF WATTS" ARRESTED.

Shining Political Light Accused of Disturbing Peace and Threatening to Fight.

J. F. Donahue, the "Mayor of Watts," was arrested yesterday and brought to Los Angeles. On July 11 he will be tried on a misdemeanor charge.

Donahue, who is a brewery wagon driver, has been a shining light in the political life of the flourishing town of Watts, and is suspected of looking forward with eagerness to the time of incorporation.

And this noted person has been accused by D. C. Lamb of disturbing the peace of the neighborhood of the Pacific Electric depot in Watts, of using loud and offensive language and of threatening to fight. Lamb further accuses him of tumultuous conduct, and vile and profane language in the presence of women.

THE BEST WIFE.

The eternal question of the duties of a wife, and the problem as to how a wife may best shape her conduct and actions, have been up a little more prominently during the past week than usual. The stir has been caused, no doubt, by the utterances of a prominent eastern clubwoman, who has boldly declared that the only safe course for a wife to pursue is to immolate herself absolutely in her husband, to adopt his religion, have no opinions on any subject whatever, except those which he entertains, and to watch his appetite for victuals as a helmsman watches the needle in order that she may cook exactly to suit him.

Surely this view of the relations that should exist between man and wife is far-fetched. As a matter of fact, are not the domestic relations matters that adjust and regulate themselves much as the laws of supply and demand do, and as other natural laws that are amenable to human conditions? In other words, do not people get along together according to their lights and as God has made them? It is because we are living in a hysterical age that we have become hysterical on the marriage question.

It is ridiculous to say that the best wife is the wife who is practically afraid to say her soul is her own—the woman who has no ideas except those that her husband entertains, and who devotes herself wholly to a study of her lord's gastronomic demands. That kind of wife is simply a female mollycoddle, a nonentity and a person who could not hope to retain her husband's respect. The man who would not tire of that sort of a wife about the third day of their copartnership isn't the man that any woman of sense and sentiment would desire for a husband.

The best wife is she who is her husband's helpmeet, his joy in prosperity, his consolation in adversity, his adviser in days of doubt, his solace in grief, his haven when buffeted and beaten by the storms of life. While it is undoubtedly best that the man and the woman who are joined together for life should agree in their opinions of religion and other questions of conscience as nearly as possible, it does not at all follow that they should quarrel when they honestly differ on those problems. For instance, if a woman be a devoted Christian and the husband an agnostic, should he strive to force her to his way of thinking, or should she abandon her profound beliefs and convictions merely to agree with him? By no means. There are thousands of men and women in this country, living serenely, lovingly and most happily together, who differ radically on the subject of religion and on other subjects, as well.

The best wife is assuredly not the wife who never has a mind of her own, but it is she who loves her husband and tries to make him happy, no matter how far he may differ from her in some things. It is she who loves her home and her household gods next to her Creator, and who strives to do her work as God gives it to her to do. And wherever she goes blessings follow in her footsteps, the angels sing to her soul, and the beauty and the sacredness of life blossom into flower at the holy touch of her hand.

MARVELOUS TALE OF MANY CITIES.

The Times proceeds this Sunday morning with the second installment of impressive charts, carefully compiled tables and luminous text showing the marvelous manner in which the city of Los Angeles has outstripped in growth in every respect all the rapid municipalities of this country and age.

Chart E shows the financial career of the city of Los Angeles in the course of sixteen years. There is no room to question or dispute the exhibit made in this striking chart. The clearinghouse for the banks in the different cities furnish the data for this comparison. The Los Angeles clearinghouse was established in 1890, just sixteen years ago. It then ranked at the very bottom of the list of the forty-four clearinghouse cities in the United States. In 1900, at the end of a single decade, it had risen to the thirty-second place from the top, having made a gain over fourteen cities taken in 1890, and of a much larger number, inasmuch as new cities continually enter the clearinghouse list. Six years later the city jumped to sixteenth place, having made a gain of nearly 54 per cent. This is the fastest growth, financially, of any city in the country.

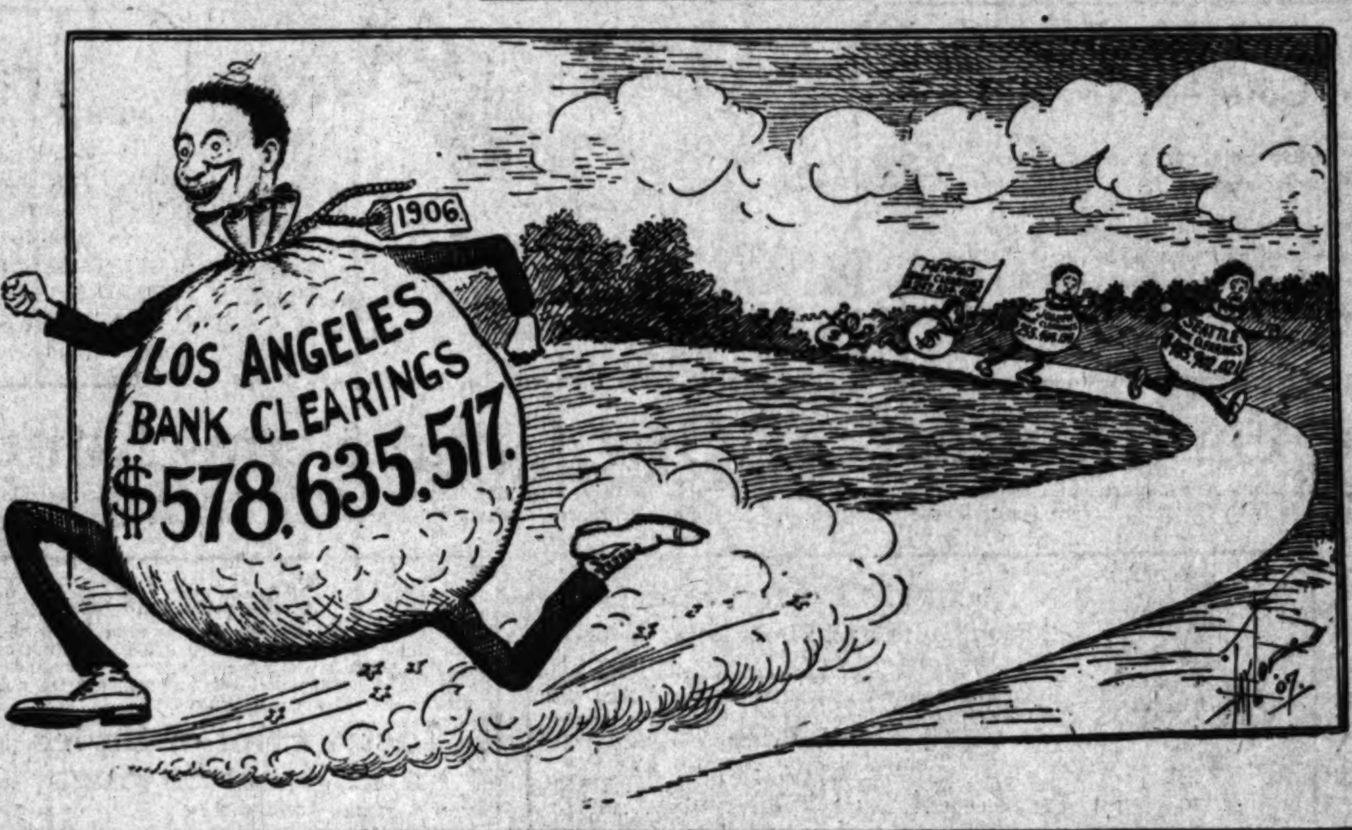
Chart F takes up the same study, showing in skeleton the position of the cities in 1890, and then in the solid line their status in 1906. Los Angeles springs forward from almost a mere point to a line stretching across several columns of the paper and outstripping every other of the ten cities with which the comparison is made in this chart. The growth of Seattle would seem marvelous were it not for the comparison with that of Los Angeles. We may take a good deal of semi-local pride in the fact that next to our own city comes a sister city of the Pacific Coast, with such tremendous strides in growth in population, wealth and manufacturing, and everything going to make a great municipality.

We now come to table 7, accompanying these charts of today, and going backward in the study to those of a week ago. This table sets out the population, manufacturing establishments, capital invested, the number of wage-earners employed, the aggregate amount of wages paid out and the value of the products of the various manufacturing industries. The comparison is beween 1900 and 1905, showing the population absolutely as given in the United States census for the last census year and that of 1905, as estimated by the Mayors of the different cities. As to the industrial establishments, the data are taken from the Federal government reports.

This comparison covers five of the leading cities of the country. Again, it is gratifying to Pacific Coast people to notice that Seattle stands second, Los Angeles being first on every count.

The charts and tables give a view capable of being taken in by a glance of the eye; but the student of economic subjects will not seek to grasp this matter in its entirety without a careful perusal of the carefully-prepared letterpress going with each chart and table.

AND STILL INCREASING THE LEAD.



"ROCKY'S" BROAD VIEWS.

Is not this latest charity fad of John D. Rockefeller typical of the man? What scope his plans always take! The average philanthropist is satisfied with becoming a "slummer." Rockefeller's charities are as far-reaching as a campaign in oil, or in "gobbling up" a railroad. Instead of seeking out some babe suffering from unskillful care, he founds a school and puts expert teachers at its head to teach mothers how to take care of whole families in those strata of society where "race suicide" is unknown.

That is the way to reach these evils. There are millions of mothers who do not know the first rudiments of housekeeping, the most elementary laws of health, the simplest problems in political economy. They do not know how to cook a decent meal. They have no conception of the hygienic value of cleanliness. They are deficient in skill with a needle. As to the relative value of foods, the wholesomeness of one thing, the danger to health of another, they never hear a word.

Millions of children die because their mothers do not know how to feed them, do not realize the importance of keeping them clean, have no conception of the value of pure air. Tens of thousands of men are "driven to drink" because their homes are run without a bit of regard to economy, because more food is wasted through ignorance than is made fit to eat by proper cooking.

May Rockefeller's newest charity project prove as rich in results as his colossal plans of concentration in business by which his great oil octopus grew its long, strong tentacles. Roosevelt will attend to the tentacles when they seek to gather in what does not belong to them. But let no one interfere with "Rocky's" trained nurses!

SCHENK.

There is only one thing to do with Schenck, the unspeakable police commissioner, and that is to remove him from office immediately, Mr. Mayor.

Your administration becomes a shame and a reproach if an officer of the city, a member of the Board of Police Commissioners, charged with the public's protection, is to insult women on the street and, with the swagger of a Czar, to imprison their escorts who protest.

What is to become of our wives and daughters if they are to be affronted rather than protected by the police organization?

To tolerate such a state of things for a day would be unheard-of and scandalous. Schenck must go.

Another officer of the city who should be dismissed is the police sergeant who reported to the Mayor that the two respectable citizens on whom Schenck perpetrated the outrage were drunk. This sergeant was too eager to defend an indefensible act.

Schenck seems to be lacking in brains as well as in decency. "Dressed in a little brief authority," his ego became exaggerated to the point of impossibility.

"I MAGNIFY MY OFFICE."

The great apostle felt that it was his duty to magnify his office. He would not have been the great, true missionary he was had he not done so. Every reformer feels it incumbent on him to magnify his office. If he is a small pretender of a reformer he thinks he magnifies himself by magnifying his office. The real reformer, like Paul, thinks of the office, not of himself.

That is what Miss Reel, who has devoted herself to the elevation of the Indian tribes, is doing when she seeks to enlist the interest of young white men in her Indian pupils as prospective wives. No doubt she is of the true reformer type, honest in her convictions and devoted in her efforts for the permanent good of the Indian race.

But wise men are more or less wary of a man with a mission. They are more wary when it is a woman who feels that she is "called of God as was Aaron." These reformers have to be watched, because so many of them are mere pretenders—"fakes" is the expressive slang phrase. But even where they are honest, their views are likely to be extreme. They are so intent on magnifying their office that their views are sometimes not broad.

And indeed Miss Reel is magnifying her office when she advocates miscegenation between the white and the Indian races. If real whites, not "white trash," are to be induced to marry Indian wives, the effect on the Indian will be an exalting one. If Miss Reel gives away her Indian girls to degenerate whites, the girls will get the worst of it, if they are good for anything. There have been good "squaw men," but their number has not been great.

But the Indian race is not the most important factor in this problem. It is the white race that we must look to. If a union between red and whites would be good for the reds, it is because the whites are, generally speaking, the superior race. Now if this superior race allies itself with any inferior strain, the effect must be bad. A missionary like Miss Reel would no doubt contend that her red proteges are in all respects as good as her own white race. Why then seek an alliance by marriage between the races to elevate the red race? The two races have lived now side by side for 300 years. Nearly ten generations furnish a basis on which to construct conclusions. Granting that the red race has been badly treated by the white does not invalidate the conclusion. The Goths, Vandals and other races of northern Europe who overran Italy were barbarous. They conquered southern Europe, but the civilization of southern Europe conquered the barbarism of the conquerors. The Indian races have always preferred their own way of life to ours excepting in comparatively rare cases. Remove the white race today from North America and the presumption is strong that the red race would revert rapidly to savagery.

What we want here in America at the present time is a carefully-conducted campaign of education which would enlighten young people on the great danger of making marriage alliances with any person, even whites of unsound bodies, minds or spirits. No healthy young man or woman of wholesome mind and good morals is justified in marrying a person afflicted with persistently bad health, with low mental development, or with moral bias. The happiness of the lives of the individuals and the future of our country are at stake. No man of good sense will cross a high strain of poultry, of dogs, of cattle, of horses with a feeble or low strain. An alliance with a higher strain is always sought. Are men of less account than pigs or geese?

To be sure, Miss Reel, like all apostles, is intent on her own work. Like a wise husbandman, she is seeking an alliance for her Indian people with a higher strain. We object, because the new blood must tend to a lower grade of manhood for the whole nation.

WILD-EYED VISIONS.

The eye that can see approaching collapse and threatened disaster to American industries has back of the retina a wild imagination and a diseased mind.

The car building companies in Pittsburgh and vicinity have on their books orders for steel cars from the railroad companies which total $150,000,000. Nor is this all. Inquiries are coming thick and fast asking when orders can be filled for more cars. These inquiries amount to between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000 on top of the $150,000,000 already booked.

The railroads have been taking these cars as fast as they could be turned out and clamoring for quicker delivery for months, and yet they would willingly buy many thousands more if they could see any hope of having them within the next twelve months. Every one of these steel car building companies is booked away ahead for more than a year, and is now planning extensions of plants in order to turn out the work more expeditiously. The need for cars is said to be more urgent than ever before.

One company, whose plant is at Butler, Pa., has 6000 men at work on these steel cars, and is now erecting a new plant at Hammond, Ind., at a cost of $3,000,000. The western railroads have all booked orders for work to be done at this new plant as soon as it is in place.

The Pressed Steel Car Company is said to have orders ahead for 40,000 cars. The Standard is reported to have orders on its books for 50,000. The American Car and Foundry Company has orders for about 26,000 cars. The Cambria Steel Company of Johnstown, owned entirely by the Pennsylvania Railroad, has orders ahead for 10,000 cars. In all, with scattering plants, it is said that there are orders for 150,000 steel or steel underframe cars on the books of these companies.

The Carnegie Steel Company has absolute specifications for 300,000 tons of plates, 200,000 tons of merchant mill products, 150,000 tons of structural material, 100,000 tons of axle products, and an immense tonnage of rails and crude steel.

The merchant furnaces have generally sold their product well through the third quarter of this present year. The Bessemer Pig Iron Association reports that 80 per cent. of its product for the current year is under contract.

American railroads are expending almost $1,000,000,000 during the present year in an effort to procure sufficient equipment, power, and track, including repairs to old roads and the construction of new roads, in order to handle the amount of traffic pressing upon them.

In this connection it is stated on the best authority that if the manufacturers can only turn them out, between 240,000 and 250,000 freight cars will be added to the total equipment of the railroads of the United States, 3000 passenger cars will be built, and over 6000 locomotives added to the steam power now in use, in 1907.

Where are the signs of any slackness in our industries, of any stay to prosperity?

FRANCIS MURPHY.

Expressions of love for Francis Murphy are heard on every hand. As these lines are written the doctors say that this sweet character may pass on at any hour or may linger on earth for several weeks more, but there seems to be slight chance of his tarrying much longer with us. Indeed the summons may have come ere these lines are read. Murphy has done a magnificent work and will leave a glorious heritage. His mode of combating the liquor evil has always been fundamentally right—to lay the ax at the root of the tree, to appeal to human nature, to conquer the appetite, instead of resorting to sumptuary and superficial measures. It can be said of Francis Murphy what Truth will say of few men—that he has ever had "charity for all, malice toward none." The affection and esteem that his life and character have inspired are as widespread as the continent and as deep as the eternal seas.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Do you blame that St. Louis girl for seizing the first opportunity to change her name? Think of a young lady, rich, cultivated, bright and beautiful, who must have her soul harrowed daily by being addressed as Miss Tinker. It is so susceptible, too, of all sorts of manipulation, or rather of literipulation. What can't you twist the appellation into? Then the association of ideas.

Behold, too, the name she acquires by marriage! How sweet to be addressed as Señora Manuel Garcia Lugo. The lucky suitor for the hand of this beautiful girl from the land of the show-mes is "dashing." Of course, he is. What man with such a name, with the blood of the grandees of old Spain in his veins, could help being "dashing"? He is handsome, too. Another foregone conclusion. All the conquistadores are reported to have been both dashing and handsome. Their sons should be.

The Missouri girl's fortune? Well, what of that? Father Tinker has enough money to make his daughter comfortable, married or single. All this wealthy brewer's daughter has to look out for is social standing. She gets that. Capt. Lugo has enough of that to match all the money coined out of hops and barley. He is a man of standing in his own country, and comes to the Jamestown show to represent Mexico.

Come, daddy Tinker, be reasonable. Your daughter wins (in spite of her name and your money) a husband who is all a young woman's heart could yearn for. He is young, handsome, dashing, of good blood, good manners, good bearing, brave, and, we will warrant, an ardent lover. Bestow your blessing and a big bank check on your children, and send them down to the beautiful city of Old Mexico and the grand society there, with means to maintain themselves as becomes your daughter's beauty and her husband's rank.

"Well, anyhow," said Cassidy, "the new mill is fitted up fine. Shure, everything's in its right place."

"Not at all," replied Casey, "whin I wint through there th' other day I seen a lot o' red buckets marked 'Fur Fire Only,' an', faix, there was wather in thim."

ALASKA RICH IN BLACK DIAMONDS

BUT COAL MINING INDUSTRY IS LITTLE DEVELOPED.

Deposits of All Grades Known. Much of Fuel May Be of Great Value Locally While Unsuitable for Shipment to a Distance—Government Making Study of Field.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON (D. C.) June 22.—Of the 600,000 square miles forming the Territory of Alaska, it is estimated that 12,644 square miles are underlain by coal-bearing rocks—that is, rocks that probably contain coal seams—and 1238 square miles contain known deposits of coal, ranging in age from Carboniferous to Tertiary and in composition from anthracite of good quality through high-grade semi-bituminous steam and coking coals and ordinary bituminous coal to lignites of various characters. Many of the known coal deposits are of great thickness, especially where the coal carries a large high grade of coal and great thickness of beds are as a rule accompanied by geologic structure unfavorable to mining.

From the Pacific Coast to Bering Sea and the Arctic slope, through the valleys of Copper and Yukon Rivers and their tributaries coal beds are widely distributed; and although it is unlikely that any except the high-grade coals of the Pacific Coast and the Matanuska and Bering River fields are suitable for shipment far from the mines, many others may be locally of extreme importance and great value.

The coal mining industry of Alaska is still practically undeveloped, the total production for 1906—the year of greatest output—being but 6660 short tons, valued at $20,000. The most active mining operations have been on Cook Inlet, in Southwestern Alaska, on the Yukon, in Seward Peninsula, and at Cape Lisburne. All of these were for the purposes of local fuel for small coastwise or river steamers, at mining camps and at canneries.

Alaskan coals have in recent years been the subject of a large amount of special investigation by the Geological Survey, and in addition much information concerning coal has been gathered each year since regular geologic work was begun in Alaska by survey parties working primarily on other problems. A brief summary of the results of these investigations, illustrated by a map showing the distribution and area of coal and coal-bearing rocks, is included in the "Report of Progress of Investigations of Mineral Resources of Alaska in 1906," published by the Survey as Bulletin No. 314. This summary, prepared by G. C. Martin, is not intended to be complete in itself, but it supplements more complete and comprehensive summaries which have been already published and to which reference is made, and is preliminary to move detailed discussions that will be published on the completion of investigations now in progress.

The work of the season of 1907 will include studies of the coal-bearing rocks of the southeastern part of the Territory of the Yukon coal fields so far as they are accessible from Yukon River. Field work was begun early in May by W. W. Atwood, who is assisted by H. M. Eakin. Mr. Atwood reports the work in southeastern Alaska already completed. It is believed that the investigations this year will add materially to existing knowledge of the coal resources of the Territory.

HOROSCOPE FOR THIS DAY.

BY COZETTE.

"Temptations crowd the path today; be true Lest evil consequences should ensue."

This is the 181st day of the year; moon's age, 19 days. Mars is morning star. Uranus is in benefic aspect with the moon.

This is a day of evil temptations. They will crowd thick and fast on your way, and many will come in an innocent guise.

It is a good day to travel, especially by land.

Those whose birth date this day is will have a most active and prosperous year, and will succeed wonderfully well.

They must expect sickness in the domestic circle, but it will not be serious.

Those in employment will be promoted.

A child born today will be fortunate all its life, and will rise very rapidly in the world. It will do best, however, by remaining in employment.

Danced on Their Hands.

A strange scene was witnessed the other day in the office of a Paris police superintendent. A woman of middle age, named Mme. VOICES FROM THE STATE.

Rights of the Japanese.

When San Francisco hoodlums smash a few Japanese and a great many American windows, that is not an international issue. The international treaty merely grants the Japanese the same rights as Americans. When hoodlums smash an American's window, his right is to have them arrested and prosecuted. The Japanese has the same right. Until San Francisco denies him access to the courts, or otherwise deprives him of the remedy an American would have under like conditions, there is no issue.—[Fresno Republican.

Can Carry It Easily.

There is nothing faint-hearted about Los Angeles. Having acquired a debt of $23,000,000, it is now talking of forming a million-population club to help carry the burden. According to the tune that the hang-backs have been singing, they will need about that population to "tote" it.—[Sacramento Union.

A Good Investment.

It is no wonder that the people of Los Angeles voted ten to one in favor of bringing the Owens River into town for a water supply, at a cost of $23,000,000. The waterworks of that city now are said to yield a net profit to the city of $800,000. It would take less than one generation to pay the whole cost of the enterprise with the present population; much less with the growing population that Los Angeles has. Every city can supply its own water cheaper than any private corporation can, if it has a decently honest city government.—[Salinas Index.

INDIANS SCRATCH ARMS.

Illustrative of the readiness of Indians to learn by an object lesson, Miss Estelle Reel, superintendent of Indian schools, said yesterday: "While visiting an Indian reservation not far from Santa Fé, I met a charming Chicago girl who has devoted her life to Indian work. She became greatly beloved among the tribe, and could do almost anything with them. It was proposed to vaccinate the Indians, but they would not submit to the operation. This girl finally persuaded her own friends living on one side of a creek to be vaccinated, they submitting out of love for her. Later a scourge of smallpox swept over the tribe. Her Indians were immune but those on the other side of the creek suffered a terrible mortality. Later one of the chiefs said: 'Heap good to scratch arm. No sick when smallpox come. All have arm scratched.' There was no difficulty thereafter in vacinating those Indians."

PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Meeting in secret the Finance Committee of the Council is revising department pay rolls with the view of reducing the current expense of the city government; it is reported that more than 100 places will be abolished.

The health department is investigating a mysterious attempt at poisoning growing out of a case of too much mother-in-law.

The Aqueduct Bureau is working on a plan to secure wide publicity for the advertisement for supplies to be used in constructing the big conduit.

S. C. Candler received the appointment yesterday as inspector of ice cream and soft drinks.

Probation was denied, in the Superior Court, yesterday, to W. W. Stanley, an Alabama youth of good family, who had fallen into bad company and acted as watcher while a companion committed burglary. He was sentenced to two years in State prison.

"Red Laura" yesterday was permitted to withdraw her plea of guilty to grand larceny and plead guilty to petit larceny. She was sentenced to six months in the County Jail.

Sweeping changes were made, yesterday, by the Superior Court judges in the judicial machinery of the county. After Monday the criminal cases will be divided between Judge Smith and Judge Wilbur.

E. H. Phelan, who Friday afternoon committed a brutal assault upon his wife, yesterday pleaded guilty to a charge of battery in the Police Court and will be sentenced tomorrow.

Raymond Swett was held to answer to an embezzlement charge after preliminary examination in the Police Court yesterday.

AT THE CITY HALL.

RETRENCHMENT FOR NEW YEAR.

EMPTY CASH DRAWER GREETS CITY EMPLOYEES.

Finance Committee at Work in Secret Reducing Salaries and Cutting Off Useless Employees—Not Enough Cash for Pay Roll—Gleanings for Money Lenders.

It was with heavy hearts that several hundred city employés saw the old fiscal year close at noon yesterday with the time-honored formality of locking the main floors of the City Hall.

Not in years before has the grass in the political pasture been nipped so short. The municipal cash drawer is almost empty. During the next three months every office force will be reduced to the minimum limit, and most of those who remain in the city's service will be compelled to hypothecate their warrants with money lenders or wait three months for their pay.

At least 100 men went out of the municipal service with the old year. In not a single department are extra men coming in with the new.

The last fiscal year reached the high-water mark in the number of new positions created, also in the number of salaries raised. Now has come the time for retrenchment.

The fiscal year closes without a deficit, but there is no money to tide over the two hard months until the revenue from the new year's taxes is available. And the City Auditor will not permit the raids on the bond funds that once characterized the close of the old fiscal year and the opening of the new.

Meeting in secret, the Finance Committee went over each pay roll carefully last week. They have made their first cursory examination; this week and the week after the probing will continue; when the budget for the new fiscal year is presented to the Council there will be painful surprises for place men in many departments.

"We found it impossible to hold our committee meetings in the City Hall," said Councilman Dromgold yesterday. "It is imperative that we give to these pay rolls an unimpassioned, uninfluenced review. It is business and not politics that the city needs most. For the new fiscal year our expenditures must be not greater than our income."

Mr. Dromgold said that the committee may make mistakes in selecting positions to abolish, but he thinks that these cases will adjust themselves soon. Few suffer in silence when working for the city, and a department that is overworked generally manages to let its needs to known.

Present indications are that the Finance Committee will be forced to abandon its pruning knife and use an ax when it begins to consider the department estimates of expense for the new year. The half-dozen estimates already announced presage an increase in expense that will be almost a million dollars greater than the estimated increase in revenue. The Finance Committee must make the budget estimate conform to the Auditor's estimate of revenue.

To an outsider, it looks as though the seven fat years of the new century at the City Hall are to be followed by others that will be correspondingly lean. While the Owens River aqueduct is building, the City Hall departments, including police and street maintenance, are to be kept on short rations.

Out of this year's tax money, $250,000 must go to the outfall sewer. It is proposed to take another $100,000 for bridges and a like sum for the fire department. This will consume about all the increase in tax revenue, and there will be no "extras" for the salary roll.

Warned by expression of opinion uttered by their constituents, several Councilmen have grown suddenly lukewarm on the question of bond issues. They are convinced that the taxpayers desire at least a breathing respite after the Owens River bond election before confirming other bond issues.

HEALTH OFFICE MYSTERY.

TOO MUCH MOTHER-IN-LAW.

The health department has asked the Captain of Detectives to assist in unraveling what appears to be a mysterious attempt at poisoning, growing out of a case of too much mother-in-law.

Ten days ago a middle-aged man, bearded and unkempt in appearance, brought to the city chemist a sample of apricot pie for analysis. "This is some pie that was offered to a fat woman," he said; "she fed it to the dog in place of eating it herself, and the dog died. I guess it's another case of mother-in-law."

He declined to give either name or address, but seemed very anxious to know when the analysis would be completed. He said he rides home on the Glendale car.

City Chemist Miller said yesterday that the pie was well seasoned with strychnine; the strychnine crystals glistened all over it.

When the man with the Santa Ana whiskers returned for the analysis, Miller declined to tell him the result until he should give his name and address. This the countryman declined to do.

"The dog died," he said. "I guess that's analysis enough. You see, the old lady had some property, and the son-in-law wanted to get at it quick. This morning she told him that she knew all, and he kited. I guess he has left the country."

Miller wanted the countryman to wait until he could send for the captain of detectives. "Oh, this isn't a case for the detectives," responded the old man; "it happened outside the city, anyhow."

By this time his suspicions got the better of his curiosity, and the man of the poison pie left the health office without his sample.

A fat woman, a bearded man and a son-in-law, who has left the country, are the clews to the poisoning mystery of the health department.

FOR WIDE COMPETITION.

TO ADVERTISE CONTRACTS.

A publicity and promotion bureau may become a part of the general plan of the Owens River Aqueduct Commission. The work to be performed in this department would be to secure as wide a publicity as possible for the advertisement for bids on furnishing supplies for building the conduit.

During the next five years several million dollars will be expended for supplies, the more competition the city can secure the greater will be the saving on the contracts.

A list of all the more prominent public work contractors of the country is now being prepared in the engineering department of the construction bureau. A water department official explained the details of the use of this list yesterday as follows:

"When a contract of any magnitude is to be let, each person or company who might be interested in bidding will be notified and will be furnished with a copy of the specifications.

"Nor is this all in the way of advertising. The large technical journals throughout the country are showing the greatest interest in the construction of the aqueduct. They have consented to publish brief statements of the contracts that are to be let, and on the opening of bids, the names of bidders, the bids submitted and the awards. Locally the official newspaper and other publications will be depended upon to give the required publicity.

"To provide for fair competition, provisions will be made for each bidder bidding exactly on the same thing and the specifications will not be vague or capable of more than one construction. Contractors will not be required to take the risk of any contingencies as to unknown conditions to be developed in the work.

"As much care at the present time is being taken in the purchase of $100 worth of goods as in the letting of a $30,000 contract. Whether the purchase is large or small the larger firms handling the goods desired are given written notice and invited to submit bids. This method saved the city in three months $1300 on an aggregate of more than $6000 worth of purchases.

"The aqueduct bureau, when the construction work is well under way, will have need for the products of many crafts and trades. Dealers are urged to send their catalogues and price lists to the aqueduct bureau, purchasing department, 1400 Union Trust building, together with specification as to what lines of goods the seller is prepared to furnish.

"Once each month the purchasing department is required to present a report to the Chief Engineer, showing just what competition has been obtained. The instructions are that careful note is to be made of any dealer furnishing inferior goods or not complying in every particular with the specifications. The results of the month's purchases is then incorporated in the monthly report of the bureau to the Board of Public Works.

"In being able to prevent combinations among bidders and in providing for fair treatment to all bidders Los Angeles is particularly fortunate. There are no requirements which make it necessary for a bidder to let any one else know that he is bidding.

"Philadelphia as an instance, keeps in force an old ordinance to protect combinations or favored bidders. If a person is to bid on a contract he is required to give notice of his intention at least several hours before the bids are opened. With this knowledge it lies within the power of a combination or ring to freeze out any contractor willing and anxious to to pursue honest methods.

NEW DRINK INSPECTOR.

Health Officer Powers announced the appointment yesterday of S. C. Candler to the place of ice cream and drink inspector. The position is a new one; it is created for two months only and the inspector is expected to inspect soda fountains, ice cream parlors and saloons with a view of decreasing the danger of metallic or ptomaine poisoning during the hot weather.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

HIS WILD OATS YIELD HARVEST.

OLD SOUTHERN FAMILY SHAMED BY BLACK SHEEP.

Young in Years, but Old in Experience of Evil, He Must Spend Two Years at San Quentin With Accomplice—Loses High Ideals in Poolroom.

A plea for probation was made in behalf of W. W. Stanley, aged 20 years, and scion of an old and wealthy Alabama family, who had taken a crooked course after going out into the world. The plea was denied by Judge Smith, and the offender sentenced to two years in San Quentin prison.

A short while ago J. Williams was given an equal sentence for the same crime, burglary, and has gone to the same prison. Young Stanley may meet him there. It was through meeting Mr. Williams at an unfortunate time, it seems, that young Stanley came to signal misfortune on his crooked course.

The young fellow, according to his own story, had received a small fortune at the death of his father, and proceeded to squander it. At 18 he married, and intended settling down, but six months later his wife died, and he entered again upon his career as a sower of wild oats. All but the realty, valued at $1000, was spent.

Landing in Los Angeles with little money, he had gone to work in a place not calculated to inspire high ideals in its employés—a poolroom. There he met Williams, who persuaded him to go into a poolroom business. This they had done, and the concern had failed.

Wandering away, through Arizona and Mexico, Stanley at length returned to Los Angeles, "strapped," as he termed it. He again met Williams, who also was moneyless. Together they went to the Arizona poolroom, and Williams effected an entrance. Stanley's part was to watch outside and to give the alarm in case of danger. Danger appeared, at least to the mind of the watcher, and he tapped on the window. Then he went away, and did not see Williams again.

"You have convicted yourself, young man," said Judge Smith. "You are just as bad as the other, and it would be a wound upon the public service to let you go on probation after sending him to spend two years in State prison.

"The law must be administered. It is the judgment of the court that you be confined for the term of two years in the State prison at San Quentin."

The young man turned limply away as the baailiff touched his arm. He had seemed sure of parole.

NEW ORDER OF THINGS.

JUDICIAL MACHINERY CHANGED.

Sweeping changes were made yesterday in the judicial machinery of Los Angeles county.

Judge Smith, who has become a tradition as the judge of the Criminal Department of the Superior Court, will, beginning Monday, have only half of the criminal cases, and the presiding judge, Charles Monroe, will have the assigning of the cases. In lieu of the criminal cases sent to another department, Judge Smith will have one-half the amount of civil cases that judges in other departments have been attending to.

Judge Curtis D. Wilbur will receive the criminal court work taken from Judge Smith's department, and will try no more civil cases. Besides the criminal cases which Judge Monroe shall assign to his department, he will have the work of the Juvenile Court.

WOMAN PUNISHED.

"RED LAURA" GOES TO CELL.

Ollie M. Hurly, known as "Red Laura," whose testimony Friday convicted Phillyaw of petit larceny, yesterday was allowed to withdraw her former plea of guilty to grand larceny and to plead guilty to petit larceny.

"The District-Attorney is very generous to allow you to——" began Judge Smith, and then remembered the testimony given by Mrs. Hurly, that the money stolen from John Biggerstaff had been taken from his clothes after he had undressed, the offense therefore being petit larceny.

"Hum," continued the judge. "It turns out that it's petit larceny, and so you are permitted to change your plea."

"Red Laura" was sentenced to spend six months in the County Jail. Phillyaw will be sentenced tomorrow.

ANNULMENT DENIED.

DIVORCE IS SUGGESTED.

A decree of annulment of marriage, which was sued for by Mrs. Marie Benninger on the ground that Henry Benninger had been a felon before he married her and had deceived her as to his past, was denied yesterday by Judge Borwell.

Mrs. Benninger stated that in Santa Ana, on September 10, 1901, Benninger had been senteced to a year in State prison for burglary, and that since her marriage to the man he had committed another felony, and is now serving a three-year sentence.

Judge Bordwell stated that she had good grounds for divorce.

THE INFERIOR COURTS.

BRUTAL HUSBAND ADMITS GUILT.

FELONY CHARGE IMPOSSIBLE AS WIFE WON'T TESTIFY.

Phelan Will Be Sentenced Tomorrow—His Assault Said to Be Most Fiendish in History of Police Department—Boy Charged With Beating Mother Cries—Swett Held.

E. H. Phelan, who Friday afternoon committed a brutal assault upon his wife, pleaded guilty to a charge of battery before Justice Austin, yesterday, and will be sentenced tomorrow.

In the meantime he will remain in jail, the justice refusing to accept bail. Yesterday morning, when Phelan's case was called, he walked up to the bench with apparent indifference. When arraigned on the battery charge he first pleaded not guilty. His bail was fixed at $500 and in default of that amount, he was returned to the tanks. Later in the day he decided to change his plea and was permitted to return to court and do so.

Phelan's attack, according to the report of police surgeons who cared for Mrs. Phelan, is one of the most brutal in the history of the police department. Yesterday the woman's condition had improved slightly, but it will be several weeks before she will be able to leave the hospital.

A dozen witnesses to the assault have been subpoenaed to give evidence. According to the statements of these witnesses, the assault was entirely unprovoked and was committed while Phelan was sober. It is alleged that Phelan, finding his wife talking to a neighbor, became angered and knocked her down; that he then seized her by the hair and dragged her up the back steps and into the cottage where he completed his cruel work. There is hardly a spot on the woman's body that is not black and blue from the effect of the beating. Great welts appear on her arms and limbs. A bruise on her stomach shows where her husband kicked her. The surgeons are not yet sure that there are not internal injuries.

"It is a pity that we have no felony charge to prefer against this man," said Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Ford, yesterday. "He has been in the Police Court before on this same charge and the woman at that time tried to shield him. If we could secure the woman's promise to testify against the husband we might file a felony complaint, charging assault with intent to commit murder. The woman's injuries would back us up in this allegation. But we cannot compel a woman to testify against her husband and we have to rely on the evidence furnished by the arresting police and the neighbors. We have preferred this battery charge and if the sentence given is the maximum for such cases, he will probably serve for the next six months on the chain gang."

Mother Beater Arraigned.

Penitent and fearful of punishment, Clifford Morgan, a fifteen-year-old boy, yesterday appeared before Justice Rose to answer a charge of battery, sworn to by Mrs. Kate Morgan, the boy's mother.

Morgan is a well-built, athletic-appearing young fellow, and Justice Rose was not disposed to show any leniency. During the past two weeks there have been three or four wife beaters in court, and the youthful "mother beater" was in line for a good long visit to the Detention Home.

Morgan, however, had a story to tell. He said he had been influenced against his mother by stories told him by his father. Mr. and Mrs. Morgan are separated and the boy lives at the father's home most of the time. Yesterday when his attention was called to the fact that he had bruised his mother's face, he cried and said he didn't know what he was doing at that time.

Justice Rose postponed the case fifteen days in order to give the members of the family a chance to adjust differences.

Swett Bound Over.

Raymond Swett was held for trial in the Superior Court on an embezzlement charge, after preliminary examination before Justice Chambers yesterday.

Swett has a long penitentiary record, although a young man. The charge now against him was made by a South Broadway tailor. Swett is accused of having embezzled $500 from the firm of which he was book-keeper. In default of $1000 bail, Swett was returned to the tanks.

BARTLETT ARRAIGNED.

And Still Facts Come to Light Regarding "Oily" Watkins and His Gang.

After a night in the County Jail, G. Maurice Bartlett, the debonair vice-president of "Oily" Watkins's swindling association, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Van Dyke, yesterday, charged with conspiracy against the government, and using the mails for fraudulent purposes. His bail was fixed at $5000.

During the morning Ollie J. Watkins, looking harassed and ill at ease, and his "grand old man," Dr. C. P. V. Watson, paid a visit to his associate, who was detained in the United States Marshal's office pending the acceptance of his bondsmen. Bartlett has been openly charged with misappropriation of funds of the association, and it is expected that he will be put forward by the defense as a scapegoat.

Just how calmly Bartlett will accept this situation remains to be seen. It is said there has been a struggle for supremacy between Watkins and Bartlett for several months. Bartlett was in charge of the New York office of the association and secured more contracts than any other man in the crooked concern. He styled himself "manager" and this is said to have aroused "Oily" Watkins's ire, as he wished to be "the whole thing" in the internal operation of his swindling scheme.

The Federal grand jury will meet again Tuesday afternoon. The government officials have not concluded presenting testimony before that body. A number of witnesses have been subpoenaed, who live at a distance, and it may be several days before all the evidence is presented.

The government officials continue to probe into the past career of "Oily" Watkins and Dr. Watson. Watkins is said to have organised two fruit companies in Rialto which were swindling schemes similar to the California Fruit Growers' Association. One was called the Golden Fruit Land and Water Company, and the other the Wolverine Fruit Company. Both died a natural death.

A communication from a prominent resident of Fresno says that Dr. Watson was implicated in a peculiar scheme there.

While located in practice years ago in San José, Watson was also the principal in a semi-humorous shooting scrape. One of the reporters on an afternoon paper wrote a story accusing Watson of criminal practices. He learned afterward that Watson was parading up Santa Clara street, threatening all kinds of punishment, and applying bad names to the author of the article. The reporter got his revolver and rushed into the street. He found Watson telling some of his friends what he would do to the newspaper man when he should meet him. An altercation ensued and the reporter took a shot at the doctor. Watson screamed in agony, and clasping his hands to his abdomen, fell to the pavement. He was taken into a café in a supposedly dying condition. A minute search failed to reveal any bullet wound. Terror had supplied the wound in the doctor's imagination.

BUSINESS MEN TAKE A HAND.

See Dog-Catcher Knock Down Mexican and Have Former Arrested—Small Boy in Story.

Frank Garbutt, Robert Marsh, William Garland and R. A. Rowan yesterday took a hand in an affair between a dog-catcher and a Mexican on South Main street, with the result that H. B. Dye, employé of the city pound, is under arrest on a charge of battery.

Yesterday morning the four business men were riding south on Main street in Garland's big automobile. At Fifth and Main streets they came upon a tragedy. Pedro Astrada, a five-year-old Mexican boy, had been walking along the sidewalk dragging a frightened pup after him. The dog-catchers grabbed the dog and put it in the wagon. At that stage of the affair, the elder Astrada, alarmed by the yells of his son, appeared on the scene. He began to use sections of the Spanish language in large, thick slices. It is alleged that Dye, the dog-catcher, responded with a blow in the face.

The Mexican fell to the sidewalk, and the dog-catcher was preparing to make his escape when the men in the automobile called an officer and had Dye arrested.

The business men in the automobile and the dog-catchers in their wagon went to the Police Station. There Dye was arraigned and ordered to appear for trial on Tuesday afternoon.

Dye is also under bail on a battery charge preferred by Mrs. Eberle of South Bonnie Brae street, who alleges that he attacked her when she asked him to return her little dog to her.

About "Arts and Crafts"

The Typical California Furniture

FOR the California living room, library, den, or the bungalow—there is no other furniture quite so appropriate as the quaint simple pieces in arts and crafts.

The artistic lines of this furniture—the simplicity of the designs—appeal to the best there is in us.

We are showing a very interesting collection of handsome pieces from the famous shops of Stickley Bros. Co. The collection comprises big, roomy davenports, arm chairs, arm rockers, tables, desks, magazine stands, tabourettes—pieces to furnish a room complete.

The wood used is selected oak, fumed—in color a rich nut brown—the result of exposure to ammonia fumes which penetrate the wood and which neither time nor use can change.

The upholstering is of specially tanned Mexican goat skin which will always retain its pliability and softness—it comes in shades to harmonize with the woods.

We offer some very attractive values in these pieces, every price being based on the close margin system which has been so potent in the building up of the "California."

We invite you to come and see the display. In one of our windows are shown some very attractive styles in this beautiful arts and crafts furniture.

$1.25 Embroidery Flouncing 25c

mense lot of flouncing embroidery; 27 inches wide; the wanted designs, floral, leaf, scroll, eyelet and lind effects; well embroidered on fine swiss and insook; actual values 75c to $1.25 yard; you have oice of the lot Monday at 25c yard. See window.

It's one thing to see an opportunity, and another to grasp it. Some see but do not grasp. Others grasp but do not see. It's the fellow who sees clearly and grasps strongly that wins out.

This store is ever on the alert for merchandise underpriced; it takes hold of any stuff that is good, and the quantity is no object if the quality is satisfactory and the price right. These offerings are the proof of this alertness. They're all underpriced, many of them less than actual wholesale cost. We've seized the opportunity. You'll reap substantial benefit if you're here to take hold of them tomorrow. Better come early, some lots are small.

A Determined Riddance of All Spring Garments

July Buyers' Opportunity

A HARVEST of extraordinary savings is the outlook for prospective buyers during this great mid-year stock reducing sale. We propose starting the second half of the year 1907 with a good old-fashioned cleanup of our entire spring garment stock. It will be an occasion when original cost and selling prices will make their final disappearance. There are only eight racks left, about equally divided between silk and wool models. With the object in view of selling every garment on these racks Monday, the prices have been lowered as never before in the history of garment retailing on the Pacific Coast. Of all our sales this season's wind-up offers to the shrewd, thrifty, economical shoppers of this community the biggest and best savings of the whole year.

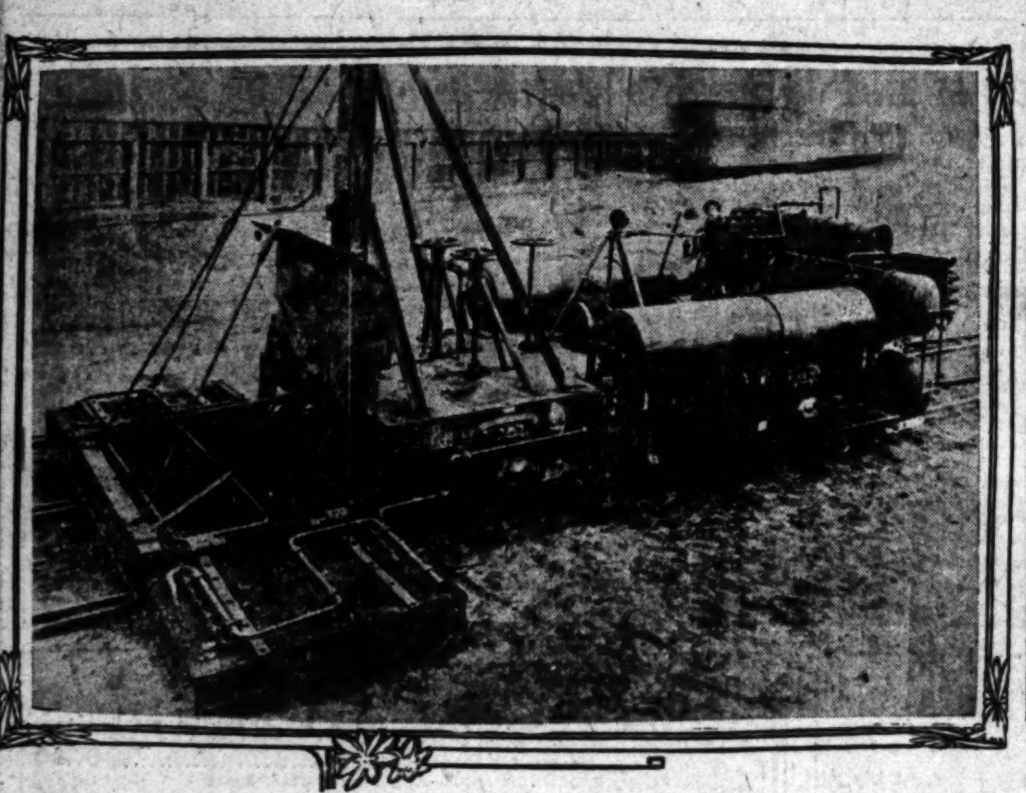
WEED-BURNER ENDS RANK GROWTH ON RAILROADS.



The gasoline weed burner, which clears twenty-five miles of Union Pacific track a day, doing the work of 300 men with a crew of three.

How to rid its right of way of weeds so tall, rank and troublesome as to interfere with the operation of trains, has been solved on the Union Pacific Railroad by the invention of a machine that does the work of 300 men a day. The new gasoline weed-burner turned out by the Omaha shops of the Harriman road covers twenty-five miles in twelve hours, while heretofore it has required a gang of sixteen men, working a full day, to cut the weeds from a single mile of track.

The weed-burner is built entirely of steel, with regulation trucks. At one end is a gasoline engine, used for propelling the car and pumping the air which forces gasoline to the burners, spreading out near the ground. When at work the weed-burner runs three or four miles an hour, but can make a speed of from twelve to fifteen miles, and is handled on the road under regular train orders.

Tanks carried on the car platform contain enough gasoline for a day's run. Through rows of burners spreading well beyond the rails, the flaming gasoline is forced downward into the weeds, killing root and branch, while the old process did not stop future growth.

It is not uncommon on western branch lines, sidings and commercial tracks to see weeds from three to seven feet high, which form a great obstruction to train movement, cause slippery rails and make operation difficult. The Union Pacific weed-burner is therefore a solution of a serious railroad problem. General Manager Mohler conceived the idea which has been developed by W. R. McKeen, superintendent of motive power of the Union Pacific.

One Benefit of Matrimony.

She had sat by him once or twice at the little Hungarian restaurant with the big friendly tables, so when the long-mustached waiter set the soup bowl before her she helped him and passed him his plate. She was amazed at his gratitude.

"I can't thank you enough," he told her. "That soup will taste entirely different to me now. Do you know, I get so blamed lonely dining night after night at these restaurants and cafés with only the waiters to serve me I've been on the ragged edge of marrying more than once, just to get somebody to ladle out my soup."—[Ex.

"SCOTTY'S" BIG BLUFF IS TRAGEDY TRAIL.

Death Valley Faker's Side Partner Tells of How His Only Rich Mine Is a Chicago Man's Bank Account. Actor's Sad Experience.

THIS is the queer tale of a Walter Scott trail. Jack C. Horan, an actor, who became acquainted with "Scotty" on the West Coast circuit, is the unfortunate hero of the farce comedy, which for him was very nearly a tragedy.

It was in Portland, while Horan was playing at the Lyric, that he first met the "Death Valley Faker" about a year ago and for some reason "Scotty" became very friendly with the young man, although there was no chance of getting any money from him to boost his bonanza.

Later they met again in Fresno and then it was that "Scotty" said to Horan: "You'd better cut this show business out and come down to Death Valley with me. I'll stake you to a gun and a mule."

That was the beginning. Visions of gold nuggets lying around loose in the sands of Death Valley fascinated the actor boy and he joyfully took the new cue that would lead him upon a stage where there are no set pieces.

"I certainly thought my fortune was made," said Horan mournfully when seen yesterday in Los Angeles, "dead broke," and seeking an engagement.

The two "cut out the show business" and traveled to Barstow by way of Hanford, where they "fooled around" for a time. When they reached Barstow they went to "Scotty's" headquarters, a little shack back of a saloon, and there "Scotty" said to Horan:

"Don't have anything to do with the people here, but cut 'em out."

THOSE DIREFUL PERILS.

At Barstow the two fortune seekers waited for two weeks for a desert buckboard which "Scotty" had ordered from South Bend, Ind., but at the end of that time they gave up the buckboard and started for Death Valley with three mules.

For three days they traveled over the desert and all of the time "Scotty" told tales of the wonderful wealth of his hidden mine and of the direful perils which beset him every time he tried to visit it, saying it was as much as a man's life was worth to go there owing to the men who were trying to waylay him.

"At last we came to some mountains," said Horan telling the story of the trail, "and camped in a cañon. That evening Scotty came to me and told me in a mysterious manner that there was a bonfire on the mountain and that was a signal that 'some of those fellows' were laying to shoot him. He asked me if I had seen the bonfire, but I couldn't see it."

The next day they continued their journey until they reached a camp called "Hidden Springs," where "Scotty" told his companion he had his camp. The spring is on the side of the mountain and the couple camped in the cañon. The next morning the three mules had disappeared.

"Somebody has run them off," said "Scotty," and he started out to hunt them up, but refused to permit Horan to accompany him. Late the same day he returned with the mules, which he said he had found unhobbled at Lone Willow. They at once started for Bennett's Wells and had gone about fifteen miles and it had become dark, when suddenly "Scotty" said:

SUCH A BLUFFER.

"Did you hear that shot?"

"No, I didn't," replied Horan.

"Well, we'd better turn around and not go farther," said the champion faker. "There are two men over on that little butte laying for me."

"Not being used to the ways of the desert," says Horan in telling the story, "I took stock in what he said and we started back for Barstow. Scotty told me that his backer from Chicago would be there and to tell him that we had brought back a couple of sacks of rich ore. Though really we did not have any, and it was a bluff."

When they finally reached Barstow Horan says they found "Scotty's" backer waiting for him.

"SCOTTY'S" GOLD MINE.

"The backer of Scotty is A. M. Johnson, president of the National Life Insurance Company of Chicago, with offices at No. 159 La Salle street in that city," states Horan, and he had been waiting to meet "Scotty" at Barstow since October 8.

The gold nugget bluffer was going to take Johnson out on the desert to show him his mine, and the promoter had come all the way from Chicago to see it. The first thing he had to do was to give "Scotty" a check for quite a large sum, which was cashed in the saloon of Y. C. Mosely.

Horan states that with Johnson and a man named Henderson they started out for the mysterious Death Valley mine in two wagons, and at last came to Hidden Springs. Here Henderson with one wagon was sent back to Barstow and a camp was made in the cañon.

"That night a dog we had with us named 'Bob,' ran down the cañon and barked, and Scotty ran out crying, 'There they are now.' Then he began firing from his rifle, and Johnson and I ran up and commenced shooting down the cañon in the dark. By this time Johnson was scared, and thought he saw men among the rocks on all sides.

JACK C. HORAN.

HAD 'EM SCARED.

"The next morning Scotty proposed to go into Death Valley by way of Wingate Pass, but Johnson was so scared from a former experience there that he refused to go, and insisted that they should go by way of Ballarat. Scotty came to me and told me I would have to stay at Hidden Springs until he and Johnson came back in ten days, and gave me orders to keep everybody away with my rifle. He left provisions for me, and the dog and they started.

"That night I was awakened by two men coming over the hill. I called to them, and asked what they wanted and they answered by firing two shots at me. Then I ran over the side of the hill, and the two followed. I traveled all the rest of the night, and when dawn came I found I was lost. Every way I turned the country looked just the same. For nearly five days the dog and I wandered around. My lips cracked and my tongue was swollen, and more than once I thought I was going to die of thirst. Even the dog fell down, and I had to carry him. At last I struck a trail, and it led me right back to the springs.

"I lay at the springs for five days, half-dead, waiting for Scotty to come back, but he did not. A month passed and an old prospector named Frank Neiderman came along and left me some provisions. He said if I did not go to Ballarat with him I must be crazy.

"On November 13 it snowed hard, and I nearly froze to death, as I only had one blanket, and a little piece of canvas. It was the day after Thanksgiving that Scotty finally arrived with Mrs. Scott. By this time I was nearly starved. When he found me there he said: 'I didn't expect to find you here.' I asked him why, and he said he thought I might have wandered over into the Funeral Mountains.

DESERTS FRIEND.

"We started back for Barstow and at Indian Springs Scotty was bitten by a skunk. I was half-dead from exposure, and Scotty was half-scared to death by the bite. His wife and I put him in the wagon, and drove as fast as we could for Barstow. There I fell ill of typhoid and was in bed for ten days."

Later Horan returned to Hidden Springs with Scotty, and camped there, waiting for a check to come from Chicago. When it did "Scotty" left Horan, he says, and while the latter says he was nearly dying from the hardships of the desert, he learned later that "Scotty" was buying wine in Los Angeles.

Last March "Scotty" told Horan to return to Barstow and wait for him. This Horan did. He adds: "I reached Barstow without a cent and have waited there for Scotty until June 19. I had to depend upon the kindness of a Chinaman, Wing Kee, for food. There was no work for me to do in Barstow, and every day I expected Scotty to come. About two weeks ago I heard Scotty was having a good time at Rhyolite, and though I wrote and wired him, I got no answer.

"Finally, Mrs. Scott came and got her husband's mail, and then packed up and started, she said, for Chicago to pay a visit to Johnson and his family. By this time I had had enough, and sent to my brother-in-law for money to bring me to Los Angeles.

"No more Scotty Death Valley mines for me."

The Old and the New.

It may be, folks, the old times were the best times—spring an' fall,
But—thank the Lord, you're livin' in the new times after all!
Bright skies above, an' hearts to love,
  an' earth—by land an' sea
As beautiful and beamin' as the Lord would have it be!

I favor all the old times—I like 'em ever' one,
Each sweet old-fashioned flower kissed
  by the dew an' sun;
The mem'ry of 'em from the heart will never pass away,
But thank the Lord you're livin' in the bright new times today!

Eliminated a Commandment.

A Brooklyn Sunday-school teacher had occasion to catechise a new pupil whose ignorance of his testament would have been amusing had it not been so appalling. One Sunday she asked the little fellow how many commandments there were.

To her great surprise, the lad answered glibly enough, "Ten, ma'am."

"And now, Sammy," pleasantly continued the teacher, "what would be the result if you should break one of them?"

"Then there'd be nine," triumphantly answered the youngster.

[illegible] flunked in mathematics, [illegible] found, might have ex- [illegible] in geography or any [illegible] subjects. A boy who was [illegible] English might be very good [illegible] other four subjects. And [illegible] it was found that there [illegible] no correlation with in- [illegible] the other subjects, and [illegible] whose penmanship was very [illegible] well versed in the sub- [illegible] of the other tests, write [illegible] figure accurately and be [illegible] in history and geography. [illegible] subjects in which ability [illegible] parallel to a fair de- [illegible] history and geography.

These conclusions, as established by the careful normal curve system, and based as they are on a larger number of typical graduates of the grammar and elementary private schools, raise an important question for those who conduct examinations of all kinds. As a general rule, in all examinations special weight is given to the test in one or two subjects—generally mathematics and English. In most examinations the failure to secure a passing mark in these bars the candidate, whatever may be his average. This system is, of course, essential where the ability to write good English or to figure accurately is to be an important function of the work which is to follow the examination. In a test for a teacher's certificate it is manifestly important that the one who is to instruct in common branches be able himself to handle with skill the various mathematical processes. Similarly, for a business position it is naturally important that the candidate be able to write a grammatical letter and to be accurate in the arithmetic of business simply for utilitarian reasons, because these requirements must be met daily in commercial practice.

At one of the universities a man wrote a historical thesis of such importance and interest that his professor sat up all night to read it, in spite of its misspellings and ordinary English words. These isolated facts seemed to indicate that apparently there was no connection between weakness in one particular subject and intelligence in another. This apparently indicated a type of natural specialization in the human mind which is fitted for certain kinds of concentration, but rendered it incapable of successful attention to some other form. It is possible that this departure from general excellence is allied to such phenomena as tone-deafness, lack of metrical sense, defective color appreciation in those who are singularly acute in other aesthetic or artistic appreciation.

MAY EXPLAIN SUCCESSES.

And it may also explain why it is that some man who fails to graduate from a college because of his inability to master one of two prescribed subjects afterward makes a brilliant success in some line, and attains greater fame and a higher literary or scientific standing than the man who headed the class with high averages in all subjects. In the matter of handwriting, this may explain to editors and proof readers the fact that some of their most brilliant paragraphers write an atrocious scrawl wil worthy to compete with the hieroglyphics of Greeley.

Mr. Kavanaugh, however, in his investigation, used the curve of distinction, which, unlike the general average method, gives full position in the conclusion to each individual variant form, or conformity to the normal in advance of the determination of that normal which is established by the resultant final curve. The results of this use of the curve greatly interested the faculty, and they wil probably encourage the use of this method, particularly in its application to vital statistics to exclude some of the faults of tables of mortality now based largely on the average system.

As one of the professors pointed out, the present statistics show that the average length of human life has increased in this country, but, as is well known, much, if not all of this increase, is due to the reduction of infant mortality by modern science. Because the averages include the infant rate the figures do not show what is really of interest—whether the life of the normal man has increased or decreased. Such facts are obtainable only in a statistical system such as the curve of distribution which Mr. Kavanagh applied to his boys.

In the summer school of pedagogy, and next winter, students will be encouraged to apply this more accurate system to a determination of other theories of the effect of pedagogical methods.

SPOKANE DRAWS YOUNG BAPTISTS.

INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION SOON TO MEET.

Ten Thousand Delegates and Visitors from Various Parts of the United States and Canada Expected to Attend—Demonstration of Progress of the Pacific Northwest.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SPOKANE (Wash.) June 27.—Everything is in readiness for the sixteenth international convention of the Baptist Young People's Union of America which will meet in Spokane's new State armory, July 4 to 7. Business houses and residences will be decorated with flags and large banners, the latter bearing the emblem of the union and the words, "Welcome Spokane." Ten thousand banners have been distributed by the local executive committee and will be in evidence on the morning of the Fourth of July.

Another feature will be three miles of commercial and industrial exhibits in the business district. These deal with the progress of the inland empire of the Pacific Northwest, showing what supports Spokane. At the business sessions a plan will be presented by Dr. Van Osdel to extend jurisdiction to Great Britain and the Orient, making it the Baptist Young People's Union of the world. Ten thousand delegates and visitors from various parts of the United States and Canada are expected to attend the convention.

Following a brief praise service, John H. Chapman of Chicago, president of the union, will formally open the convention, the addresses of welcome being by Rev. Dr. Oliver W. Van Osdel, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Spokane, and founder of the B.Y.P.U., and Mayor C. Herbert Moore. Rev. Dr. John W. Conley of Omaha will respond for the board of managers. Following the appointment of committees and the reading of the report of th eboard of managers, Rev. J. Whitcomb Brougher of Portland, Or., will speak on "A Citizen of Two Worlds," closing the morning session.

There will be State, provincial and territorial rallies in the afternoon, and addresses by Rev. B. W. Merrill, Toronto, Ont., Dr. O. C. S. Wallace, Lowell, Mass.; Dr. W. H. Main, Hartford, Ct.; Rev. Dr. Curtis Lee Laws, Baltimore, Md., and President Chapman. International prize banners will be presented by H. B. Osgood of Chicago, treasurer of the union.

Rev. W. H. Bowler of Idaho, will conduct Bible and prayer meetings the second day, and there will be departmental sessions under the direction of Rev. Carson J. Cameron, Toronto, and Miss Lorilla E. Bushnell, Denver, and addresses by Rev. Samuel H. Neil, Philadelphia, and Rev. L. H. Laflamme of India. Rev. Dr. John W. Conley of Omaha will conduct the open parliament, while Rev. Dr. W. H. Main of Hartford and L. P. Leavell of Oxford, Miss., will conduct devotional services, the session closing with an address by Rev. Dr. O. C. S. Wallace of Lowell.

Rev. George T. Webb of Chicago, general secretary of the union, will conduct the salutation of the flag the morning of the third day, and there will be addresses in the evening by Rev. J. T. M. Johnson of St. Louis and Rev. H. F. Laflamme of India.

The convention will close July 7 with addresses by Rev. Dr. W. H. Main of Hartford; Rev. Dr. George W. Truett of Dallas, Tex.; Rev. Dr. John W. Conley of Omaha; L. P. Leavell, Oxford, Miss.; Dr. O. C. S. Wallace, Lowell, Mass., and Rev. H. F. Laflamme of India. The feature of the closing ceremony is the coronation service, to be conducted by Rev. Dr. Main, who will be assisted by visiting and local clergymen.

DOCTORS AFTER SMOKE PEST.

MEDICAL MEN AID IN EFFORT TO PURIFY AIR.

Local Pure Food Committee of State Medical Association Work for Passage of Ordinance, Now Under Discussion, Also Push for Good Milk and Clean Vegetables.

Now that the doctors are after the smoke nuisance it ought to be smoked painlessly and scientifically. Through the local Pure Food Committee of the recently-organized State Pure Food Commission, Los Angeles physicians are aiding in the effort to secure the passage by the Council of the ordinance that has been drafted with the idea of abating the bad features of the gas company's smoke foundry on Aliso street. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company and other producers of smoke in large, sun-dimming and air-polluting quantities also are concerned in the proposed ordinance.

With strong political influence back of them, the smoke-spreaders do not appear to stand much in fear of any action by the Council that might cause them to barrel or to bottle their surplus smoke, but the doctors are joining other organizations in the movement and the campaign may be said to be smoking up.

Where there is so much smoke there is bound to be some fire. The doctors are fanning the blaze of opposition and within the next week or two it is declared that the test will come in the city legislative body on the passage of the ordinance.

The doctors on the Pure Fod Committee think there is nothing strange in their connection with a movement for purer air. They put it on the ground that air is food for the lungs, and they do not think smoked food is good for the breathing apparatus, although smoked meats are admitted to be all right for the stomach.

This crusade against the smoke nuisance is but one of several that have been undertaken by the physicians since the organization of the Pure Food Committee of the Los Angeles County Medical Association, which was the forerunner of the State Pure Food Commission.

The first problem it tackled was that of pure milk. It recommended to the Los Angeles Board of Health and secured the adoption of a system of dairy inspection that makes for the betterment of the supply of milk. It also prevailed on the City Council to increase the number of dairy inspectors. It is claimed that great improvement in conditions already has resulted from the efforts of the physicians.

With the milk and the smoke campaigns fairly under way, the members of the medical fraternity propose now to investigate conditions that surround the production and sale of vegetables. They will endeavor to prevent the sale of vegetables grown in districts irrigated with sewage; also to compel dealers to refrain from exposing vegetables and fruits in open stores and on sidewalks, where they are covered with dust and dirt from the sidewalks and streets, and afford roosting places for flies that are not particular about wiping their feet after lunching on filth and before perching on fruit and vegetables.

The sale of "bob veal" and the handling of overripe turkeys and other meats that have tarried too long in cold storage are other matters about to be taken up by the crusaders.

Three members of the Executive Committee of the Pure Food Commission of the Medical Society of the State of California are residents of this section. They are Dr. Fitch, C. E. Mattison, chairman, of Pasadena; Dr. George H. Kress, secretary, Los Angeles, and Dr. Stanley P. Black, Pasadena. The other two members of the committee are Dr. R. Langley Porter, San Francisco, and Dr. W. F. Snow of Stanford University.

Dr. L. M. Powers, Health Officer of Los Angeles, is chairman of the Los Angeles County Pure Food Committee, and two other members of the committee are Dr. George H. Kress and Dr. Titian Coffey, Pasadena, Pomona, Long Beach and other cities also are represented on the committee.

Los Angeles county members are setting the pace for the State organization, and the prediction is made that the general body, professional men who devote their lives to the cure of disease, will give a good share of their time to perfecting means for preventing disease.

MINING TUNGSTEN.

Two Los Angeles Young Men Begin Sinking New Shafts Near Randsburg.

The lure of the mines has captured two more Los Angeles young men who are well known on the rialto, and the loadstone which has drawn them to the desert's heat is tungsten, found in the vicinity of Randsburg.

John W. Barter has just returned to Los Angeles after a five weeks' sojourn there, and Val Schmidt, his partner, has also been spending several weeks in the vicinity of Randsburg at the tungsten mines.

These two men have purchased from Charles Koehn the Winnie and Johnnie mines, three miles west of Randsburg. The purchase price is given as $30,000. They are now sinking two new shafts, one having reached a depth of thirty feet, and showing an exposure of the tungsten running from one to six inches in thickness.

This mineral was first discovered at Randsburg on November 12, 1903, by Val Schmidt, who took out two tons of it and stored it for almost two years, when he had inquiries from various eastern steel firms, and eventually sold the stuff to the Primrose Chemical Company of Primrose, Pa. The price he then received was $2.50 per unite (twenty pounds.)and this set all Randsburg a hunting for the precious mineral.

It led to the finding of the property now known as the "Papoose," and the Churchill properties, which are considered to be the best in the United States. From these two mines, which are owned by Cross & Blackwell of London, and who ship a carload regularly every month, there is sent to Hamburg, Germany, tungsten which now brings $10 to $11 per unit of sixty per cent. ore.

Barter and Schmidt's properties were originally operated as gold mines, and $80,000 of this precious metal has been taken from the Winnie and the Johnnie, but the properties are now considered more valuable for their tungsten deposits.

Several new discoveries of tungsten are reported from the Randsburg district within the past few months.

COVINA LINE OPEN TODAY.

Regular Schedule Going Into Operation With Twelve Cars Each Way. Celebration.

Beginning today the new Pacific Electric line from Los Angeles to Covina, will begin operation with a regular schedule of twelve cars each way. The opening of this line, which has been looked forward to by the people in the San Gabriel Valley for a long time with interest, promises the rapid development of suburban territory contiguous to Los Angeles which has heretofore been touched only by the steam railroads and has therefore felt only by reflection the marvelous growth which has followed the development of other territory.

The delay in completing this line was due to lack of material especially railroad ties, but with the recent arrival of two steam schooners at San Pedro with this material work on the line was pushed rapidly to a finish to enable the road to open before July 1. The officers of the Pacific Electric, including H. E. Huntington, Chief Engineer Pillsbury and Traffic Manager McMillan, completed a final official survey of the line yesterday and no hitch in the opening today to the public is anticipated.

The regular schedule of cars starting from the Pacific Electric Building in this city is as follows: 6, 7:20, 8:40, 10, 11:20 a.m., and 12:40, 2, 3:20, 4:40, 6, 8:30 and 11:20 p.m. From Covina the return cars will run upon the following schedule: 5:50, 7:35, 8:55, 10:15 and 11:35 a.m., and 12:55, 2:15, 3:35, 4:55, 6:15, 7, and 9:30 p.m. The theater car returning from Los Angeles at 11:30 p.m., will prove a luxury to the people of the valley.

The people of Covina are arranging for a celebration, which includes rides for visitors about the beautiful little valley city, visits to places of interest, a banquet and a general rejoicing that Covina is now bound to Los by the steel ribbons of friend interest due to quick and communication.

This praise is in reference to the approach by sea. The Portuguese have a saying that "he who has not seen Lisbon does not know what beauty is." It is a clean city, said by some authorities to be one of the cleanest in all Europe, something that cannot be said of many Spanish towns, hardly, even, of Madrid, except right in the center of the city. Its fish market is one of the best stocked in the world.

Portuguese money is a curiosity, in a way. With Great Britain and Russia, the kingdom remains one of the three nations of Europe that have never adopted the decimal system of coinage. The plan is in theory better than John Bull's antiquated pounds, shillings and pence. At least, it is simpler to compute. Otherwise it is about as poor as it can well be. The basis of the system is the reis, 182 of which are supposed to be equal to a French franc, as given in guide books, but in practice it is hard to tell one day ahead just what it is worth. A thousand reis equal a milreis. In Spain gold has disappeared from circulation and the peseta, nominally equivalent to the French franc —20 cents American money—has fallen to about 17 cents. Silver and paper are the circulating medium, but in Portugal there is very little silver left in circulation. Paper notes are the common medium of exchange, and it takes about 100 reis to buy anything but the simplest articles. It sounds very big to be told that your hotel bill is 3000 reis, but the feeling wears some when you figure out that this is only about $3. You may think at first blush it is a lot of money when you give a porter a tip of 100 reis, but don't be startled, it is only about 10 cents, or very little more. Portuguese finances are bad, very bad, and all the reports say that dissatisfaction over this has had much to do with the present trouble.

To one who has attained a slight knowledge of Spanish, even if it be limited to geographical names and a few stock phrases common in the Southwest, the points of similarity and difference between Portuguese and Spanish are interesting. In writing, it is much easier to see the resemblance than when the two languages are spoken, because the pronunciations are often further apart. This often gives the foreigner much difficulty.

Here are some of the points of interest. The Spanish sound of "ñ" or "ny" in English—a common one in Portuguese—is expressed by "nh," as in the title "Señor" in Spanish, in Portuguese "Senhor." The Spanish "ll" is expressed by "lh," while "ll" is pronounced much as in English. The curved accent mark used in Spanish over the "n" to make it a new letter with the "ny" sound, has a peculiar use in Portuguese. It is placed over a final vowel, or, in the case of two final vowels, over the first one, to add the sound of "n" to the end of the word. Thus, the Spanish "San," or saint in English, so familiar to Western Americans in geographical names, has as its Portuguese equivalent "Soa," with the curved accent over the "a," making the word sound as though it were spelled "Soan." One of the widest points of difference between Spanish and Portuguese is the pronunciation of the "j," which the Spaniards pronounce like the English "h," but which the Portuguese pronounce much as in English, or as in the French "jour."

While the finances are in such a shocking condition, the postoffice is rather better, on the whole, than in Spain. It could not well be any worse. Mail boxes are placed on street corners, and collections are made regularly, while in Spain there are very few and those are only the principal hotels or public buildings.

The Portuguese are an emigrating people. Near Hanford there is an extensive colony of them, and there are many scattered throughout California. The recent visit to Los Angeles of a Portuguese Catholic bishop called attention to the presence in this country of a number of colonies of these people, he having come to dedicate a church for them in Providence, R. I. That they are quiet and law-abiding when given fair treatment is abundantly shown by the fact that they have come in good numbers and settled in communities without attracting the least attention.

Speaking of their qualifications as workmen, an Englishman, whom I met in Madrid, and who had charge of the construction of a railroad in Brazil, where he worked many gangs of Portuguese and Brazilians, generally with Portuguese foremen, said: "I would rather have one Portuguese than ten Spaniards." He knew both nationalities, and declared the Portuguese were by far the more industrious and more intelligent. That they have been very desirable workers in the Hawaiian sugar plantations is generally, I believe, admitted.

Lisbon and some of the large cities have many fine hotels, but the smaller ones are atrocities, and visitors should keep out of the smaller towns. Rates are reasonable.

The Portuguese, to their honor be it said, have never taken to the Spanish bullfight, and should any one attempt to give such an exhibition west of the frontier he would be likely to see the inside of a Portuguese jail. Thy have a sport that is called a bullfight, but it bears very little resemblance to the bloody spectacles that are seen at Madrid and in many Spanish countries. There are no poor, half-starved, half-dead horses to be gored and driven around the arena, mad with agony and terror, with their entrails hanging out, to sicken any one not hardened to it, nor is the bull stabbed and cut to death, butchered to make a holiday.

The Portuguese put buttons on the bull's horns, and they use splendid horses for the picadors, trained to dodge and save themselves. The bull is simply goaded to fury and teased by the men, who perform various tricks, such as jumping on his back, vaulting over him and in various ways showing their skill. When the crowd has had enough of this, the bull is roped and taken out. It is said that in Portugal the fighters get hurt oftener than in Spain. I do not know how true this is.

King Carlos is one of the most unpopular sovereigns in Europe. A few months ago he was accused of surreptitiously overdrawing his allowance from the national treasury, and was denounced in Parliament by opposition speakers in the most violent terms, some even calling him "a thief," and declaring he ought to be sent to prison as a common embezzler. The Queen, who is even more hated than her husband, is said to be responsible for most of the trouble. Several stories are told of her doings, particularly of her extravagance. It has been said that she has managed to spend more than several prominent royal ladies together. If this is true, it is not hard to understand the reports of King Carlos's financial troubles, and may explain the charges of his overdrawing his allowance to "make ends meet."

POLICE WATCH TRAINS FOR BAD NEGROES.

ORDERS issued yesterday by the acting Chief of Police will cause a strict watch to be kept on all arriving trains to prevent the landing here of negro criminals from the Southern States.

The criminal assault committed upon little Laura Akers by a negro fiend last Monday is said to be responsible for this order. Police officials say that outrage has created a feeling of distrust toward the negroes, and it will be some time before that feeling dies down.

During the week a dozen letters from well known business men of the city have been received at the Police Station regarding the assault upon Laura Akers. The writers have in many cases mentioned lynch law as an effective remedy in disposing of negro fiends.

One of these letters, received by Capt. Flammer yesterday, is from Thomas C. Thornton, a well-known lawyer of Los Angeles, who sent a contribution to the fund raised for A. Curtiss. In his letter Thornton says:

"It is noticed that the Los Angeles police department is collecting a fund to be presented to A. Curtiss, a negro carpenter who pursued and captured the negro brute who committed the assault upon Laura Akers. As a small contribution to that fund I herewith enclose you my check for $5, coupled with a further agreement that I will gladly contribute 10 per cent. additional upon the entire amount contributed for that purpose.

"In view of the fact that the public does not seem disposed to lynch the rascal who committed the offense the least that can be done is to reward his captor."

Letters of this character have shown the police officials the sentiment of a number of prominent business men. When Bernett was captured by Curtiss he was saved from lynching only by the timely arrival of officers, who hurried him to the City Jail, in an automobile. Bernett is now in the County Jail awaiting trial in the Superior Court.

"Los Angeles is a paradise for the negro," said Capt. Flammer, yesterday. "We have had many cases where bad negroes from the Southern States have come to Los Angeles to continue their depredations. In the first place the climate attracts them here, and again it is far away from where they are known.

"Sam Mackey, the big negro highwayman from Waco, Tex., who arrived in Los Angeles two weeks ago and was arrested because of his suspicious actions, is a good example of the negro criminal with whom we have to deal. This man Bernett is another.

"In several cases, negroes have escaped from Southern mobs which would have lynched them, and have come straight to Los Angeles for shelter.

"The way to prevent a repetition of such an outrage as the Laura Akers affair is to prevent the landing here of negro desperadoes, and we propose to take that precaution in future."

SAWED-OFF GUN REMEDY.

Former Yosemite Stage Driver Believes Armed Guards May Be Needed on the Seats.

C. A. Bryant, Pacific Electric depot officer, and formerly one of the Yosemite stage drivers, believes it may be necessary to send armed guards with the stages.

"There were occasional hold-ups in my time," said Bryant yesterday. "We used to expect them. Seldom was any resistance made. The driver always had enough to do to watch his horses. The mountain horses used on the stages are wiry, nervous beasts. If a masked man should spring suddenly into the road, the leaders would wheel around and try to climb into the coach. Old drivers knew enough to keep their seats and say nothing when a highwayman appeared on the scene. No passenger would be likely to open a pistol duel, either, if he knew anything. The recent hold-ups are very similar to those in my day. The only remedy is to put a resolute man on each coach, armed with a sawed-off shotgun.

"He will naturally be on the alert. If a man appears suddenly in the road and fails to answer a hail, bang with the gun. That is the only way to solve the problem. Seldom do the Sheriffs catch the highwaymen. In the first place they are masked and often wear cloth wrapped about their shoes to blur the trail. They are always familiar with every foot of ground, every hiding place, cave, cañon and mountain path. They always have friends to give them food and shelter.

"If the messenger or guard gets the drop, then it is all over with Mr. Robber. If the robber has the muzzle of his gun pointed at you, give up what you have to. That is the advice of every experienced mountain driver. It doesn't mean cowardice either." Bryant was never held up, although in the years during which he drove there were frequent robberies.

NEW FEDERAL BOOK-KEEPING.

The work of changing the system of bookkeeping in use in the United States District and Circuit Courts is almost completed. The Department of Justice sent out a general order sometime ago to the effect that all the Federal clerks should use a uniform system of bookkeeping. To change from the old system required much extra work and the clerical force has been employed over time in making the change.

HAWAII.

BLOCKED ONLY BY A STRIKE.

RUSH OF FREIGHT BUSINESS TO HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

New Mexican Line and Shipments from Seattle Relieve Congestion That Has Existed More Than a Year, but Longshoremen Now Are Source of Trouble.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

HONOLULU, June 22.—Business men in Honolulu, who have been suffering from a congestion of freight on the mainland for more than a year, heaved a big sigh of relief when the Tehuantepec route was opened, anticipating thereafter a regular and steady movement of their goods from eastern markets to Honolulu. The overland routes were tied up, and San Francisco was tied up. Seattle and Salina Cruz were the two vantage points from which all difficulties were to be removed.

And there was relief. From both ports large quantities of goods have been received, the Northern Pacific and Mexican railroads doing the land transportation, and the American-Hawaiian Company's steamers carrying the goods on both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. But trouble has arisen already. The congestion of the overland railroads naturally diverted freight from all Pacific ports to the Mexican route, which now has every pound of business it can handle, arrangements being in contemplation for a doubling of the track. This gave the American-Hawaiian steamers all the freight they could handle, and to meet the increasing demand for more cargo room, they put additional steamers on their line.

But the longshoremen's strike had not entered into the calculation of buyers and sellers, any more than it had been considered by the freight carriers, and has caused further delay. So once more Hawaii experienced the difficulties of transportation to and from the mainland. Passengers have also been detained, and the Sierra, leaving here next week for San Francisco, already has 250 passengers booked.

WATER SURVEY ORDERED.

A complete survey of the water resources of the islands, both for irrigation and for the development of power, has been one of the things which Gov. Carter has been bent upon for a long time, and he has now arranged with the United States Geological Survey to send an expert here, the Governor guaranteeing his expenses. Two purposes are expected to be served by such a survey. One is to determine the water resources themselves, the quantity of water, its source and availability, and the amount of available power that can be developed. The other purpose is the collection of data upon which legislation can be intelligently based for the utilization and development of this water and water power for the best uses of the Territory, either through public service corporations or by the direct public ownership of these public utilities by the Territory or political subdivisions of it.

There is a regular Congressional appropriation for such surveys in the United States, but when Gov. Carter first made application to the Geological Bureau of the Interior Department, it was replied that Hawaii, being one of the insular possessions of the United States, did not come within the terms of the appropriation. When it was pointed out that Hawaii was an integral part of the United States, the department felt that, the appropriation having been cut down from $150,000 to $100,000, a man could not be spared this year.

TO STUDY PLAGUE.

The United States Marine Hospital Service is to send a man here to aid the Board of Health, who will have a great chance to unravel some strange phenomena that have developed in cases of plague. He will coöperate with the Board of Health in the study of the scientific aspects of the epidemic sickness in which, some weeks ago, some very peculiar phenomena were discovered, which at first blush were very alarming and of the most far-reaching consequences. It is to investigate these, and to determine what action ought to be taken in future, that aid has been asked.

LUNCHEON UNDER TREES.

Empire State Association Holds First Outing at Eastlake Park—Organization Flourishing.

More than four hundred former residents of the Empire State participated yesterday afternoon in the first picnic and outing of the New York State Association at Eastlake Park. The organization has been in existence only a few months, but it has flourished, and the picnic did much to cement the bonds of fellowship.

President F. G. Haley, Secretary Elsie M. Eggleston and Treasurer C. W. Bowdish acted as a committee on arrangements and entertainment, and the spirit of good humor which pervaded all present showed conclusively that their efforts had not been fruitless. No effort was made to arrange a regular programme, and the afternoon was spent by the members of the association in cultivating each other's acquaintance.

Basket lunches were enjoyed under the shade of the park trees. Though the attendance was larger than had been anticipated, the committee found seats for all, and there was no confusion.

The New York State Association was organized last January as the Cortland and Broome Counties' Society, but as there was no State organization, it was decided to extend the scope of the society, and the present association was the result. The membership has increased steadily, and the founders expect that by next year the roll will contain more names than that of any other State society in Southern California.

In speaking of yesterday's picnic, President Haley said: "Our outing has certainly been a most successful one, and we shall endeavor to make these picnics annual affairs. I believe that all who attended enjoyed it thoroughly."

Many former residents of New York State, who had not known of the existence of the association, took advantage of the general invitation and announced their intention of becoming members. Secretary Eggleston opened a register, where all visitors were invited to inscribe their names, and thus made it easy for all who were in search of former friends to learn if they were present.

FOR RAILWAY MAIL CLERKS.

Uncle Sam needs men to fill vacancies in the railway mail service, and the Civil Service Commission invites candidates to be examined at the postoffice on August 6. Any male citizen, between the ages of 18 and 35 years, who is a legal resident of this State, is eligible. The examination includes spelling, arithmetic, letter-writing, penmanship, copying, geography, reading addresses and questions relating to railway lines.

DOESN'T BOW TO DICTATORS.

LABOR-UNION BOSSES PICKET LOCAL SHOP.

Firm Doesn"t See Way Clear to Give Full Week's Pay and Grant Half-holiday, and Meddlers Call Strike—Police Will Protect Employees.

Because the firm of Rosenthal & Salzman, No. 316 South Los Angeles street, would not give a Saturday half-holiday with full pay during the dull season, a strike was called and several men walked out. Loafing representatives of the Labor Council immediately waited upon the members of the firm with their usual hints of dire destruction to the business if the dictates of the labor union were not obeyed.

Salzman, one of the partners, was in business in Arizona and New Mexico in the pioneer days. He formerly carried a gun on each hip, and while not looking for trouble, was always ready for it. The arrogant demands of the totemites only aroused Salzman's fighting blood. He told his meddling visitors that he would close the business rather than submit to their dictation.

All kinds of threats were made and the shop was picketed. Yesterday the police department was informed of the situation, and two plain-clothes men were stationed near the shop, ready to arrest any one offering violence.

This is the dull season for the manufacturers, and the strike has not crippled the firm, although it has caused delay in filling some large orders. Salzman said yesterday that he is willing to let a few of the employés work three days a week until fall, but under present conditions cannot afford to give them a full week's pay an dallow them a half-holiday besides.

"In the busy season we emplay from forty to fifty people," he said. "On account of the backward season work has been a little slack, but we have kept our force at work. Some of the men receive from $20 to $24 a week. We are willing to make any reasonable concession, but we do not propose to be subject to the dictation of the labor unions and their bosses."

One of the cutters was attacked by some of the pickets day before yesterday, and stood his ground. No blows were struck, but he was threatened with violence if he continued to work in the shop. The cutter only laughed at the pickets, and told them he has a family to support, needs his weekly wages to live upon, and is satisfied with his employer and job.

Some of the girls were subjected to insult as they left the shop Friday evening, and yesterday morning they were approached by union men and warned to leave their work. Salzman says he will protect all of his force, and that is the reason for calling for police protection.

"I am not afraid for myself," said the manufacturer, with a steely glint in his blue eyes, but I must look after my loyal employés."

The firm of Rosenthal & Salzman occupies the upper floors at Nos. 316-322 South Los Angeles street. It is a strictly local concern, and most of its orders come from local department stores. It is determined to keep an "open shop."

Old employés now out on a strike may be taken back as individuals, but not as union men. The Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association has been informed of the situation.

We show the most complete stock of Bedroom Furniture In All the West

We make this statement, not in a boasting spirit, but that you may know where to come when in need of anything in this line. One whole floor, out of the seven which we occupy, is used for the display, and we assure you that no room goes to waste. The Pacific Purchasing Company is one of the largest concerns in the country. It is very natural, then, that we should control, as we do in the coast territory, the best of the celebrated Grand Rapids makes.

Being large buyers we command prices that small competition cannot hope to get. Our shipping system cuts freight rates to a minimum. There is every reason why we can undersell all competition and we certainly do it.

We carry all grades from the plain solid oak and maple to the finest mahogany and walnut. No matter what your want may be, we can supply it. All we ask is that you compare our stock with the others in the city. If we lose your business then it is our fault, but we stand small chance of losing it.

Quality is Always Our First Consideration

You will find it strongly in evidence in every piece of furniture in the stock. You will find perfect cabinet work and perfect finishing in every case.

We are now showing complete assortments of single dressers, chiffoniers, toilet tables and cheval mirrors in mahogany, maple, birch, oak and walnut; gentlemen's wardrobe-chiffoniers in mahogany and oak. We also have a splendid display of complete suits in all woods.

The stock of brass beds is very comprehensive, made up from the choice of the most celebrated lines, the lines that all know and appreciate. You will find what you want at the price you want to pay.

The stock of enameled iron beds is complete in every sense of the word. They, too, come from the premier factories of the country.

IGHTING PRESIDENT PREPARES FOR PEACE.

EWS reached Los Angeles yesterday that President Zelaya of Nicaragua has dispatched a special ...sentative to Washington, to con... with President Roosevelt, and that ... commissioner would arrive there ... He is the Nicaraguan Minister ... Foreign Relations Señor Gamez. ... is understood that the object of

...of Manuel Liesandro Barillas, ex-President of Guatemala, taken two days before his assassination in the City of Mexico. He had been warned of the plot, and upon his body was found a note, with this request: "If I am killed place over my coffin the flag of the new Republic of Central America."

...ission is to confer with the ad...tion in reference to establish... a confederation of the five re... and thus to restore peace. It ... understood that the mission of ... special official is not to ask the ... States to interfere, but merely ... for its moral support, after ... Zelaya has united the five ... under one flag. It is fur... ...ated that the Nicaraguan President ... holds the same relation to Mex... ...at is, he does not ask for aid, ... "moral" support.

... the instructions given to his ... representative to Washington, ... Zelaya seems to think it ... that he can bring about this ... of the warring little States ... ultimately peace. Public sentiment ... is said to be divided on the ... of a confederation. Quite a ... of the people think that the ... is not ripe for a movement to ... of these States a government ... strong to command the at... of first-class nations. Others, ... think that now is the op... ... time.

... who are interested in the progress and commercial development of these States of wonderful richness agree on one point, that peace should be restored, and that it should be permanent. The mission of Minister Gamez has this object in view.

The series of revolutions which have been raging intermittently in these naturally turbulent States for several months were caused solely, it is announced, by the pretentious ambition of Cabrera, President of Guatemala, and the consequent assassination of Manuel Liesandro Barillas, former President of the same State. His assassination fanned anew the flames of revolution.

Barillas, it is said, had been warned two days before he was killed in the City of Mexico, that there was a plot to assassinate him. The doomed man, with a presentiment that his death was inevitable, wrote a note to his friends, requesting that in such an event a flag of the proposed new Republic of Central America be placed over his coffin and buried with him.

The assassinated ex-President of Guatemala was in favor of uniting the States into one republic, and acted in concert with President Zelaya of Nicaragua. This movement was, and is still, strongly opposed, it is stated, by Cabrera, President of Guatemala. Barillas had started one revolution in Guatemala, with a view of ousting Cabrera, and it had failed. Another revolution with the same object in view was brewing and Cabrera thought, it is charged, that if Barillas could be gotten out of the way, the revolutionary movement would fail. But his assassination rekindled the fires of civil discord, and the flames are still spreading.

One of the plans of bringing about peace is, it is understood, the overthrow of Figueroa, President of Salvador. This is part of the Zelaya plan. He claims that Figueroa, on the part of Salvador, has formed an alliance with Cabrera, on the part of Guatemala, to oppose the federation of the five states. Zelaya's special envoy will, perhaps, merely ask the United States to stand aside while he upsets these opposing Presidents and brings about "perpetual peace."

DESTITUTE AND ILL.

Scotch Family Lacks Food and Clothing—Woman Dying of Consumption—Friends Appeal.

A pitiful case of illness and destitution has been appealing to the sympathies of William Gregory, a business man, of No. 662 North Main street, and yesterday he reported it.

"In one little room at No. 520 Wall street live Mrs. Scott, her 5-year-old daughter and her aged and feeble father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart. They are in need of money, food and clothing," said Mr. Gregory.

"They are Scotch people, who lived in San José until their home was destroyed by the earthquake. Mrs. Scott is a widow, and a victim of consumption.

"When they first came here she worked in one of the city laundries. But her cough kept getting worse, and this was objected to by the proprietors. However, she kept on working until she actually fell, while at her labor, because of the paroxisms of coughing.

"In her extremity, Mrs. Scott decided to appeal to some Scotch person for temporary aid, and seeing my name on the sign, she came to me. I directed her to the Associated Charities, and she went there; but she claims that there was such a lot of red tape required that she despaired of any relief from that quarter, and declared to me that she would rather die than undergo any further investigation.

"What the family needs is immediate help. They lack clothing, and last night, when I went to look after them, they actually had nothing to eat in the house. The Associated Charities offered, I understand, to attempt to get Mrs. Scott into some hospital; but it seems to me it would be an act of mercy to keep this little family together, under the circumstances.

"If there are any persons whose sympathies can be touched by the situation in which these people find themselves, I would be glad to give them the benefit of such information as I possess."

WILL VISIT INDIANS.

Through the invitation of Antonio Apache, superintendent of the Indian Village and Crafts Association, Mrs. Frank Stoddard and Mrs. L. B. Trumbull will give the children of the King's Daughters Day Nursery an outing at the village. After the Indian dances and other entertainment the nursery children will sing songs and play the mandolin for the Indians.

RECORD LEAP IN TAX LIST.

Fifty Millions Increase in Assessments.

Lively Time Predicted for Equalization Board.

Private Franchises Taxed by City Assessor.

More than $50,000,000 has been added to the city's assessment roll this year by Assessor Walter Mallard. The year's advance is almost equal to the total valuation of all city property, real and personal, six years ago.

The increase will give to the City Hall this year $500,000 more tax money to expend for current expenses than last year. This record stands unparallled in the history of the city; it almost dwarfs the imagination. The assessment roll for this year totals $203,000,000. Mr. Mallard made an estimate yesterday afternoon that the new assessment roll will reach $253,000,000.

Explaining the enormous increase, Mr. Mallard said that at least half of it will be represented in the increased assessment on franchises of corporations. This alone is expected to total $30,000,000.

By corporations Mr. Mallard does not refer to public and semi-public companies only. He assesses private franchises on the same basis as those of the public utility companies.

NEW DEPARTURE.

This is a new departure in franchise assessment; it is based on a decision rendered two years ago by the State Supreme Court. That decision is to the effect that any franchise issued by a city, county or State is assessable.

Politicians and place men at the City Hall expressed the liveliest satisfaction last night when they heard the estimate by the Assessor for this year's tax roll. It means $500,000 in cash to add to the present expense of the city. In a hard year this sum will cover a multitude of bare spots.

Here are two instances of the franchise tax:

The Union Oil Company has received a franchise assessment of $4,000,000.

The franchise of the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank was assessed at $1,250,000.

PROPOSE TO FIGHT.

Many of the corporations are preparing to challenge the justice of the franchise assessment before the Board of Equalization. This board is composed of the nine members of the City Council. They pass on each property valuation made by the Assessor. The sessions of the board this year give promise of being the liveliest in the history of the city.

The assessment of public-utility companies, including franchises, is about double that of last year. Mr. Mallard says the former assessments have been ridiculously low. It is hardly possible that these companies will accept the rise without a vigorous protest to the Council.

Building improvements made last year are assessed at $4,000,000; this is on a basis of 60 per cent. of the actual cost. The increased property assessments are heaviest in the new business district south of Sixth street and in the new manufacturing district south of First and east of Main streets.

The Seventh Ward is said to be the hardest hit of all. Some of the assessments there will be challenged on the ground that Mr. Mallard has been unduly severe on the ward of Mallard's political rival, Evan Lewis, ex-City Assessor. Boyle Heights and East Los Angeles show little increase.

HIGHEST VALUES.

The highest assessed real estate in the city is on Broadway, between Second and Fifth streets. Estimating Broadway values yesterday, Mr. Mallard said that the City Hall property should sell at the present time for not less than $5000 a front foot.

The following table shows how the assessed value of Los Angeles city property has increased during the present century:

1902	70,000,000
1903	84,000,000
1903	109,000,000
1904	126,000,000
1905	154,000,000
1906	203,000,000
1907 (estimate)	253,000,000

If the franchise assessments made by Mr. Mallard are sustained by the Council and by the courts, there will be a chance for comparatively easy times at the City Hall during the next fiscal year.

It should be easy for the school teachers to secure their raise in pay and to make it permanent. There should also be money for fire-houses, bridges and sewers. But a great deal depends on the action of the Councilmen, when they sit as a board of equalization. If they wobble, the increased assessments will go glimmering.

500 Magnificent Waists

Actually Worth to $8.00, Your Choice 95c

The most daring reductions ever made by a California store. You see we don't do things by halves. We have taken every high priced waist that has been used for display purposes and as selling samples and bunched them, making a huge collection of the fluffiest, loveliest and most charming waists you ever saw. They go as high as $8.00 and of course that means $7.00 waists, $6.00 waists, $5.00 waists, $4.00 waists, $3.00 waists—hundreds altogether—and there are some at $2.00, but none worth less than that price. Over 300 different styles. All the fanciful creations in insertions, fine lace trimmings, tucks—a perfect mine of bargains. Of course some of these are a little mussed and soiled.

To give all of our patrons an equal chance, positively not more than 3 waists to one customer; your choice 95c.

Final Expulsion of Suits

Prices Recklessly Cut in Half

Wool suits, silk jumper suits, silk shirt waists, without fear or favor, every single one of them chopped down to half price. No deception about this—no favorite styles held out—no fictitious prices—positively every one of them at half the original price.

Bear in mind these are the most winning styles brought out in New York, masterpieces of skillful designing and richest elegance in quality.

For instance, there's a swell little silk jumper suit for $7.38, in all colors, that it is a shame to sell for less than $14.75. But there are hundreds of others. Be sure and come early before they are all gone.

THE PHENOMENAL City of Los Angeles FROM THE YEAR 1880 TO 1907.

AN ILLUMINATING EXHIBIT.

Los Angeles Sunday Times

THE TRUE Story of 26 Years TOLD IN UNIMPEACHABLE FIGURES.

XXVIth YEAR. SUNDAY, JUNE 30, 1907.—DEVELOPMENT SHEET:—8 PAGES. On All News Stands, Trains and Streets. 10 CENTS.

LOS ANGELES: HER BUSINESS RECORD Matches Swift Growth of Population.

COMING up from the bottom of the list of bank clearings cities, in 1890, Los Angeles now ranks No. 16, and will doubtless win rank 14 within two years!

CHAPTER II.

It has already been shown in this discussion that among American cities Los Angeles ranked No. 16 in population.

Bradstreet's commercial report for 1906 rated this city No. 16 in BANK CLEARINGS.

That is to say, the phenomenal record made by this brilliant city in growth of population is practically on a level with its business activity.

Going back to 1890 to study the commercial progress of Los Angeles, we find at that date, by the report of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, that just forty-four cities published their annual bank clearings.

Of the forty-four, Los Angeles ranked number forty-four—BOTTOM OF THE LIST. Now notice how this Capital of Progress moved toward the top, thus:

1890—Ranked in Clearings, 44 of 44
1900—Ranked in Clearings, 32 of 69
1906—Ranked in Clearings, 16 of 98

This is more vividly illustrated in Chart E, which shows with what marvelous speed Los Angeles has outstripped every city in the United States in clearings, in 16 years, except sixteen.

Now, clearinghouse exchanges are regarded as the best possible index of a town's commercial importance. (The banks represent all kinds of business—not merely the one or more big enterprises that are pointed out with pride as a proof of pre-eminence by most towns.

Hence, this is a real business center, a place as extraordinary for financial energy as for building homes and filling them with people. Only 16 years ago this city, as proved by the Government report on bank clearances, was inferior in traffic importance to many places that are now financially out of sight in the rear distance. Here are some illustrations:

TABLE FIVE.

HOW LOS ANGELES PASSED THEM.

	1890.	1900.	1906.
LOS ANGELES	$31,019,272	$113,586,763	$578,635,517
Syracuse, N. Y.	40,011,258	58,351,799	87,969,613
Grand Rapids, Mich.	37,666,070	56,808,493	117,310,241
Peoria, Ill.	80,223,353	102,957,946	150,950,390
Sioux City, Iowa	45,513,240	57,764,020	95,874,539
Memphis, Tenn.	130,738,371	131,114,710	247,534,435
St Joseph, Mo.	75,104,219	205,413,235	255,404,134
Wichita, Kan.	38,223,219	25,924,424	58,062,685
Richmond, Va.	112,231,320	169,157,724	303,437,211
Seattle, Wash.	54,929,251	125,926,009	485,902,021

Notice the table: In 1890 Los Angeles was by far the least of the lot of ten cities—every one of them full of energy and enterprise. Its business ranked less than half that of Peoria or St. Joseph, not a fourth of Memphis, far behind even Sioux City and Syracuse, less than three-fifths of Seattle.

Then look at their standing in 1906. This town of marvelous energy and enterprise, in 16 years, overcame every handicap of 1890, and forged ahead until its clearances were over six times those of Syracuse, five times Grand Rapids, nearly four times Peoria, six times Sioux City, far more than Memphis and St. Joseph, almost ten times Wichita, $275,000,000 in advance of Richmond, and ahead of Seattle $92,733,496!

Columns One and Two are pictured to the eye in Chart F, in which the ruled lines show Column One, and the shaded parts the NET GAIN in clearings in 16 years. See how Los Angeles GAINED!

CLOSE TO THE GREAT LEADERS.

And now this Capital of Unparalleled Financial Progress finds itself close to the records of the great financial centers. Bradstreet's report of clearances for 1906 shows the twenty ranking cities of the United States stood as follows:

TABLE SIX.

	Rank 1906.	Clearances 1906.
New York	1	$104,675,828,656
Chicago	2	11,047,311,894
Boston	3	8,335,346,113
Philadelphia	4	7,686,966,980
St. Louis	5	2,972,653,307
Pittsburgh	6	2,640,847,045
San Francisco	7	1,998,400,779
Baltimore	8	1,444,859,075
Kansas City	9	1,331,675,055
Cincinnati	10	1,310,435,600
New Orleans	11	1,020,252,303
Minneapolis	12	990,890,203
Cleveland	13	837,548,334
Detroit	14	670,130,702
Louisville	15	640,847,716
LOS ANGELES	16	578,635,517
Omaha	17	504,388,764
Milwaukee	18	493,415,885
Seattle	19	485,902,021
St. Paul	20	419,466,276

NEXT MATCHED AGAINST GREAT LEADERS.

Manifestly, there will be a contest during the next year or two between Los Angeles, Louisville and Detroit for Rank 14. What is reasonably sure to happen may be judged from the record of the past six years. Look at this:

	Total Pc. 6 Years.	Average Yearly Pc.
Los Angeles' gain	409	68.0
Detroit's gain	112	18.6
Louisville's gain	52	8.6

That is to say: The official record of clearings shows that the average business growth of Los Angeles was over three and one-half times as fast as that of Detroit since 1900, and nearly eight times as rapid as that of Louisville.

Can there be any serious doubt that before the close of 1908 this city will not only distance both those famous centers, but will be close to the heels of Cleveland and Minneapolis, to capture Rank Number 12, and stand among the best commercial leaders in North America?

Cleveland has both lake and land commerce; possesses immense shipbuilding and iron industries; is in the center of the richest section of the whole Nation—and for Los Angeles to overtake such a splendid city, even in ten years, would be an unparalleled achievement.

And if this feat is accomplished in TWO YEARS, will it not prove that this town is inspired with a genius for progress and financial energy, the like of which has probably NEVER BEFORE BEEN WITNESSED IN THE PROGRESS OF THE WORLD?

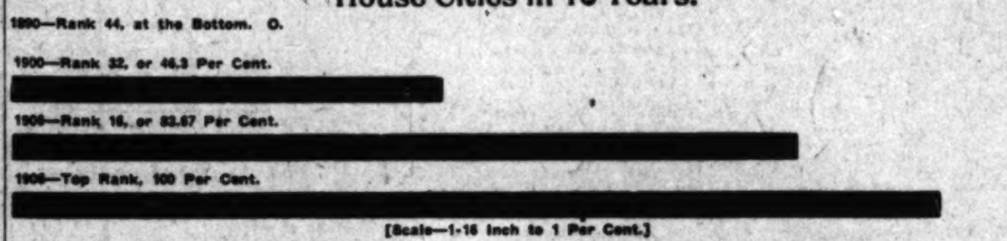
CHART E.

Showing How Los Angeles Has Climbed in Rank Among Clearing House Cities in 16 Years.

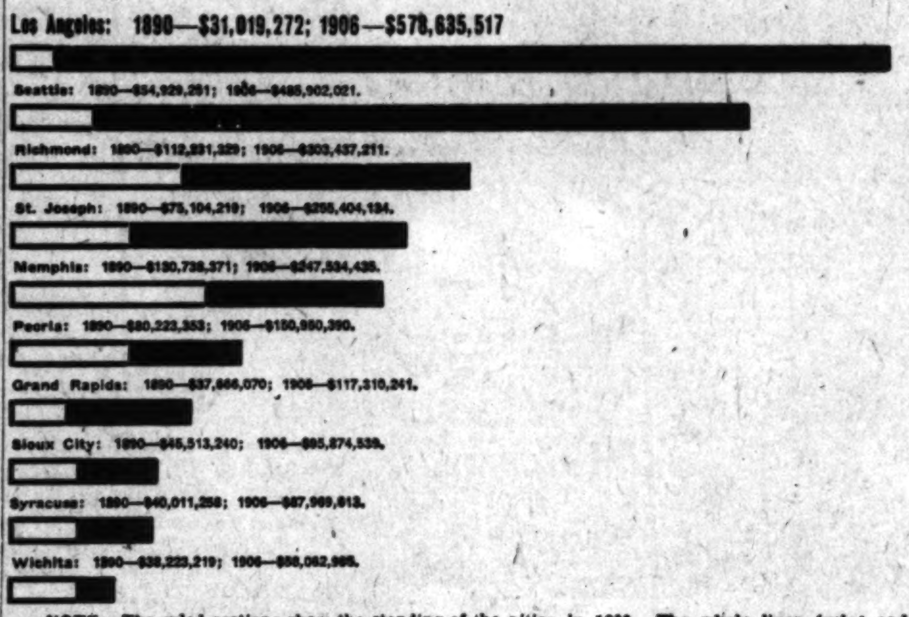


NOTE.—In 1890 forty-four cities were reported in the Clearing House statement of the Secretary of the Treasury. Los Angeles was at the bottom—its percentage was nothing—0. In ten years, 1900, it climbed up 46.3 per cent.—nearly half way. In six years more, 1906, it landed at 83.67 per cent. out of a possible 100—the top. The second shaded line shows how close the city now is to Rank No. 1, represented by the bottom line.

For obvious reasons San Francisco is not included in this showing.

CHART F.

Which Pictures How These Cities Started in Bank Clearings in 1890, and How They Came Out in 1906.



NOTE.—The ruled sections show the standing of the cities in 1890. The whole lines (ruled and shaded) the position in 1906. The Chart illustrates Table Five, columns 1 and 3.

For obvious reasons San Francisco is not included in these tabulations.

NOTE—The first number in the population column, for each city, is the official estimate by the mayors for 1906. All other items opposite the numbers "1905" are for that date.

AS a manufacturing center and commercial metropolis, Los Angeles ranks high among American cities, and her traffic and resources are expanding at a rate almost unprecedented.

"But, isn't Los Angeles mainly supported by tourist money?"

"Suppose the stream of visitors should cease, what would then keep up that great record of clearinghouse exchanges?"

"Wouldn't your city then lose its progressive gait, and wouldn't values sink, or at least stand still?"

"In brief, isn't the city really living on a 'boom' illusion liable to explode, especially in time of financial depression?"

Those are pointed questions some people ask, or think, particularly those who have not seen this city. Many have a secret misgiving that the unprecedented progress of recent years, notably since 1900, cannot possibly long continue.

Well, every visitor, every person abroad who has property here or who contemplates risking an investment in Los Angeles, is wise in making such inquiries.

For their benefit, and that of all others interested directly or indirectly, those questions shall here be answered fairly and squarely. Los Angeles has nothing to conceal.

TOURIST BUSINESS IS VERY IMPORTANT.

It is true that this is a land of Sunshine and Homes, the Winter Metropolis and Summer Outing City of America. In these lines its pre-eminence cannot be disputed.

It is true, too, that probably more than 300,000 people come here every year to reside permanently, or for the winter, or to stop a week, month, or more. It is true, doubtless, that they spend on an average at least $50 to $100 each while here and in Southern California, or $15,000,000 to $30,000,000 a year, probably about $25,000,000 all told.

And it is not necessary to deny that $25,000,000 make a very great yearly help to any city, in direct as well as indirect benefits. For, of the 300,000 annual visitors, an average of about 28,000 have become permanent residents every year since 1900—almost 10 per cent. of all who came!

That fact alone proves how well the tourists are pleased who see Los Angeles.

And to build new homes for 28,000 people every year—a new city as big as Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Bloomington, Ill., Jackson, Mich., or New Castle, Pa., requires vast quantities of material, square miles of new house sites, and thousands of workmen, to whom must be paid millions of money in salaries and wages.

All this makes every kind of business prosper, to be sure, and it would cause a "jolt" to have it stopped, or even partially cut off.

Besides the millions spent to pay the builders of new homes and business blocks, millions more go to those who house, feed, supply and transport the grand army of visitors.

Indeed, the commercial side of the tourist traffic is enough to satisfy almost any ordinary city, and to lose it would give Los Angeles a shock that might shake it to the foundation.

But, this splendid income won't be lost, even in time of depression!

If you have any doubts about that, read carefully all of this as well as Part Three of this discussion.

LOS ANGELES GREAT INDUSTRIAL CITY.

This town has broken all records in growth of both population and bank clearances.

And its progress in building factories, swelling their output and enlarging payrolls is equally great.

This may astonish thousands of even residents of this city, but proof is easy.

The United States Bureau of Commerce and Labor takes a census of the manufacturing business of all States every five years. The last one for Los Angeles was in 1905. By comparing that with the report of 1900, the rate of growth is demonstrated. Look at Table Seven. That is all, except the population figures, taken from the Government report mentioned.

The manufacturing statistics of five progressive cities are given. The totals for 1900 are compared with the totals for 1905, and the per cent. of increase, or decrease, in each item, is shown.

Every one of the places, except Seattle, had a larger population in 1900 than Los Angeles. Seattle is the town of pluck and push next to this one on the Coast.

Now, the great and forceful fact of this table is in the lines following: "Per Cent. Increase." Why? Because the RATE OF INCREASE of every one of the six items given is FAR LARGER for Los Angeles than any other town, with the single exception of the capital invested by Seattle, which is better by 10.4 per cent.

It's the story of the bank clearances and population over again—the best cities in America cannot be compared with Los Angeles.

So this IS A MANUFACTURING TOWN, and a high-class one. Look at the value of its industrial products over one year ago—nearly $35,000,000. And over $7,000,000 paid in wages to 10,424 hands. The capital invested was $28,181,418, nearly THREE TIMES what it was FIVE YEARS BEFORE!

And the rate of growth gets larger every year. But, call the rate of increase for 1906 the same as the average from 1900 to 1905, and the manufacturing totals for 1906 would stand like this:

LOS ANGELES FACTORIES IN 1906.

	Increase 1906.	Total 1906.
Value of product	$9,051,764	$43,866,238
Wages paid	2,446,838	9,535,013
Hands employed	2,116	12,540
Capital invested	10,145,310	38,326,728

As it is certain that the growth of manufacturing has been faster during two years past than the average for the five years, the value of manufactures for 1906 was not less than $45,000,000, the wages paid over $10,000,000 (nearly $1,000,000 a month,) the hands employed around 13,000, and the capital invested more than $40,000,000.

This record is close to that of Toledo, with its great shipyards, iron works and other extensive industries. Los Angeles, then, is a tourist town and one of the most prosperous and rapidly progressive manufacturing centers in the United States. The capital invested has increased annually on an average from 1900 to 1905, by Government report, at least 36 per cent.; the hands employed 20.3 per cent.; the wages paid by 34.52 per cent.; and the output over 26 per cent.

Let American towns generally take stock of their rate of progress for the same time, based on Government reports, and see how very few matched that record. Probably not half a dozen in the Nation did so.

CITY HAS OTHER EXTENSIVE RESOURCES.

But, Los Angeles has a great and growing wholesale business, too, not less than $60,000,000 a year. There is great wealth in its fruits and farm products, the minerals taken from the mountains. Some of the business it did last year would classify like this:

	Total 1906.
Wholesale trade	$60,000,000
Manufactures	45,000,000
Fruits and farm products	35,000,000
Mineral output	50,000,000
Tourist receipts	25,000,000
Annual total	$215,000,000

Those totals are conservative. Many think the manufactures exceeded $50,000,000 in 1906. Arizona alone in gold, silver and copper produced over $30,000,000. Then there are Sonora, Mexico, Southern California, and Nevada, certainly with an equal yield, not to mention petroleum, granite, gems, salt and many other lines of mineral wealth.

It is conservative in another way. When agricultural products are referred to in connection with Los Angeles, the thirteen southern counties of the State are usually included. In the foregoing estimate only the seven south of the mountains are intended.

THAT SUM LARGE; MORE COMING.

Take the wholesale and manufactures items out of the above total and there remains $110,000,000, which may be called original resources to live on. That's $30,000,000 more than all the gold produced under the American flag in 1904 (latest official report.)

But, the Great Southwest has really just begun to develop. About the time the census of 1910 is taken there will doubtless be new lands under irrigation, something like this:

	Acres.
West San Diego County	100,000
Imperial Valley	200,000
Western Arizona	100,000
Near Los Angeles	75,000
Total New Acres	475,000

Now, on an average, every acre of those lands will afford a net yield of at least $100, or $47,500,000 a year. Nor does that exhaust the agricultural possibilities in the traffic domain of Los Angeles. There in the Imperial Valley, on the American side, 400,000 acres that may yet be reclaimed. It is estimated that a body half as large continues over the line into Mexico. There are 600,000 acres of tillable land in the west end of San Diego county, of which, in time, certainly 200,000 acres will be irrigated in addition to that now cultivated.

Doubtless at least 75,000 acres will be added to the productive area around Los Angeles by means of the new water system and wells. And north of the mountains—it will be easy to increase the farm land of the South San Joaquin Valley by 100,000 acres or more—it is being done now.

That means 775,000 acres of new farms—which will yield about $80,000,000 every year. So that in, say, ten years, the living of Los Angeles may be thus estimated:

WHAT MAY SUPPORT LOS ANGELES.

Farm products, 13 counties	$150,000,000
Mineral output	75,000,000
Manufacturing	100,000,000
Wholesale traffic	125,000,000
Tourist returns	50,000,000
Marine commerce	50,000,000
Total support	$550,000,000

The conservative man will say, "That is merely an estimate." So is the business of every man in the Nation who plans for the coming year.

But it is a reasonable estimate, easily probable. The total for agricultural returns is really low. It may be increased in San Joaquin Valley by another 100,000 acres. There are 1,000,000 tillable acres in Fresno county alone, and water is abundant. It may be possible to enlarge the total in Western Arizona by more than 50,000 acres, and in San Diego county by 100,000 acres.

This will take costly work and reservoirs. Perhaps the Government may have to manage it. It is now known that vast supplies of water may be had from wells, even in Imperial Valley, and this will solve a large part of the water question. But these possibilities are pointed out for one main purpose, to prove that the region around Los Angeles really possesses IMMENSE RESOURCES, and that there is FULL WARRANT FOR A CITY OF AT LEAST 600,000 PEOPLE ON A BASIS OF ANNUAL PRODUCTION AND LEGITIMATE BUSINESS!

That this city is not a mere speculative structure, ready to dissolve at a breath of adverse pressure.

That Los Angeles is, in fact, on as sound a foundation as any large city in the United States.

This will be shown more fully later on in this Appreciation of the MOST PROGRESSIVE CITY IN THE UNITED STATES—WHICH MEANS THE WORLD!

THE THIRD ARTICLE OF THIS IMPORTANT SERIES WILL BE PRINTED IN NEXT SUNDAY'S TIMES, AND WILL DEAL WITH "GREATER LOS ANGELES"—THE FUTURE OF THIS SUPERB CITY.

Circulate These Big Facts!

The series of three impressive articles on the development of Los Angeles, of which this is No. 2, will be assembled in a single half-size 8-page sheet and printed for widespread distribution.

Eight Captivating Pages.

This special sheet will be issued immediately after the closing article has been published next Sunday.

These facts, shown in the imposing tables and charts, are convincing evidence of the wonderful strides in population, finance and manufacturing industries made by Los Angeles, the freest city in America. A wide dissemination of this "meaty" literature will forever set at rest the "doubting Thomases" and jealous neighbors who are harping against this "City of the Angels."

Therefore, it is proposed to print all the text and tables of demonstration in a convenient, 8-page sheet, and offer them to merchants and others (who will mail them abroad) on the following basis:

In 5000 lots, $5 per thousand. Purchasers to have the privilege of having a red line printed on the front page, reading, "Compliments of John Jones," without extra charge. In addition, The Times will insert, if desired, a page advertisement for any purchaser, charging only the cost to the office in addition to the $5 per thousand.

In less than 5000 lots and down to 2500 copies, $7.50 per thousand, same conditions as 5000 lots.

Less than 2500 and down to 1000 copies, $10 per thousand, same conditions as in 5000 lots.

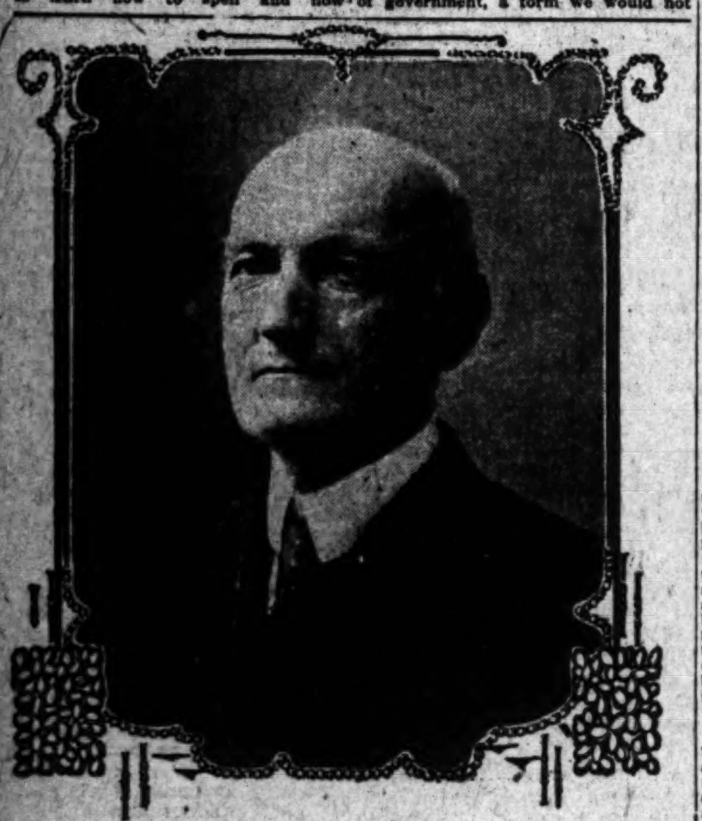
1000 copies or less, 1c per copy straight, with no extra printing.

Talks With Big Ones.

SAMUEL WALKER M'CALL SAYS "OUR CITIZENS MAY BE TRUSTED TO LEARN HOW TO SPELL AND HOW TO REGULATE DIETS AND THEIR BATHS WITHOUT TOO MUCH GOVERNMENTAL ASSISTANCE FROM WASHINGTON."

By James B. Morrow.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]



SAMUEL W. M'CALL.

WASHINGTON, (D. C.) June 24.—If Samuel Walker McCall were an ox, tractable under the yoke and callous to the gad, he might be the one mighty leader in the labors and policies of the lower House of Congress. He has the head for it.

But he is an intellectual thoroughbred, with the pernicious party vices of jumping fences, biting and striking at his trainers, and running away with those who try to drive him. So he is put in a stall by himself, and whenever Uncle Joseph Cannon approaches, either with a bridle or a measure of oats, he carries a pitchfork and hollows, "Whoa!"

"Our citizens," and this is a frolicsome kick higher up, "may be trusted to learn how to spell and how to regulate their diets and their baths without too much governmental assistance from Washington."

Nevertheless, black and yellow are not the colors for an accurate portrait of the tall and masculine legislator from Winchester, which is near to Boston, in Massachusetts. He is neither a cynic nor a showman. There are flowers in his eyes—daffodils and blue iris, for instance; palatable fruit and no crab apples is in his boughs, and sunshine is over and pretty much all through him. Still more, he has the refined and expressive countenance of imagination and wisdom. Also the tongue of a meat ax or a mellow cathedral bell, as suits his mood and subject. At Dartmouth he spoke in celebration of Daniel Webster's graduation a century before. The speech, printed and bound, is in the libraries. Three years ago he was the Phi Beta Kappa orator at Harvard—a glowing man before a body of honor students. His biography of Thaddeus Stevens, manager of Andrew Johnson's impeachment, reconstructor of the South and autocrat of Congress, establishes his authorship and historical attainments.

PHILIPPINES ARE A NUISANCE.

The tariff should be revised, he says. The Philippines are a peril and a nuisance. Decayed politicians are trying to run the railroads of the country and threaten a panic. The President of the United States ought to keep within the ancient boundaries of the Constitution.

Thus it is that party regularity, through the sanhedrim in Washington, complains that his flag is piratical and that his weapons are a long dagger and a leaky pot of nitroglycerin. Against such harsh judgment, however, is the infatuation or stupidity of the Winchester district. McCall has been in the House of Representatives fourteen years and is coming for another term next December.

"In your view, what is the most serious question before the country?" he was asked.

ENDANGERS OUR CITIZENSHIP.

"Whether the officeholders, or, in other words, the trustees of the people, are to administer the laws within the Constitution, or do as they please regardless of the Constitution. We are either to go onward in the old way or adopt the South American system, which is a form of absolutism. If the States are to be deprived of their rights, it will not be long until the citizen is regulated from Washington. The effort to centralize power in the national government is made in the belief, or anyway, with the statement, that the States are incapable of dealing with large matters which concern all of the people. But are the States incapable? Massachusetts led the way in legislation demanded by changed conditions in labor. New York has given the country all of the facts about life insurance. Our railways, it must be remembered, have been constructed under State laws. One road, the Union Pacific, was built by the authority of the general government and the Credit Mobilier scandal which followed blackened many personal reputations and brought disgrace to the whole nation. I said several months ago that I could see no reason for the highly centralized paternalism which is threatened and which, when it comes, will engender a servile dependence upon government and destroy the fiber of our citizenship."

"What will be the issues in the Presidential campaign of 1908?"

"I wouldn't risk a prophecy. The contest may be a match between radicals themselves, or between radicalism on one side and conservatism on the other. My own belief is that the Republicans should go to the country with a pledge to revise the tariff. All of the schedules in the Dingley law ought to be investigated. The iron and steel schedule certainly should be changed. It is the very worst in the list. The American people are paying tribute to interests which do not need it. Necessary as revision is, it must be undertaken only by the protectionists themselves. No injury would then follow. Free-trade tinkering with the tariff would check business, perhaps stop it altogether, and we should not get under way again for a long time."

"You have never surrendered the privilege of thinking for yourself, although you are a Republican office holder?"

MASTER OF HIS HEAD AND CONSCIENCE.

"I hope I am the master of my own head and conscience. I was a party man, and was so regarded until shortly after we went to war with Spain. I don't believe we ought to burden ourselves with the Philippines—a thousand troublesome islands in the remote Pacific. We are eloquent, and sometimes rather savage in our adherence to the Monroe doctrine. No foreign power is to lay covetous hands on any part of South or Central America. Nevertheless, we thrust our own arm into the distant Orient and joyfully grabbed new territory. Then after we had seized the Philippines we benevolently gave its people a colonial form of government, a form we would not endure ourselves, and which we rejected for all time in our Declaration of Independence. We have not been consistent. Moreover, possession of the Philippines has changed our traditional military policy by greatly increasing our army and has fastened on us a large and unnecessary annual expense. We have been brought to the very door of Japan. Without the Philippines, we should be 7000 miles away, and beyond the zone of sudden and successful attack.

"With me, however, the test with my party came with the bill to impose a tariff on the products of Porto Rico. I said that Porto Rico was American territory and entitled under the Constitution to free trade with the United States. The Supreme Court held that the view I maintained was wrong, but four able lawyers and judges on that bench, among them being Mr. Justice Brewer, who has one of the greatest legal minds in the world, said that my conclusion was sound. Therefore, in the slang of the day, I stand pat."

"You are a Boston lawyer, but a western man, and reversed the usual proceeding by going East?"

"I was born in Pennsylvania. When I was two years old my father moved to Mount Carroll, Ill., which is ten miles east of the Mississippi River, and in the latitude of Chicago. He had a foundry, and sold hardware. The panic of 1857 didn't bankrupt him, but it did him no good. He sold his business and moved to a large farm which he owned. I recollect that he usually planted eighty acres in wheat and the same acreage in corn. There were neighbors on one side of us, and a great, open prairie on the other. The fragrance of the wild flowers, roses among the rest, is with me yet. Barefooted, I walked through the native grass, which was so tall that it reached to my neck. I saw blue-racers, and now and then passed the brown nest of a prairie chicken, which I only discovered when the hen rose behind me and beat a tattoo of retreat with her wings. The air was as transparent as plate glass and full of tonic and sunshine. I have loved the prairies ever since, but they are gone, with some of the other joys of my boyhood. Now, if one goes to a sparsely-settled region, he finds mountains, and plains, or forests.

PUT ON AIRS.

"I attended an academy at Mount Carroll, but when it was closed, returned to the district school near my home, where I put on airs, and was arrogant because the teacher had to look on his books when I recited. He should have flogged me. A family of New Hampshire Yankees were our neighbors, and from them I learned about the preparatory school at New Hampton. I asked my father if I could go, but he made no reply. When the catalogue came, however, he gave his consent. It took a week to make the journey of 1200 miles. I had read the life of Daniel Webster, together with his speeches, and Thomas A. Benton's 'Thirty Years' View.' While at Mount Carroll I was a steady visitor to the Courthouse, where I went to hear the lawyers make speeches and examine witnesses. That was about all the recreation we had in those days. So the law was in my thought when I asked my father for an education.

"I decided to go to Dartmouth, because Daniel Webster was graduated from that college. I wanted to imitate Daniel as closely as I could. Lyman Trumbull, the friend of Lincoln, and an eminent lawyer, captivated me with a speech, and I planned to get a place in his office in Chicago, but Samuel Leland Powers, who was in my class at Dartmouth, and with whom I served in Congress several years ago, persuaded me to read law with him at Nashua, N. H. Both of us received money from home, but we thought we should like to earn a little ourselves, and for a time taught a night school. Many of the pupils were lusty chaps, and pugilistic of disposition. Consequently, when Sam taught I watched, and when I taught he watched. One night he got into a heated controversy with a big fellow in the back line of seats, and there were indications that the fight which ensued might become general. I knew the school could whip Sam and me, and so I said: 'Boys, if you don't interfere I won't. Let the better man win.'

HE WON THE FIST FIGHT.

"Sam conquered the ruffian by a free application of his fists and has ever since boasted of my arts in diplomacy. We finished our law education in Worcester, Mass., and were admitted to the bar in that city. I had no intention of remaining in the East, but was almost engaged to be married and was reluctant to take the hazard which sometimes attaches to absence. Therefore, Sam and I hired an office in the dearest building in Boston and began business. Let me add in passing that our fathers continued to supply us with funds. That was a long time ago, as I look back, and now my son, who is also a lawyer, is in Chicago, and is carrying out the plans I made for myself."

"In your life of Stevens you say 'he was favored with the usual amount of leisure which young lawyers have at their disposal.' What was your own experience?"

"Well, Sam and I observed the traditions. Having little else to do I continued to post myself in the law and to keep up my classical studies. Rufus Choate, likewise a Dartmouth man, came into my reading, and I wrote an article on his life and achievements, which was printed in a St. Louis magazine. Then I prepared a sketch of Charles Sumner. Our first lawsuit concerned a bill of $10 for rent. We lost it and got no fee. The judgment was wrong, and I have always regretted that I didn't carry the matter further.

"Then Sam, who was soon to be married, attended an auction and bought a huge painting of Lake Placid in the Adirondacks. He imagined that its purple trees and impossible sky and water would give a refined touch to his parlor. A certain sum was paid down on the spot. The balance was to be forthcoming when Sam called for the picture. He didn't call promptly and the gem was knocked off to some one else. Sam retained me and I entered suit for damages. When the trial came on the courtroom was filled with idle young lawyers who wanted to see the show. I put Sam on the stand and attempted to qualify him as an expert by asking if he had traveled in Europe and visited the principal art galleries in Italy, France and other countries. I wanted, you know, to get at the value of the rare canvas which he had lost through the impatience and mercenary spirit of the auctioneer. But the court wouldn't accept Sam's expert testimony. However, we recovered the first cost of the picture which, as I remember, was $15.

"About that time Sam said we ought to live in a better looking house. It would help business, he thought. He hunted around and found an imposing edifice, with a marble front. We moved, but Sam was wrong. Furthermore, our landlady kept a miserable little dog, which furiously barked at us every time we approached our habitation. Sam said that the barking was undignified and that it tended to lower our tone both as lawyers and citizens. 'Who,' he asked, 'wants to be yelped at as if he were a cow or a tramp?'

COULDN'T DODGE THE DOG.

"On Saturday night, if our resources were scant, we went home together, and after bedtime, in the hope of finding the dog nodding at his post, dead or absent. But he was always wide awake and on duty, and then the woman would get out of bed and dun us. Finally, the firm held a consultation. Sam said that the partners separately could make fully as much money as they could jointly. He got a piece of paper and multiplied nothing by one and then by two and mathematically proved the accuracy of his observation. Thus the partnership was dissolved. My practice grew and so did his, and we got along all right."

"What has been your experience in journalism?"

"I helped to edit a college paper at Dartmouth, but it didn't pay, and at my graduation gave the printer a note for my share of the debt. Years afterward William E. Barrett, who followed me at college, came to my office with the note. The New Hampshire method of computing interest is the fiercest in the world. Barrett took my breath when he showed me the figures, but I paid him. Later he bought the Boston Advertiser. At his suggestion I put several thousand dollars into the paper, and became its editor. However, I didn't quit practicing law. I had definite political principles, and urged them in the Advertiser with enthusiasm. After I had poured out my mind, a task I accomplished in less than a year, I saw that further work as an editor would turn me into a machine, and I withdrew from journalism."

You have served fourteen years in Congress, with what aggregate result to yourself?"

"None that I know of except that I have lost my law business. But that came about unconsciously. When one is elected to Congress, he thinks he can hold his clients, but that is utterly impossible to do unless one has a partner. My clients gradually vanished from sight, leaving me only those who never paid, and even they grew weary, and eventually went with the rest. Just the same, I am glad to be a member of the House of Representatives, and have taken pride and pleasure in my service."

ROOSEVELT AS A STUDENT.

Record at Harvard Not an Index of His Career in Later Life by Any Means.

F. J. Ranlet, Harvard '80, notes in the June number of The Harvard Graduates' Magazine that Theodore Roosevelt was graduated twenty-first in his class, his "number" at Harvard corresponding exactly with Grant's at West Point.

Young Roosevelt's choice of studies was distinguished by "small Latin and less Greek." But as President, his Pullman car companions are Plutarch and Thucydides.

The courses which he elected in sophomore, junior, and senior years were confined to these branches:

German, French, Italian, natural history, political economy.

He received a mark of 89 per cent., or over, his classmate observes, pretty generally throughout these courses. In his prescribed courses, also, sophomore history, rhetoric, logic and metaphysics, he "took high stand." Wonderful to relate, he shone in mathematics, and "led the class," in political economy. Were the student the father of the President as the child is father of the man, Roosevelt the President should have turned with inerrant eagerness to a reform of the tariff and of the currency system.

His after-life betrays another antithetic anomaly. The author of "The Winning of the West" and of numerous other books, magazine articles, stirring campaign documents, and balanced speeches on both sides of the trust question, went lame in his courses in college composition. Excepting in junior year, when he had only a fair "stand," the name of Roosevelt is missing from the rank list for ability to write essays. Moreover, although he has written and made much history, the history of nations is noticeably absent from his choice of elective studies.

But in one direction the President has utilized his college training most consistently. His studies of natural history, comprising courses in comparative anatomy and physiology of vertebrates, elementary botany, physical geography and meteorology, geology, and elementary and advanced zoölogy, these under the supervision of Prof. Shaler, qualified him to become the redoubtable assailant of "the nature fakirs."—[New York Times.

THE ROUND TABLE

SCIENCE NOTES.

Steel Direct from the Ore.

Consul Baker of Sydney, Australia, announces the development of a new smelting method whereby steel is made directly from iron ore. The plant erected for experimental purposes will turn out ten tons per day. The ore thus far treated has been the magnetic iron sand of New Zealand, but the inventors say the process is effective in treating any ferruginous ore, provided the same is pulverized. The laboratory tests of the steel gave the tensile strength, 32.73 tons per square inch; elongation in length of 8 inches, 30 per cent.; contraction in area, 50 per cent.; and apparent limit of elasticity, 20.79 tons. This is quite equal to the requirements of the standard specification for steel used in bridge girders and for other structural purposes.

Sunbeams and Bacteria.

Scientific investigation has proved that sunlight possesses a wonderful power to kill injurious germs in river water. Where a river is polluted by sewage, millions and billions of dangerous microbes flourish in its water, and are carried along with it to spread disease and death around its banks unless their development is arrested. If the sun does not shine upon such a river it may become a peril to whole communities. But if the sunlight does reach it freely, the germs are destroyed and the water is kept comparatively free from infection.

Recent experiments in this country have shown that sunbeams are able to destroy bacteria in water at a depth of at least twenty inches beneath the surface. The slaughter of the microbes is by far the greatest when both perpendicular and oblique rays enter the water uninterrupted. Like a ship in action, the sun is most powerful when it can rake the enemy with a cross-fire. And it has to shoot its tiny arrows of light a long way—almost ninety-three million miles! But, fortunately for us, they get here and they are effective.

Automatic Egg Dater.

A Pennsylvania man has devised a machine to date hen's eggs, so that the purchaser may ascertain their age at a glance. His scheme is to provide a nest to which is attached a rubber chute, which conveys the egg to the dating appliance. The chute is arranged with rubber stops to lessen the speed of the egg as it rolls merrily on its way. The dating attachment is operated by clockwork, and one winding will keep it running a year. As the egg reaches the dater it is caught in a clutch and held in place while the stamp is applied. The egg then rolls into a basket.

Marvelous Electric Road.

Genoa and Milan are to be connected by a marvelous electric railroad, eighty-five miles in length, which is to cost $47,000,000. The excessive cost of it is owing to the nature of the country through which the line will pass. It will require nineteen tunnels, one of which will be twelve miles long. There will be 372 bridges and the road will be six years in the course of construction. The cost of the line construction alone will be $500,000 per mile. The line will be double-tracked, and there will be no grade crossings. Trains will consist of three cars, each accommodating fifty passengers. It is proposed to run twenty trains a day, and it is estimated that the daily traffic will be 6000 passengers. A very complete schedule has been arranged to take care of the express and local traffic as well as the freight of that section of the country. The power will be derived from a 24,000-horse-power hydraulic generating plant.

New Smoke Consumer.

A smoke consumer has been recently patented that consumes 95 per cent. of the smoke. The machine is an automatic device to further the combustion of coal and thereby prevent smoke. It works automatically with the opening and shutting of the firebox door, and the scheme is to inject steam and air into the firebox. The saving in the amount of coal consumed is great.

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

President Wheeler of the University of California has declined the invitation to become president of the Boston Institute of Technology. The offer carried with it $5000 more salary than he is getting at Berkeley.

Prof. Davidson, head of the geographic department of the University of California has gone to Southeastern Alaska to examine the glaciers and determine whether they are retreating or advancing.

Charles R. Lewers, one of the prominent lawyers of Reno, has been chosen head of the law department of the University of Nevada. He was formerly connected with the law department of Stanford University.

Prof. M. E. Jaffa of Berkeley has made an examination, as a food expert, of Burbank's spineless cactus, and finds they are made up of nutritious elements and valuable as forage for animals.

STREAKS OF HUMOR.

The Meanest Yet.

"Mr. Dumley's just the meanest man," said Miss Koy. "He told me last evening he'd teach me how to whistle if I'd pucker up my lips—"

"Oh, that old scheme!" exclaimed Miss Wise. "Then he kissed you, eh?"

"No, the stupid thing. He didn't kiss me at all."—[Philadelphia Press.

Will Bring Others Also.

The prison reformer met the convicted lawyer in his striped garb.

"And what brought you here, unhappy man?" she asked him.

His old-time cleverness asserted itself.

"An automobile," he blithely replied.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Perfect Husband.

"What is your idea of a perfect husband?" asked the sentimental girl.

"A perfect husband," answered Miss Cayenne, "is one who will submit to any amount of reproof because he delayed dinner to see an eleven-inning baseball game to the finish, and never once allude to the similar delays occasioned by his wife's devotion to illustrated lectures or pianists."—[Washington Star.

Preferred to Compromise.

New Groom: What do I owe you?

Parson: Two dollars, please.

New Groom: I'll give you $1 and let you kiss the bride.

Parson: I'll give you 50 cents to let me off.—[Philadelphia Telegraph.

A Broad Hint.

She (after 12;) And would you really put yourself out for my sake?

He: Indeed I would.

She: Then do it. I'm awfully sleepy.—[Judge.

When She Works Eight Hours.

Wife: John, get up, the baby's crying. Go and see what's the matter.

John: Why don't you go yourself. You can look after him better than I can.

Wife: I should say not. I'm not on duty until 8 o'clock in the morning.—[Exchange.

Good Time to Leave.

Billikin: What's the matter, Willikin?

Willikin: Matter enough. You know, some time ago I assigned all my property to my wife, to—to keep it out of the hands of—of people I owe, you know.

Billikin: Yes.

Willikin: Well, she's taken the money and gone off—says she won't live with me because I swindled my creditors.—[Tit-Bits.

Always Obeys Orders.

Mrs. Gruff: What did you do, George, when the burglars got into the house?

Mr. Gruff: Do? Just what they told me. I've never had my way in this house yet.—[Judge.

Wanted to Know.

She: So you are going abroad? Don't forget to write to me from every place you go to.

He: Delighted. Excuse my asking—but is this a confession of love, or have you—er—started a picture post-card album?—[The Throne.

MEN AND THINGS OVER THE SEAS.

Duke of Abruzzi.

The Duke of Abruzzi, the representative of the King of Italy at the opening of the Jamestown Exposition, is one of the most interesting men to come to the United States. He has tried for the North Pole, ascended the Mountains of the Moon, negotiated the peaks of the Himalayas, chanced the Alpine glaciers, and was the first to lead an expedition to the top of Mt. St. Elias, yet any one casually meeting him would never suspect him of caring for anything except to be a good listener. It would be hard indeed to find a more versatile man or one who for his years—for he is only 34—has been so successful in so many departments of human endeavor. What Prince Rupert was in war Prince Louis of Savoy, as he is also called, has been in the conquest of nature.

An Ancient Chapel.

An important gap in history has been filled by the discovery of the Church of Saint Cesarus, as the result of the excavations being made on the site of the Milla Mills, on Palatine Hill, in Rome. This was the private chapel of the first Christian emperors, and was completely forgotten by the fourteenth century, no mention of it being made after that.

King Alfonse's Home Life.

The home life of the King and Queen of Spain is said to be very happy. There are rarely any guests. After dinner His Majesty smokes and plays the piano; in these honeymooning hours, it may be, wanders in the dim gardens of the palace. At 11 o'clock down all the great staircases come the ushers and servants and guards who have the watch of the night—a soft-stepping, solemn procession. Last of all comes the Swiss of the house, for it would be unfair to speak of so great a dignitary as porter. His uniform is red and yellow; he wears a huge three-cornered hat, and by his side hangs a sword in a gilt scabbard. In one hand he carries a ponderous bunch of keys; in the other an iron lantern. One by one he locks the doors of the great palace and extinguishes the lights. In the darkness and the silence, immobile, the halberdiers watch.

PROMINENT PERSONS.

The widow of Collis P. Huntington has informed her friends in Washington of her purpose to reside permanently in Paris. With this object in view she is preparing to close her house in New York and go to the French capital, where there will soon be completed a mansion for her costing nearly $1,000,000.

The Earl of Durham has given to Sunderland Museum an entomological collection of American specimens which were secured by the first Earl of Durham when he was Governor-General of Canada. They include three thousand examples, mostly butterflies, moths and beetles, and also stick and leaf insects, locusts, cicadas, dragon flies and spiders. Some of the latter are of the tarantula class, measuring six inches across. A special exhibition is to be made of them.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief chemist of the Department of Agriculture, has gone to Bordeaux, France, where he will be the American member of the jury which is to pass upon the food products shown at the Maritime Exposition. His invitation came by cable from the director-general of the exposition.

IN THE BIG INDUSTRIES.

A Great Car Plant.

The American Car and Foundry Company has purchased a tract of 170 acres near Hammond, Ind., and will at once begin the erection of a plant for the construction of cars. The plant will be larger than any of the seventeen other plants of the company, and when completed, will be its manufacturing headquarters. The capacity will be 100 cars daily, and it is intended to make it the most efficiently equipped factory in the world.

Growing Use of Gas Engines.

The United States Steel Corporation has given one company an order for thirty-six gas engines of the largest type, the order aggregating 144,000 horse-power, and weighing 1,500,000 pounds each.

The great bulk and weight of these engines may be gathered from the fact that a total of 2300 freight cars will be required to transport them to the various plants of the steel trust. The contracts call for the delivery of the engines as follows: Twenty-five engines will be installed in the mammoth new plant now being built at Gary, Ind., seven will go to the famous Homestead, Pa., plant, and four will be shipped to the Illinois Steel Company at South Chicago.

The United States Steel Corporation has discovered a process whereby the gas from its blast furnaces, which now goes to waste, may be used as power for its engines.

Will Grow Tobacco.

As a result of the report of the government expert on the growth of tobacco in the Sacramento county foothills, George Spiker has arranged with the County Supervisors and the county physician to plant, cultivate and cure a thousand plants on the hospital grounds at Sacramento. Mr. Spiker several years ago raised a crop of tobacco on the Upper Stockton road that satisfied him of the adaptability of the crop to the soil.

A Great Tube Mill.

The Jones & Laughlin Company of Pittsburgh and the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company are to erect a huge tube mill at Lorain, O., as a competitor of the National Tube Company, which now holds almost a monopoly of the tube business. Over 4000 acres of land have been purchased for the plant.

PREPARES FOR EMERGENCIES.

Mexico Taking no Chances With Guatemala.

Military Force Will Patrol Southern Border.

Measure Precautionary Rather Than Hostile.

BY EDWARD C. BUTLER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CITY OF MEXICO, June 24.—The departure yesterday of Gen. Rosalino Martinez for Salina Cruz does not necessarily alarm people. Gen. Martinez is Assistant Secretary of War and Marina. He goes to Salina Cruz and [illegible], via the port of Vera Cruz in a Mexican gunboat, accompanied by his staff, also a number of engineers, army officers, military surgeons, etc. After visiting the Tehuantepec Railway, property of the government, a truly strategic road, he goes to the frontier of Guatemala. This observation corps will travel through the State of Chiapas as far as the Pan-American Railway carries them and then make their way as best they can through the tropical jungles that extend for a hundred miles beyond the terminus of the Pan-American Railway. Quite a large number of soldiers accompany Gen. Martinez, and the encampment on the Guatemala frontier will be rather indefinite. Wooden barracks, in sections, will be carried across the country, ready to be erected in the vicinity of Tapachula, a Mexican town close to the boundary line. But the observation corps under the command of the Assistant Secretary of War will be gradually scattered until it covers the entire frontier line, so as to watch the maneuvers in Guatemala. The intention is not hostile, but precautionary. People living along a common frontier are credited with more or less of mutual distrust, and at any time there might be a clash, not between Mexico and Guatemala necessarily, but between citizens of either republic with a "grievance" against the citizens of the other. On two or three occasions Mexico has had trouble with Guatemala, arising from friction thus originating between individual interests.

Among other duties of the corps of observation will be a policing of the frontier to prevent the smuggling of arms from the States of Tabasco and Chiapas into the republic of Guatemala. The presence of soldiers along the border will also have a quieting effect on dwellers living on either side of the line, especially in Guatemala adjacent to the territory of Chiapas, a State which at one time formed part of the republic of Guatemala. There exists, unfortunately, some frictional feeling in a portion of Guatemala toward Mexicans for their present possession of that exceedingly fertile district. The move by the War Department involves considerable expenditure and sacrifice on the part of the Mexican government, but seems to be advisable, especially as Guatemala has recently fortified the point called Ocos and is massing troops on its own side, as Mexico is doing.

In time of peace the army of Mexico consists of 30,000 men, fully armed and equipped, and with sufficient ammunition and arms to last for five years' service. The equipment of the Mexican army is excellent, especially the cavalry. On call, the army can be greatly increased. It is calculated that in time of war, and almost instantly available, Mexico could command the services of [illegible] men.

PUSHING THE PAN-AMERICAN.

Contrary to precedent, work will be pushed on the Pan-American Railway through the rainy season. Hitherto, such work was always suspended on account of the storms that beat down on that tropical section of Mexico. But the government seems desirous of completing the line and thus getting into close touch with her turbulent neighbor to the south. Scarcely anything is so discouraging to revolutions or seditions than a railroad connecting the capital of the country with the seat of disturbance. Prior to the building of the trunk lines between Mexico City and the American frontier, revolutions were frequent. Since the building of the Mexican Central and the Mexican National railroads, this country has had no revolutions. The rails for the last seventy-five kilometers of road necessary to complete the Pan-American Railway to the border, have been ordered. They will soon arrive. With the completion of the 100 kilometers recently finished, the road is now at Huixtla, about 400 kilometers south of San Geronimo. This last-named place is the northern terminus of the line, a station on the line of the Tehuantepec Railroad. Mr. Nee[illegible] went north last Wednesday night, going first to California. He will then proceed to New York and Washington and be back here within a few weeks to push the work on the road. On his return to Mexico he will be accompanied in his private car by Hon. Joaquin D. Casasus, formerly Mexican Ambassador to the United States, and family. They have been at Paris some time on account of the health of Mrs. Casasus.

NEW ROAD TO RICH MINES.

One of the most promising mining properties in the republic is La Dicha, a copper property in the State of Guerrero. George Mitchell of California, who is president of the company, authorizes the statement that the grading of the railroad being built by the company from the port of Marquez, on the coast, to the mines is being rapidly pushed. The terminal and the dock will be finished in time to handle the rails, which started from Antwerp in May. The ties and the timber have been received from Seattle and rolling stock will be shipped this month from San Francisco. In all, three locomotives and fifteen flat cars will soon be on the road. Equipments and tools for 2500 men are now on the ground and the force of workmen is to be increased as the road advances up the steep inclines that at present shut out this splendid mining region from the sea. A [illegible]-ton furnace in the camp is being finished and another of 350 tons is to be soon commenced. This will make the total working capacity of the furnaces at the camp and sea level [illegible] 800 tons per day.

A disastrous fire broke out in the [illegible] ranch in the State of Chihuahua about a fortnight ago. The sawmill and about 70,000 feet of lumber went up in smoke, the loss being about $10,-[illegible]

Mrs. John W. Mitchell of Los Angeles, accompanied by her niece, Miss [illegible] Parry-Jones, are visiting in this city. They intended to return to their home at Los Angeles early next week, but may stay a few days longer, the witchery of climate, costume and custom having fascinated them. The ladies spent some weeks in Guadalajara, part of the time as guests of Mr. [illegible], one of the prominent pro-

SEARCHLIGHT.

New Railroad Projected—Rich Finds Reported—River Transportation Started.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SEARCHLIGHT, (Nev.) June 27.—Geo. P. Spittall of the Philadelphia-Searchlight mine, six miles north of town, has practically decided to build a railroad from Las Vegas to Searchlight by the way of Eldorado Cañon, a distance of sixty miles. In this way, as he explains, this camp will secure direct and favorable connections with both the east and the gold camps to the north. He says that the only detail of importance that is yet to have attention is a traffic arrangement with the Salt Lake Railroad. This he is confident of effecting next week in Los Angeles, and at once thereafter construction work is to be commenced and pushed. Mr. Spittall has expended about $50,000 on the mine and is highly satisfied with the results.

The Silver Legion at Nob Hill which, a short time back, cut into rich ore on the east drift, of the 100-foot level, has made another rich find in the west drift of the same level.

The West Extension of the Searchlight M. and M. Co., owned by Ward and Watkins, now down 235 feet, has just commenced the erection of a gallows frame and has ordered a hoist.

Sandy Harris, who recently launched a new flat-bottomed boat at Eldorado Cañon and drifted down to Needles' smelter with a load of ore, says the run was made in eleven hours and without serious mishap. Further he said—"Sandbars, of course, are numerous, but gave little trouble. My boat, now at Needles, measures forty-six feet in length and ten-foot beam, drawing, when loaded, eighteen inches of water. Am having a forty-horsepower gasoline engine, four cylinder, built in Los Angeles for the boat—to be delivered in thirty days. There will be a stern wheel, eight feet in diameter, also a forty-foot mast as a helper. I expect to carry twenty-five tons on the boat and to tow a forty-ton trailer. As for freight, I have been nearly swamped with orders. I have already commenced plans for two other boats. All along the river there is all kinds of ore stacked up awaiting shipment to the smelter." This promises to be a great factor in the development of a large section on either side of the Colorado. Much of that country can hardly be reached in any other way.

C. E. L. Gresh, who is at the helm of the Eldorado-Empire, Eldorado Cañon, which recently opened up very rich ore, is cutting out a very active season of work. The city business office will be with I. R. Landis, in Los Angeles, while Mr. Gresh will attend to the mine work. The latter is now getting equipment, chief of which is a five-stamp mill. In a short time they will send out a large automobile to ply between the town and camp.

The strike last week of Russian John on the schooner group, four miles south of Eldorado Cañon, was an instance of miners' luck. The ledge, in this case, as it appeared on the surface, was small and very ordinary. It was a small cropping in the center of a large red dyke. The first work was started at a point along its course where, apparently, the requirements of the law could be satisfied with a minimum of physical effort. But the ground was barely scratched when a ribbon of $200 ore was uncovered. The ledge at a depth of ten feet, is estimated at $14.

Freeborn and Kennedy, on their Toltec claim, four miles south of Nelson, at a depth of thirty-five feet, have now a four-foot ledge that averages better than $100 in value. They have about fifty sacks on the dump and later will make a shipment.

Charles Gracey, superintendent of the Techaticup mine, owned by Joseph Wharton of Philadelphia, is having fifteen tons of the ore hauled to the railroad at this point for shipment to the smelter. This mine contains ore in considerable quantity that runs $300 to $600 in value. Mr. Wharton has refused all overtures to either sell or lease, hence it is thought that the present shipment means a practical demonstration that will soon lead to greater activity at the mine.

A company known as the Arizona-Colorado River Copper Company has taken up twenty-three claims on the Arizona side, six miles above Eldorado Cañon. There are five well-exposed veins of from 1½ to 7½ feet in width, and fourteen assays from the surface rock gave an average of 7.65 per cent. in copper.

AMONG MEN OF ACTION.

Hon. Ernest F. Acheson, a member of the Congressional party which recently visited the Territory of Hawaii, has been a guest at the Hayward. He said one of the greatest needs of the islands is an influx of American farmers. "What they need there is development along the lines followed in our Western States brought about by the influx of our aggressive, energetic American farmer. There is always a shortage of labor there, and what they have is of a poor quality of natives and orientals. There is a broad opportunity for the vigorous American. Great tracts are opening for homesteading of land that will produce coffee, tobacco, pineapples, rubber and other tropical crops. The American feels no ill effects from the climate, as the temperature is 10 deg. below that of any other island situated in the same longitude, owing to the prevalence of trade winds bringing cool breezes from Alaska."

Most persons think of Alaska as a barren waste, with gold the only product. According to Harry White, former Mayor of Seattle, now a resident of this city, Alaska wheat will some day be produced in large quantities.

"There is a large section of land in the Copper River country adapted to wheat raising," said White. "The soil is similar to that of Kansas or Nebraska. The finest quality of wheat can be grown. Alaska is not a region of icy cold in the summer time. The summer, although short, is very warm, and wheat grows to perfection in the district referred to."

E. O. White, representing a Chicago lumber firm, believes the price of lumber at the mills will drop to $10 a thousand feet unless transportation facilities are bettered. White has been a guest at the Van Nuys. "In the Middle West the demand for lumber is great," he said, "but the lack of cars hinders the supply being forwarded in sufficient quantities. Some firms are planning to ship their lumber by way of Capt Horn. Nevertheless I believe the future for lumber of this coast is good."

Nipped in the Bud.

They had been married just three short weeks and were doing a housekeeping stunt in a cozy flat.

"Dearest," said the newly elected party of the freight-paying part, "if I should—er—accidentally be detained downtown late some night you wouldn't pack up and go home to your mother, would you?"

"Not me, George," replied the fair but knowing bride. "I'd invite mamma to come and spend a few weeks with us."

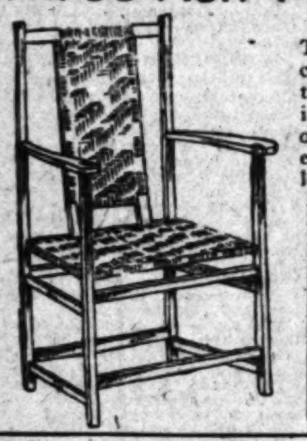
Special Sale of Porch Furniture This Week

This week we are going to give you some splendid opportunities to save money on porch furniture. We are firmly of the opinion that we have the best stock in the West and we KNOW that our regular prices are lower than others quote for the same qualities. It must necessarily follow, then, that our prices when reduced as they are this week are below any competition.

The entire basement, Spring street side, is given over to the display of porch furniture. You will do yourself an injustice if you buy porch furniture this week without coming here.

The Vudor Hammock Swings $2.25

A clever combination of a swing and a hammock—the latest thing for the porch. It is simple in construction and weighs but a few pounds, yet it is amply strong to support any weight that can be put in it. It is pleasing in outline, and as the frame is stained in an artistic weather-proof green that harmonizes with any surroundings, and the bed is handsomely colored, it adds to the appearance of your porch instead of detracting from it. It is a summer comfort you can't afford to be without.



Three Ash Porch Pieces $18.50

REGULAR PRICE $34.50

The suite consists of a settee, side chair and arm chair. We picture the latter to give you an idea of the design. The frame is made of ash and finished in the natural color. The seats and backs are made of interlaced hickory bark—there's nothing stronger or more serviceable. The price is wonderfully low.

Sale of Raffia Rockers and Chairs

HALF PRICE THE RULE

We have decided to close out all goods of this character and to insure prompt action have cut prices just in half. We show one of the rockers in the picture. The color is a rich grass green.

$7.00 Rockers go for $3.50
$6.00 Chairs gor for................$3.00
$9.00 Rockers go for $4.50

White Frost Refrigerators

Modern science says, "No more wooden refrigerators if you want perfect sanitation, economy and general satisfaction. Modern science has developed the White Frost Sanitary Refrigerator, which is constructed without one splinter of wood. Galvanized iron heavily enameled is the only material used. The new 1907 model is in. Glad to show it to you.

Old Hickory Swing Seats

We have two styles of Old Hickory swing seats which are to be closed out at once. The factory has discontinued making them and we, of course, want to dispose of our stock at once. Bear in mind that this is the real Old Hickory—not an unworthy imitation.

$5.00 Swing Seats for............$3.75
$6.00 Swing Seats for $4.75

$6 Arm Porch Chair $3.95

Just like the picture on the left. The wood is ash and the finish weathered just like oak. We have the rocker to match reduced from $7.00 to $5.00. Great bargains.

Other Porch Pieces in Ash

We have a number of porch pieces in ash which we are offering at greatly reduced prices. No reduction less than 20 per cent.

$9 Old Hickory Morris Chair $6

One of the most popular of the Old Hickory products. We picture it on the left. We have taken a third off the regular price because we are overstocked.

$5.50 Rockers $4.00

Another case of overstock. This splendid rocker (shown on the right) is certainly a snap at $4.00. The chair to match is reduced to $3.75. Get this pair for your porch.

Children's Rockers

We have Old Hickory rockers at $1.50 and $1.75 and chairs at $1.20.

"I herewith enclose you one of my latest photographs, which will show you what Newbro's Herpicide has done for my hair. Since using your remedy my hair is much longer than it was, and it has that luster to it that ones hair always has when the scalp is in a healthy condition."

Flat 210. Chicago, Ill.

MISS MADELINE CLUTTER

The immense popularity of Newbro's Herpicide, particularly among the better class, is due to the fact that it never disappoints. It does all and more than is claimed for it.

Its delightful fragrance, perfect clearness and freedom from grease or oil, appeal to the discriminating, and its cleansing, refreshing and health-giving effect upon the scalp is immediately apparent.

Herpicide makes the hair light and fluffy and gives it a silken gloss.

Extraordinarily long hair is a gift of Nature that relatively few possess, but not many would complain if they could save Nature's head covering in its original beauty and luxuriance.

The dandruff germ is the greatest enemy of abundant hair. This is on account of the highly contagious nature of dandruff, which makes it almost impossible to escape the disease without the occasional use of a germ destroying solution.

Newbro's Herpicide is the ORIGINAL remedy that "kills the dandruff germ." It promptly eradicates dandruff, stops falling hair and, (except in chronic baldness) restores the hair to its former health and activity. Herpicide stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. At drug stores. Send 10c in stamps to THE HERPICIDE CO., Dept. N, DETROIT, MICH., for a sample. Guaranteed under the Food and Drug Act, June 30, 1906. Serial No. 915.

NOTE—If any druggist suggests a substitute, walk out of his store and send the advertised price direct to us. We will immediately express the Herpicide direct to your door, all charges paid. The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. For sale at all drug stores. Applications at prominent barber shops.

IMPERIAL VALLEY FULLY PROTECTED.

Greatest Flood Ever Known in the Colorado Makes No Impression on Col. Randolph's Levee — River Scouring Out Its Old Channel.

BY ALLEN KELLY.

THE dams and levee built by Epes Randolph and his aids to close the break of the Colorado River and protect the Imperial country from another invasion by the runaway river have stood the test of the greatest June flood on record without developing the slightest weakness, and the Imperial Valley is absolutely safe.

When I met Thomas Hind, the engineer in charge, at the lower heading, where the big break occurred and was closed in the very teeth of the furious river, and asked how matters stood, he replied: "All right, except that we haven't had enough water. I'd like to see the river five feet higher before I leave the levee."

And that was not bombast. He meant it seriously. I went over every foot of the fifteen miles of levee, from the upper heading, where the water comes into the Imperial Canal, to where the last load of gravel was dumped at the end of the embankment on the Paradones, and then I understood why Thomas Hind yearned for higher water in the Colorado.

Although the river has been discharging past Yuma the greatest volume of water recorded in thirty years, the flood has barely wetted the lower part of the levee, and in some places never has touched the bank at all. A five-foot rise would not endanger the work, but it would pack and solidify the bank and demonstrate the invulnerability of the Imperial Valley's defenses.

SAFETY ASSURED.

The builders of the dams and levee never had any fear that the river would carry them away or make a break in them. They only feared that a great flood might go around the end of the levee and attack the canal in the rear, but the Colorado itself has averted that possible danger by deepening its old channel and swinging it over toward the Arizona side.

The Randolph levee is not parallel with the river, and does not act as a retaining bank to choke the flood into a narrow bed. From the end of the rock dam, which closed the break, the levee turns sharply away from the river, leaving a wide expanse of timbered bottom land between itself and the river bank.

The lower end of the levee is five miles from the river. When the Colorado overflows, it does not rush in swift flood against the levee, but spreads out into a wide and shallow lake in the woods. Although the fall of the land is about three feet to a mile, the heavy growth of cottonwood and underbrush retards the flood and reduces its velocity. If the levee were close to the bank and parallel to the government levees on the Arizona side, the river would be confined, and the levees would have to resist direct pressure and erosion. As the problem was not protection of bottom lands from overflow, but was, rather, prevention of the cutting of a new channel into the Alamo, the engineers were not obliged to fight the river at close quarters. They could retreat, draw the enemy into the forest, where he could not mass his forces, and beat him in detail.

THE COLORADO TAMED.

That the overflow did not pass around the end of the levee and break back toward the channel which was cut last year is a fact accounted for by the renewed vigor with which the Colorado has set itself at work to dig a deep way to the Gulf. It is as if the yellow monster admitted itself baffled in its attempt to devour the Imperial Valley and rush on to Salton Sea, and were working off its wrathful energy in a headlong rush to the Gulf.

The old channel, which shoaled rapidly and nearly filled with silt while the river was running to Salton, has been scoured tremendously by this year's flood. Evidence of the deepening of the old river bed is found in the figures relating to height of water at Yuma and the lower heading, and to volume of discharge.

Since 1904, the volume of discharge has been greater than before by from 50 to 75 per cent. The highest water in 1904 was 26.5 feet at Yuma, and the greatest discharge was 51,660 second feet on June 25 of that year, when the gauge reading was 28 feet. The gauge does not mark the depth of water in the river; it marks the height of the surface above an established datum level. The bed or bottom of the river changes greatly in level, as it silts or scours, and there may be deeper water when the surface level is twenty-six feet than when it is thirty feet. The volume of water passing Yuma is indicated in the figures showing discharge in second feet, which means so many cubic feet of water passing a point in one second.

On March 20, 1905, the Yuma gauge reading was 30.2 feet, and the discharge was 110,842 second feet, or 5,542,100 miner's inches. On June 19, 1905, the height was 29.15 feet, but the discharge was only 94,319 second feet, showing that the channel had silted up considerably in the meantime. On November 30, 1905, came the sudden "flash rise" of the Gila, bringing the Yuma gauge reading up from 19 feet to 31.3 feet in four days, and the discharge up to 102,700 second feet. It will be seen that while the water rose just a foot higher than the flood of March 20, the volume of water was less by more than 8000 second feet, the difference being due to filling up of the channel with silt during the low-water period intervening. The November flood was of short duration and did

In June, 19[illegible] there was some scouring. On June 3, the height was 28.8 feet, and the discharge was 84,200 second feet. On June 27, the discharge reached the maximum for the season of 99,200 second feet, but the height was only 28.1 feet. During the three years 1904-5-6 there were but two days in succession of more than 100,000 second feet discharge.

This year the June flood has been the greatest in volume ever recorded, the discharge having been above 100,000 second feet for ten successive days up to June 26.

Here is proof of the scouring and deepening of the Colorado at Yuma and below: On June 4 the gauge at Yuma showed 29.2 feet, and the discharge was 77,700 second feet. On June 8 the discharge increased to 80,100 second feet, but the river surface had fallen to 27.4 feet. On June 22 the gauge showed 29.1 feet, a tenth less than on June 4, but the discharge was 108,000 second feet, proving that the river had deepened and that the velocity had increased. During the week from June 17 to June 24, more water passed Yuma than ever before in the same length of time since records were kept. But for the deepening of the channel, the water would have risen to 32 or 33 feet and perhaps higher.

That the river has deepened its old channel opposite the former break at the Lower Heading is shown also by comparison of figures. On March 8, 1907, the height at Yuma was 27.4 feet and the discharge 68,700 second feet. The height of water above the Hind-Clarke dam was 115.86 feet above sea level, the datum level adopted. On June 4 Yuma gauge 29.2 and discharge 77,700 second feet, the height at the dam was 115.7. On June 8, with a discharge of 80,100 second feet, the height at the dam was only 114. On June 22, with a discharge of 108,000 second feet, the height was only 114.9. The water at the Lower Heading was five and a half inches higher on March 8 than on June 22, although the river was carrying nearly 40,000 second feet, or 2,000,000 miner's inches, less water. Obviously, the old river bed has been scoured, so that its carrying capacity is almost doubled.

A MODEL LEVEE.

The absolute safety of the Randolph levee is shown in the facts that its lowest point has been seven feet above the highest water in a season of unprecedented flood of the Colorado, and that not a stroke of work was required to strengthen, repair or protect the bank. The levee is a model of thorough, substantial construction. It was built by railroad men, not by theoretical engineers, and in some important features it violates the laws laid down by the formalists, laws which take no account of differences in conditions.

The levee is an embankment, nine feet high above the ground level and ten feet wide on the top, built of the natural soil and covered with a layer of coarse gravel a foot or more in thickness. There is a "muck trench," six feet wide on the bottom, under the levee. The books say that a muck trench, which is an excavation backfilled with thoroughly mixed and puddled sand and clay, should be under the outer or river-ward slope of the levee. The railroad men made their muck trench under the inner or landward slope, thereby incurring the derisive criticism of young engineers of the Reclamation Service.

APPLIED COMMON SENSE.

The railroad men, having little reverence for formulas, and defining engineering as "applied common sense," reasoned that an impervious bank on the river side would keep water from ever getting to the inner side of the foundation, and therefore that portion of the work would remain dry and loose, whereas a muck trench under the inner slope would perform its function of preventing water from passing through the foundation and at the same time permit the first high water to soak into and puddle the outer section of the levee, making the entire foundation as solid as if the entire width had been muck-ditched originally.

The railroad men took into account the character of material in which they worked and the conditions which confronted them. Their levee, not being not exposed to the erosive action of a swift flood current. The water rises slowly against its face and soaks in instead of rushing along and wearing away the slope. The heavy timber and brush, covering the bottom lands right up to the foot of the bank, prevents wave action and checks the current. A levee along a river bank is exposed to different conditions.

TRADITION IGNORED.

In another feature of construction the railroad men went contrary to engineering tradition and precedent, and for good reasons. They made their "borrow pits" inside instead of outside the levee. Those pits are the excavations from which earth is "borrowed" for building the embankment. Where the function of a levee is protection of lowland from overflow, the land being valuable and usable right up to the levee, there are reasons for taking material preferably from the river side. In this case, the function of the levee is prevention of channel-cutting by a runaway flood, and the lands to be protected are many miles away.

It was of vital importance to the builders that the work should go on during a flood season. If they took their material from outside, the first overflow would stop the work and the levee could not be raised to meet the rising waters, whereas if the borrow pits were inside, men and teams could continue work regardless of the overflow. By leaving a bench or "berm" forty feet wide along the inner foot of the levee and between the bank and the borrow pits, the excavations would not weaken the bank or affect it in any way, and if they should be filled by seepage no harm would be done. Outside borrow pits, on the other hand, take away the protection afforded by timber and brush, break up the compact surface soil and invite the formation of erosive currents and eddies against the face of the levee.

EXPERIENCE AND THEORY.

Col. Randolph and his aids have had much experience in building railroad embankments and in fighting rivers, and what they know about such work they have learned by doing it and not from school text books. They applied their experience and common sense to the job, and the young engineers of the Reclamation Service jeered and raged at their inside borrow pits. All the levees constructed by those young men have outside borrow pits, and it costs a heap of money to protect the pits and prevent the currents induced by them from destroying the levees. And the money and the frantic hustling when high water comes do not always avail. The government levees on the Arizona side of the Colorado, for example, are broken in many places and cannot be repaired until the flood subsides.

Had the work on the Southern Pacific's levee been done according to government plans from the start, it would not have been completed at all, and today the railroad men would be fighting another break of the Colorado and the Imperial Valley would be in greater peril than it was a year ago.

The Reclamation Service engineers did succeed partially in their persistent efforts to interfere with and "boss" Col. Randolph's job. They first declared that it was impossible to close the break of the Colorado with a rock-fill dam. They went on record with positive predictions of the utter failure of Col. Randolph's work. It was not being done according to the text-books and the formula, and therefore it could not be done successfully. But it was done to their chagrin and disappointment. The impossible was accomplished. The most remarkable engineering feat on record was achieved by the practical railroad men, who presumed to ignore the advice of Uncle Sam's talented young engineers.

GOVERNMENT INTERFERENCE.

It might be supposed that the lesson would be heeded and that the Reclamation Service would abstain from further meddling with the Imperial Valley protective work and attend to its own perplexing problem of the Laguna dam. But the brilliant young men could not keep their hands off. Those borrow pits still worried them, and they got in their work through Washington and New York.

Presumably it was represented to Mr. Harriman that the government would take the levee off his hands and pay him for the work, but only on condition that the work remaining to be done should be in accordance with government plans. On the very heels of Col. Randolph's triumphant success, which discredited all the predictions and recommendations of the government engineers, came positive orders from Harriman that in the remainder of the levee work the borrow pits should be outside.

The railroad engineers protested, expostulated and explained, but to no purpose. The order was curt and positive, and it had to be obeyed.

CONDEMNED FOOLISHNESS.

For the last three or four miles of levee work, the borrow pits are out-tendency to induce currents, eddies and erosion anywhere along the levee are seen. The protective growth was destroyed and the firmer portion of the soil was removed, exposing to the water a bed of silt that dissolves like salt. Col. Randolph inspected the finished levee a few days ago, and when he saw the outside borrow pits and evidences of their weakening effect he said: "That is the damndest foolishness I ever saw."

But that was not all the foolishness. The government engineers recommended and Harriman ordered the construction, inside the levee, of spur banks, 500 feet apart, at right angles to the levee, 300 feet long, 50 feet wide on top, and four feet high. The theory was that in the event of a break in the levee, the outer ends of two of the spurs could be connected to form a bay and check the flood. That is office theory. Practical common sense says that it would be no more difficult to stop the break at the levee than to build a new bank between the ends of the spurs. Also, the construction of the spurs would involve the moving of more material than was placed in the levee itself, and would cost more. It would be easier and less expensive to double the width of the levee or to build another parallel levee inside the first. The spurs are equivalent to building 1100 feet of bank to protect 500 feet of the levee.

The recommendation was so absurd that Randolph ignored the order and kept his whole force at work finishing the levee. A week or ten days ago, the Reclamation Service engineers met at Yuma and gravely rescinded their recommendation.

OBJECT LESSONS.

The intact, unthreatened rock dam and gravel-covered levee built by the railroad men is a standing rebuke to officious meddlers and kindergarten engineers. Across the river, government levees riddled and torn, flooded ranches, wrecked irrigation systems and rich farming districts put out of business for years by failure of the Reclamation Service to make good its promises, emphasize, by contrast with the empire saved by Col. Randolph and his builders, the difference between official and private methods of doing things.

From the headgate to the end of the Randolph levee a railroad has been laid upon the top—not a makeshift construction track but a thoroughly built, well-ballasted railway fit for the heaviest traffic. A telephone line runs the whole length, with stations a mile apart. When the water is high, men patrol the levee in gasoline track automobiles, and if danger threatens they can telephone to the heading, where a trainload of rock stands, ready to be rushed to the breach. Heavy gravel trains passing frequently over the line have helped greatly in making the levee solid. The work is absolutely secure, but the builders have taken no chances during the flood season.

In a few days, the camp will be broken, the engineers will leave, and only a few men will remain to patrol and watch the levee. All hands could have gone to the beaches three months ago, but the force was kept on the ground as an extreme precaution and an assurance to the settlers of Imperial Valley.

WHERE OFFICIALISM FAILED.

An attempt to examine the effects of the flood upon the levees on the Arizona side below Yuma was not wholly successful. The levees broke in March, and they are still broken. Water has flowed in behind them, flooding the roads and farms, and it is impossible to reach the levees from the country roads remaining passable. Four or five miles below Yuma, the road nearest the river ends abruptly at a break. Below that point everything is a disorderly tangle of sloughs, pools and flooded lands.

The Reclamation Service undertook to take care of that country, took charge of the private irrigation systems and promised to protect them and supply the ranchers with water. Because of the failure to complete the Laguna dam, the government has been unable to keep its promise, the irrigation canals are wrecked and many farmers are ruined. The Reclamation Service could not do what it planned with the best of intentions.

CROSSING THE GILA.

I drove from Yuma to Laguna dam on the Arizona side in the night, crossing the dry bed of the Gila and keeping well back from the Colorado to avoid the overflow and back-water sloughs. There was some water on the road, and at one place the horses hesitated to go through a black, forbidding lagoon. Being urged, they plunged in, and a most awful stench arose from the disturbed pool. The water had been there, doubtless, for two or three years, and it was utterly rotten. It smelled like a dead whale. Also it was deep enough to flow through the buggy box. The noisome pool recalled to mind the awful bog which engulfed Carver Doone.

Avoiding the water on the return trip resulted in wandering for several miles through dense brush and final extrication by striking the Gila levee and using its crest as a road.

Where the bottoms were overflowed two years ago, a dense growth has sprung up, demonstrating the remarkable fertility of Colorado silt. In less than two years, cottonwood trees have grown, on land that was as bare as a floor, to a height of twenty feet and a thickness of five and six inches at the butt. Similar growth has started already back of the Clarke-Hind dam, where the flood raged on its way to Salton Sea last January.

LAGUNA DAM THREATENED.

No destruction has been caused by the flood to the works at Laguna dam, but construction has been suspended and will not be resumed until September. The escape was a narrow one, however. The danger point is on the California side, where the river rushes into a bend above the dam and then swings outward toward the open way between the dam ends.

When the flood was at its highest, the bank protecting the work was washed away while the working force was at dinner. The men came out to find the railway track fallen into the river, and but a few inches of dirt remaining to keep the water out of the excavation below the cement walls. An alarm was given by all the steam whistles on the works, and everybody rushed to the breach, laborers, engineers, clerks, storekeepers, train crews and vagrant gave way, and the dam was saved. The track has been replaced, and continuous dumping of rock repairs the damage done by the rushing waters.

All the excavations are flooded with still water, engines, derricks and pumps are submerged, and there is nothing doing at Laguna but protective work. Since the contractors threw up the job and sold their plant to the government, considerable progress has been made in the construction of cement core walls, but there is a wide gap to be closed, and the hardest work will come when that is attempted. Whether or not the dam will survive a Colorado River flood is a question that nobody can answer with certainty. That the cement core walls will be an element of strength is generally doubted, because the menace to the dam is not pressure from above, but cutting at the foot of the apron.

AN ENGINEERING MYSTERY.

No engineer has yet given a convincing reason why the cement walls are introduced in the dam, or shown that they serve any purpose other than the consumption of funds. Why a rock fill, similar to that which closed the Colorado break, would not solve the problem of the Laguna dam, nobody has yet explained. Such a structure could be completed in one season and for a million or so less than the cost of the dam now being built, and it would stay. That is the opinion of many engineers and of railroad men who have proved their right to have an opinion on the subject.

Up to date the Laguna dam and the Yuma project are problems to be solved, and they are not working out as they were planned. In time and in money, the work, which is not half done, has exceeded the total estimates, and since the job was bound up with government red tape, nobody has been able to figure out when the dam will be done, or what it will cost.

DIFFERENCE IN METHODS.

An illustration of government methods, as contrasted with private control, occurs to mind. When an employé of the contractors was injured on the work, he received free treatment in hospital, wages while disabled and an indemnity if permanently injured. One of the government employés was badly hurt some time ago, and is still in hospital. His pay stopped the instant he was hurt, and he got only five hours' wages for that day. He does not get a cent while in hospital, and every man on the works is assessed a dollar a month to maintain the hospital and pay the doctor.

The people of Arizona, especially those whose farming operations have been suspended by the failure of the government to keep up irrigation works taken over by the Reclamation Service, the settlers of Imperial Valley, and all others interested hope that the Laguna dam will be a success. But it is not difficult to perceive why the Imperial Valley refuses to hand over its canal and its lands to the Reclamation Service, and prefers to rely upon the railroad's practical levee builders for protection.

Col. Randolph's work has been tested by the greatest flood that ever came down the Colorado, a flood sufficient to cover 8000 acres a foot deep with water every hour, and Imperial Valley is absolutely safe. Between 30,000 and 40,000 miner's inches of water is passing through one bay of the cement headgate into the Imperial Canal, the other ten bays being closed tight.

The lagoon between the Hind-Clarke dam and the river is filling up with silt, the bars even now showing above the water, where last winter were whirling torrents and rushing floods. In another season or two, there will be hardly so much as a scar left to show where the Colorado tore through its bank.

SALTON SEA.

Water is still flowing into Salton Sea by way of New River. It goes down the Paradones from the Colorado to Volcano Lake, and thence a part flows northward through New River and a part southward by way of the Hardy Colorado to the Gulf. The inflow to Salton Sea is now about 1500 second feet, and apparently it is sufficient to compensate for evaporation, as there is no perceptible subsidence of Salton Sea. The inflow does no injury to Imperial Valley, however. Salton Sea probably is a permanent institution; at least, it can be kept at about its present level, or preferably a little lower for safety of the railway, with little trouble and no harm, and it surely tempers the desert wind to the settler and to the traveler. The water is full of fish, and the shores of the sea are haunted by hosts of aquatic birds. Some day there will be winter resorts on the western shore of the sea, under the shelter of the mountains, in the finest winter climate in the world, and steamboats will ply from the railroad to hotel landings.

LONDON'S MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP DEFEAT.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

At the recent county election in London, municipal ownership of public utilities (except water) suffered its most serious defeat. The municipal ownership party, in control, after being in power for eighteen years, was overwhelmingly voted out. They were known as "progressives" (a misnomer,) and, in their eagerness for the city to own almost everything, had built up a public debt of $515,000,000—all for public utilities. The value of the assets as a whole was large, but the yearly cost of maintenance was a tremendous strain on the taxpayers. In the old Council these "progressives" numbered eighty-three, out of 118. In the new Council they only number thirty-six to seventy-nine. The election lost them forty-seven of their eighty-three seats. This result followed one of the hottest election campaigns ever fought in London. Night after night meetings were held protesting against the absurd, though from the municipal ownership theory standpoint, logical, lengths to which they had gone—municipalising almost everything, except births and deaths.

It was remarkable that the sane and safe voters and workers included all classes, from the wealthy property owners to the laboring men.

The great, but necessary, defeat was largely because of the increasing apprehension of the grave danger of the socialistic ideas which the defeated party had so prominently put forward, and the adoption of which by the London County Council they had been able to secure by domination. In short, the people's experience of municipal ownership was all (and more) the Socialism they intended to be afflicted with. This same apprehension and feeling exists in the United States, and is the reason why so many American voters are turning down municipal ownership of everything (except water) whenever they get the chance. Almost the first thing the new London County Council had to do was to borrow about $35,000,000 to pay bills left over by the old Council—bills incurred without provision for their payment, under the preponderating municipal ownership strength in the old Council. Just the same thing would happen in Los Angeles, or in any city of the United States, did it become dominated, as was London, by municipalists.

Socialist professions of their creed as a "cure all," for the social, economical or political ills of a community are distrusted by men who by personal economy, thrift, sanity and ability have built homes for themselves or accumulated property otherwise. They are also distrusted by the man who works with his hands or head from morn till eve for a living for himself and his family. He does not want his chance to work to be at the mercy of others who have enough political pull to get his job at higher municipal ship is a phase, is destructive rather than constructive.

In this connection, the eminent Lord Avebury of England said: "It has, I think, been clearly shown that governments and municipalities cannot give the same care, thought and attention to details as do private firms and companies; the services and products must be more expensive and the outputs will be less. Wages, however, in the long run, are governed and determined by international competition. Government and municipal cotton mills, iron works (or other enterprises) could not raise their wages or they would lose their markets. Moreover, as governments and municipalities would not increase their works or adopt improvements so rapidly as private firms and companies, the demand for labor would be less." (London's continuous army of unemployed is a case in point.)

"The difference could not then be thrown on private enterprise as it is now, because private enterprise by the hypothesis will have been done away with, or rather will have been driven over the sea." (English skilled labor at this time is going in droves to Germany.) "With the same, therefore, or with probably lower wages, workingmen would have to pay a higher price for the necessaries of life.

"But this is not all. At present they are free. They can choose their employer and their employment. Under government or municipal ownership they are not free. They cannot choose their employer, because there is only one employer. Nor could they choose their employment. If the state or the municipality is to be responsible for them, they must do as they are bid." Socialists frankly admit this. For instance, the Fabian (Socialist) Society says:

"Every one should have a legal right to an opportunity of earning his living in the society to which he has been born, but no one should or could have the right to ask that he shall be employed at the particular job which suits his peculiar taste and temperament. Each of us must be prepared to do the work which society wants done, or take the consequences of refusal."

In fact, says Lord Avebury, we should be slaves to the bureaucracy, which would under the circumstances be far more autocratic than even that of Russia.

In the foregoing remarks Lord Avebury was particularly referring to the nationalization of industry, which is the next step, along the same line, to municipal ownership. At a recent meeting, P. J. Tevenan said: "Municipalization is a means to an end. The end is to establish in the near future a principle of the nationalization of all the industries of the country. Thus we see that municipal ownership is a danger and a menace to the future, not only of the country, but also of the wage-earner.

Lord Avebury points out, on the other hand, that autocracy is only another name for bureaucracy, saying:

"In some places municipal employés amount to 5 or even 8 per cent. of the voters, and it must be remembered that, feeling themselves to be personally interested (or made so) a larger proportion of them vote than of ordinary electors.

"Town Councilors will have to regulate the wages of their electors. Just think of the tendency to set the wages against the votes. The inevitable result must be that instead of the emin fact, the workmen will [illegible] ployed by the Council, but the [illegible] cil will be employed by the [illegible] men."

That is why the municipal [illegible] candidates were so heavily de[illegible] the recent election to the Lond[illegible] ty Council.

CIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

ORT ARTHUR (Tex.) June 27.— W. Gates, who recently retired Wall street for the purpose of ing his time to his private interand investments, has one hobby. It to make Port Arthur a flourishing y and a great deep-water port. Port hur is a diversion with him. There hardly a business or industrial enprise in the town in which he is not rested financially, but in making numerous investments he did not t to reap profits from them—at st not at present.

here is, however, one possible extion—his oil interests. He is said be the largest stockholder in the company, which is one of the t oil producers and refiners in Texas oil fields. The great refinery that company is situated here, and ings a good revenue to Mr. Gates his associates.

ut to Mr. Gates is due the credit for ing the refinery at Port Arthur for building up other branches of enormous business which have ed so much to the growth and imance of the town.

NTING DREW HIM THERE.

r. Gates's attention was attracted Port Arthur several years ago when first became financially interested the Kansas City Southern Railroad. t was about the time that Arthur well of Kansas City, Mo., lost conof the road. Mr. Stilwell located town of Port Arthur about ten s ago, and named it for himself. It Mr. Gates's love for hunting and the r kinds of sport which this secaffords that led him first to beinterested in Port Arthur. He made a few trips to the section g the Neches and Sabine rivers, e bear abound, and had unfailmet with splendid success in these ing expeditions. After he became kholder in the Kansas City Southhe realized that Port Arthur, as deep-water terminus of that road, s advantageously situated, and was ble of being developed into a great

So t are his investments and so tirehis personal efforts in promoting growth of the place that Port Arhas become known to many as Gates's town. So devoted is he is hobby of making the town an business place and port that he several weeks here each year. these visits he is a plain citithe town, and is every ready to his aid.

built a beautiful home here sevyears ago, and it is kept always in iness for his coming. His visits usually made in the winter seawhen hunting is good, but it is not usual for him to make brief stays e in the summer. He was here retly, and arranged for extensive imvements which will add to the busiadvancement of the town. He is yal entertainer at his home during visits. He usually brings a few genial friends from the East or th with him, and they are given a ndid time. He is a lavish spender money while here, and his coming always welcomed. While he keeps in e touch with the needs of the town, does not dictate. His views are ally adopted, however, as there is ly a business man in the town is not in thorough accord with Gates's plans for the upbuilding the town.

hen Mr. Gates first became interd in Port Arthur, it was a place of few hundred inhabitants. Its pross for the future were not at all uraging. He studied the situation decided that good streets and sides and complete systems of sewers waterworks were the things which first needed. The sewer system $75,000. It is claimed that no other n with a population of 10,000, has r municipal improvements, sanin and healthfulness.

AINST PUBLIC OWNERSHIP.

r. Gates is not a believer in municiownership of public utilities. For reason the city does not own the waterworks, or electric-light . Each of these public utility s is owned and operated by pricorporations. Mr. Gates is the cipal stockholder in each of the panies. It is stated that he does operate them with the view of g any profits out of the business. sewer, waterworks and electricrates are said to be lower than y other town of corresponding size the State.

e shipment of oil through here is ously large. The value of ships from Port Arthur for 1901 was 000. There has been a steady ase year by year since then until value of the shipments for last year ded $16,000,000, and for the current the value will exceed $18,000,000, it pected.

. Gates and associates are buildan oil-pipe line from Tulsa, I. T., ort Arthur. The line will be more five hundred miles long, and will more than $6,000,000, including the ruction of pumping stations and necessary equipment. It is exd that the volume of oil through Arthur will be vastly increased the new pipe line is placed in op. The Guffey Petroleum Comis also building an oil-pipe line Tulsa to Port Arthur. Both of lines are of 8-inch pipe. The s show that more than 200,000 of oil, refined and crude, were ed out of Port Arthur in 1906.

is claimed by Mr. Gates that morand socially Port Arthur is the of any city in this country. That why he likes to visit here so much, says. He is a liberal contributor to various church organizations. There eight churches here, and each has membership. There is an army orers employed in the oil refinery other business enterprises operated by Mr. Gates and associates. He a personal interest in the welfare these men. Made of solid quarter-sawed oak throughout, front, back and shelves; mission latticed glass doors of quadruple strength. This cabinet is especially suited for a bungalow. Regular price $37.50; special this week for $29.00.

China cabinet of solid golden oak; curved glass sides; regularly sold at $22.50. This week..$17.50

Golden oak china closet, mirror back and top; leaded glass doors. Regularly $65. This week...........$50.00

Bedroom Set $150

We are showing a magnificent three-piece bedroom set, in light mahogany, Napoleon style. The bed is a massive four-poster, with carvd foot and head boards. Dresser to match has three large drawers and two smaller drawers, with curved fronts and glass knobs. Large, square shaped French plate beveled mirror. The dressing table, which goes with the set, matches both the bed and dresser. Regular price of set, $190. This week, $150.

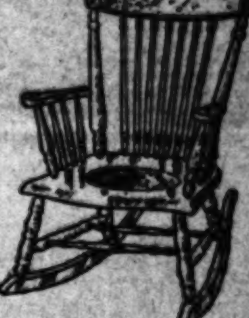
85c For this $1.35 Dining Chair of solid oak, golden finish; has saddle seat, strongly braced arms, carved back, turned spindles. These chairs, shown in cut, sell regularly at $1.35; on sale this week at 85c. Limit of one set (six chairs) to a customer.

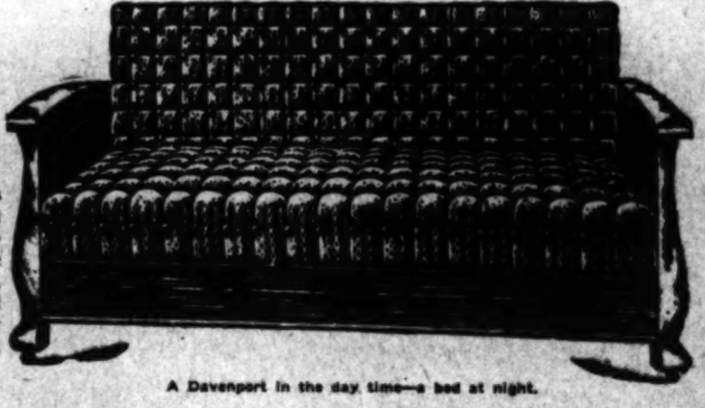
This $4.75 Rocker for $2.95

Choice of mahogany or weathered oak finish, very large size, carved top, turned spindles, curved arms. This rocker sells regularly at $4.75, this week $2.95.



This $37.50 Davenport $22.95

Hardly any piece of furniture in a home is quite so useful and at the same time ornamental, as a Davenport, especially a handsome one, like the cut shown here. Choice of golden or weathered oak frame, upholstered in any color desired. Regular price, $37.50; this week $22.95.



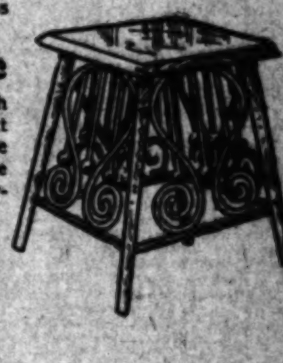
A Davenport in the day time—a bed at night.

Mission Rockers

We have just received a delayed shipment of Mission rockers, upholstered in genuine leather. Marked at close prices this week from $8.75 to $30.00—about a quarter less than value.

Special for Next Saturday 45c

This $1.25 rattan taboret, with hardwood top, on sale next Saturday, all day, and in the evening, at 45c. Limit of one to a customer. No phone orders filled. None delivered.



Established Fifteen Years

We have been in business fifteen years, and the fact that many of our first customers are still trading with us is pretty good proof that our merchandise and our methods meet with popular favor.

Six Stores on the Coast

We have six stores on the Pacific Coast, located in Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, San Francisco, Oakland and Los Angeles. Such facilities for handling quantities enables us to buy at bed rock prices.

BURNT MONEY IDENTIFIER.

MRS. A. E. BROWN, THE WORLD'S MOST SKILLED EXPERT.

Through Her Hands Passes All the Burnt Money for Redemption Sent to the Treasury, and Her Decision Is Final Regarding Identification of the Burned Notes.

The last package of charred embers identified as burnt money from the San Francisco disaster has been examined and passed upon by the experts of the redemption division of the United States treasury in Washington, and the most stupendous task in all the history of that department completed. Mrs. A. E. Brown, burnt money expert, has passed on each bill submitted, and it has been given her approval and redeemed or has been declared undecipherable and remained as so much ash, valueless.

Crisp new bills to an amount estimated as high as a half million dollars have been issued from the treasury to replace the packages of ashes sent to Washington by the bereft in the stricken city, and hearts have been made glad by the replacing in its original value of that which had been regarded as irretrievably lost.

Not the least of the spontaneous charities that have been extended to San Francisco is that given to her when she called at the treasury in an effort to get the value of her burnt currency. Treasurer Charles H. Treat issued an order when the money first began arriving that in case of a doubt the examiners were not to adhere as rigidly as is their wont to the letter of accuracy, but that the sufferer was to be given the benefit of the doubt in the payment.

In this way, if the remains of a burned roll of bills were sent in and it was evident that in the unearthing of the precious ashes an end of the roll had been touched ever so lightly and the ashes swept away so that barely the necessary three-fifths needed for the redemption were present, a point was stretched in the reissue.

Much of the burned money coming from San Francisco was, however, as easily and positively identified as are bills counted out of a bank window. The mass of the money presented had been housed away in safety deposit vaults and in private supposedly fireproof safes. It had merely been baked. The remains were a brown or black charred mass, stiff and still outlining the stacks or rolls of bills as they had been originally deposited. These could be peeled off, a bill at a time, and its value easily established beyond the shadow of a doubt. The remaining ash could be distinctly made out in its every detail until it was pressed or crushed, and then it became but so much powder.

The largest consignments of bills came from the business and banking houses, but these were the least troublesome. Later came the smaller amounts from private individuals, frayed, torn and unrecognizable. Gold, silver and currency were melted into a mass that could not be made out, and to get at the value contained was almost impossible.

The loss of the individual in San Francisco was greatly lessened by the fact that gold and silver are the pocket change on the Pacific Coast and these are less destructible than is currency. Had the fire occurred in an eastern city where little other than paper money is carried, the personal loss would have been greater. The redemption of coin is a matter handled at the various mints, however, and not in the reckoning of the redemption division of the Treasurer.

For every bill redeemed and for the unraveling of every knot in the deciphering of the problem of identifying the money, not only of this fire but of every other package of damaged money received from any part of the nation, one person is directly responsible and that person is a comely, gray-haired, motherly woman of middle age—Mrs. A. E. Brown, the most skilled burned money expert in the world.—[Washington Star.

THREE OF A KIND.

[The following beautiful tribute is paid by B. H. Hampton in the Arizona Republican to the valor of Capt. Bucky O'Neill, Maj. Alexander O. Brodie and Capt. James H. McClintock, the first killed in the Spanish-American war, and the two latter wounded.]

In them mad-makin' days when they Dagoed the Maine,
And the waters had doused out her glim,
Three fellers was workin' their jaws mighty plain—
They were Elick and Bucky and Jim.
Some people they reckoned them three wouldn't fight,
If McKinley should show any vim;
Them three had good jobs that was easy and light,
Makin' money to burn, and a million in sight—
Had Elick and Bucky and Jim.

So McKinley he ordered the Don off the claim
He'd held under bond for so long,
Never payin' the men who was workin' the same
The price of a meal or a song.
But the Don showed fight and he whetted his knife,
And he put his six-shooter in trim,
With a rush our big country got into the strife,
And the very first rooster to offer his life
Was Bucky, with Elick and Jim.

This Elick I speak of, he assayed and mined
The yaller in Yavapai's hills;
An expert on dams—maybe more than one kind—
And he held a good hand runnin' mills.
When Uncle Sam wanted some experts for work
At business more bloody and grim—
Stoppin' bullets in jungles where sharpshooters lurk—
A-waiting in line for the recruitin' clerk
He found Elick and Bucky and Jim.

Now, Jim was a writer, a starch-collared chap,
A graduate somewhere, I think,
And the habit he'd formed (in that college, perhap)
Of a-spreadin' good paper with ink.
He'd write on all subjects—a railroad or ruin,
He was loaded with facts to the brim—
Edication, "prize-fightin', hoss-racin', reviewin'—
But when bullets fell thickest where something was doin',"
'Long o' Elick and Bucky was Jim.

Bucky mixed some in politics—nobody's tool,
But the sand of an oyster had he,
With a tenderfoot's luck and more stay than a mule,
And the get-up-and-go of a flea.
And when the time came for your Uncle so bland
To hear the Don's bluff and to "see 'im,"
"If scrappers are wanted, sure, deal me a hand.
"We'll soon bounce the blackguards all out of that land—
Are you ready, now, Elick and Jim?"

From Prescott clear down to the land of the palm,
They fought every blamed foe in sight—
Bullies, bronchos, , bad licker, the measly emblam,
And the fever that stabs in the night.
Them Roosevelt's born scrappers ne'er took the back trail,
No bluffin' ever could stop them—
Bullets neither, nor bayonets, shrapnel nor shell.
Right in front, chasin' death on them hillsides of hell,
Was our Elick and Bucky and Jim.

But since the war's over, Jim walks with a cane,
And his friends they shake Elick's left hand,
And Bucky he sleeps where San Juan's leaden rain
Showed the genuine American brand.
The two that's alive work the games they did first,
In quartz or in ink—each his whim.
No saint was the other, but God will be just,
And livin' or dead, I'd risk all my dust
'Long o' Bucky—or Elick or Jim.

OIL! OIL! OIL!

Newport Bay Oil Company

GEO. HUNTINGTON, President. W. H. BEMAN, Vice-President. ARTHUR E. POOLE, Secretary & Treasurer.

The Newport Bay Oil Company are now operating on a very large tract of land situated about three miles north of the town of Newport Beach, Orange county, California.

The promoters of this enterprise have furnished all the capital necessary to demonstrate that oil existed in paying quantities. Well No. 1 is now down 1220 feet, and is in over 400 feet of oil producing formations, and in its present unfinished condition the oil has been within [illegible] feet of the surface. Well No. 2 is now drilling, and derrick and rig are ordered for Well No. 3.

The directors are now satisfied that the Company will open the richest oil field that has ever been developed in Southern California. It has now progressed beyond the doubtful stage. In order to push the development work faster and take advantage of the present bright prospect of the oil business, the directors have decided to offer 100,000 shares only of its capital stock to the public at 10c per share. It will probably be the only stock of this company ever placed on the market. The Company is now in good financial condition, discounts all bills and has a good treasury balance on hand and expects to be producing and marketing oil this year.

The territory of the Newport Bay Oil Company is the most favorably situated in regard to transportation of any oil field in the state. Its present wells are within three miles of tide water, surrounded on all sides by railroads, giving it every facility for transportation, both by land and sea, which in itself is of great advantage over most other fields, making the company practically independent in marketing its product.

This 1000.... shares of stock is offered at a very low price, much less than its present intrinsic value, as the directors propose to give all those joining with them a chance to make very sure and large profits. The Company pays no commission and every dollar goes into the development and production of oil.

Conservative people who are looking for an investment, where the chances for great profit are good, with a minimum chance for loss, are requested to call at the Company's office, where full information will be furnished, and as the field is so near Los Angeles, a few hours' ride will demonstrate to any would-be investor the truth of all statements made.

MINES AND MINING—Past Week's News of the Surrounding Ore Districts.

IN THE EARTH.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY AND CHEMISTRY.

To Correspondents:

This department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below:

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen, a clearly written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed.

(2.) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examination of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interest will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Address invariably, The Times.

Leucite and Vesuvianite.

MEDFORD (Or.) June 10, 1907.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I have been prospecting in this section for many years, and have just returned from a trip through Chico, Hungry Creek, Gazelle and Hornbrook, in Northern California.

A miner near Gazelle gave me some white pebbles, which he called "rough diamonds." The blue rock I obtained from a prospector, who has just returned form the headwaters of Smith's River. I take this rock to be what the Chinese call "jade."

Samples of both of the stones please find in this package. There are many "Beavers" who would be glad to have a description of the minerals, and their uses, described in The Times.

Yours truly, W. B. R.

ANSWER: The "rough diamond" (?) submitted by you is known among older authorities as white garnet. In mineralogy of the present it is known as leucite. Leucite occurs disseminated in grains and, usually, in trapezohedron form. Colors gray, gray white, and very seldom red white. Of vitreous luster, white streak, brittle, and of imperfect conchoidal fracture. Hardness 5.7 to 6.2. Specific gravity 2.3 to 2.5. "Composition anhydrous analcime—and a double silicate of alumina and potash with, often, traces of iron and lime."

The quoted analysis does not, however, represent the leucite sample submitted by you, as will appear by the results obtained, quantitatively, from your powdered crystal. That is to say: Silica 64.50; alumina, 28.50; lime 6; soda 0.25; potash 3.50; iron 0.75 (not counting loss by ignition) equals 103.50, percentages respectively.

A remarkable feature of this analysis is the very low percentage of potash.

Before the blowpipe leucite is almost infusible. Like many aluminous minerals, a blue color is obtained by heat and cobalt nitrate solution. Hydrochloric acid, very nearly, decomposes the mineral, but with separation of pulverulent silica.

Leucite is rarely found imbedded. Like Madison county Montana garnet, it occurs "as pebbles." Leucite is found associated with lava, nephelite, sanadine and trachyte. "Leucite is easily distinguished from analcime by its infusibility, and by never showing faces of the cube . . . . It is found altered by decomposition to kaolin or 'China clay.'" A typical point for prospecting after the minerals submitted by you is among the opal silica, white and multi-colored jasper, chalcedony, fire clay and kaolinite, near Sugar Loaf Mountain, Jackson county, Or.

While your second specimen is locally known as "jade," it is well to call attention to it as the well-known Vesuvianite of mineralogy. The other names by which it is occasionally referred to, as "Oregonite," or "Californite," simply lead to confusion.

Vesuvianite (such as your bluish yellow specimen) is between a vitreous and a resinous luster. It is 7 in hardness and scratches glass. Of massive structure. Compact and splintery in fracture, and 3.5 in specific gravity. By qualitative analysis the specimen shows silicate of alumina only. Before the blowpipe, however, and with fluxes there is an iron reaction. "After ignition, completely decomposed by hydrochloric acid. . . . Associations: In older limestones and deposits of magnetite, pyrite, blende, pyroxene, chlorite and biotite."

As a polished gem stone vesuvianite ranks with moonstone, moss agate, quartz rutile (acicular,) "off color" turquois in matrix, and Cedar City, Utah, topaz.

Prospect for Dolomite.

RIVERSIDE, June 18, 1907.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Inclosed find sample of mineral from the mountains in this neighborhood, which I think is possibly a magnesium ore deposit.

Could you tell me something about it, and greatly oblige. E. J. M.

ANSWER: Without a thorough quantitative analysis the resultant percentages of your sample cannot be given. It would be well to prospect the deposit for solid dolomite (magnesium limestone.) Qualitatively, the specimen answers to a ferruginous, siliceous, and argillaceous limestone with magnesia. Probably pseudormorphic after dolomite. In the language of the boys in the hills: "Prospect below the surface where the stuff is not leached," is good advice.

Granular Gneiss and Silica.

LOS ANGELES, June 13, 1907.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please name the two samples (tied in middle of sack) from near North Pasadena, and oblige V. S. A.

You Are Right.

CORONA, June 14, 1907.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending with this note five specimens from this locality, 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5. I take them to contain more or less lime, silica and alumina. Am I right? No. 2 resembles a specimen that you pronounced to contain tungsten. Oblige me with a reply in The Times.

Very truly yours, E. C.

ANSWER: Mineralogically speaking, your samples are geological rocks. You are right in the qualitative determination in all of the samples. Specimen (2) does not contain a trace of tungstic acid.

Selenite and Fluorite.

TOPOCK (Ariz.) June 17, 1907.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Do me the favor to name and describe the two specimens I send you by this mail. Both are from this section.

Yours truly, F. M.

ANSWER: The large flat specimen is gypsum—variety selenite. It occurs in flat crystals and, like glass, is transparent; it is easily cleavable into thin laminae, and is not elastic, but flexible. Colors white, and in many shades of brown, yellow, gray, violet and red. Of shining luster, white streak and yields to the nail. Hardness 1.3 to 2. Specific gravity 2.25 to 2.35. Selenite is hydrated lime sulphate and consists of the following approximate percentages: Sulphuric acid, 46.51; lime, 32.56; water, 20.93. It does not effervesce in nitric acid—when pure. Before the blowpipe melts to a button. Gypsum when "burnt" forms plaster of Paris, and it is a substance from which sulphur is obtained in England.

Your other sample is fluorite (fluor spar) of a fairly good grade. It occurs in nodular, compact and earthy forms, and also in octahedrons and in cubes. It is found in white, blue, gray, purple, violet, yellow and red colors. Of vitreous luster; white streak, brittle and of foliated fracture. Hardness 3.75 to 4. Sp. gr., 3.10 to 3.35, and is calcium fluoride in formula, with fluorine 48 per cent. and calcium 52 per cent.

Pieces of fluorite rubbed together in a darkened room become luminous. Hydrofluoric acid is obtained from fluorite. Its powder mixed with sulphuric acid and the container covered with glass plate results in etching the glass cover. Fluorite is a well-known metallurgical flux.

PIOCHE BOOM IMMINENT.

RAILROAD WILL REACH THE OLD CAMP IN TWO MONTHS.

Boston, Salt Lake and English Operators Acquiring Groups of Claims. Gold Vein Opened in the Lincoln-Nevada—Rumors of Bonanza in the Susan Duster.

PIOCHE (Nev.) June 26.—The railroad grade is finished to Bullionville and track-laying was resumed this morning. One and one-half miles of track were laid out from Caliente some weeks ago. The plan was to bring the track machine from the Las Vegas and Tonopah Railroad, but it as found that it couldn't be spared. That road must be rushed into Goldfield and Tonopah. So, after waiting so long for it to come, it was decided to lay the rails by hand. The distance from the end of the track to Bullionville is about fifteen miles, and with the force now engaged in track-laying, the engineer estimates that it will be thirty days before the cars can come to Bullionville. If no unforeseen accident occurs to delay, he thinks the rails will reach Pioche not far from the first of September.

President Charles S. Miller of the Boston-Pioche Mining Company came in from the Hub three or four days ago, and presently the announcement was made that his company had taken an option on the Scranton and Lookout claims adjoining the Boss, about one and one-half miles east of Pioche, and made an initial payment of $2000. This company is acquiring a group of properties along the trend of the great porphyry dyke, and cannot fail to become an important producer.

Before Mr. Miller flitted out again he had completed the purchase of the McFadden property, right in the heart of the famous Bristol district, near the mines of the Nevada-Utah and the Bristol Consolidated. Those who have been familiar with the Bristol district during the past thirty-five years use very extravagant language in predicting what is going to happen when the railroad is prepared to handle the enormous tonnage already opened up in the old mines of this section. That new ones equally productive will be disclosed by the vigorous prospecting which will be done seems to be a reasonable belief.

W. R. Brace, general manager of the Bristol Consolidated, is due this week from Denver. I understand that he will remain some time and proposes to tear things loose in that hill. W. A. Clark, Jr., is expected in to see for himself the progress being made out there in his recent acquisition, the Ida May.

George Weddell and Edward Thomarson have unbounded faith in the Pioche section, and are systematically getting ready to present various enterprises to the mining investors of Great Britain. They have recently incorporated the Nevada Horn Silver Mining Company to develop the Horn Silver group of claims, about three miles from Bristol. Some of the ore is so rich in silver that it only needs His Majesty's stamp on it to pass as coin of the realm and go to meet the monetary demands of India. Weddell and Thomarson have already secured other groups adjacent to Pioche. They blow no trumpets, but are quietly gathering in some of the opportunities now open, which will vanish with the coming of the railroad.

To add variety and spice to the situation and complete the list of desirable minerals, the Lincoln-Nevada is exhibiting buttons of gleaming gold just melted out of their ore. In the most matter of fact way and with an appearance of sincerity they tell of a vein of this gold-bearing rock 2400 feet long, in their property, four to twenty feet wide. We know that the Pioche section will produce immense quantities of silver, lead, copper and zinc, but a distinctive gold mine right at our doors is a refreshing novelty.

Ernest Godbe, manager of the Ohio-Kentucky and Phoenix Reduction Company, has just come in with some of the directors of these great Newhouse properties, and some of the head men on the Newhouse staff. The air is full of rumors of a bonanza just opened on the Susan Duster, the mine which the Ohio-Kentucky is at present developing with greatest vigor.

CHAMBER OF MINES.

List of New Members Recently Admitted Shows Healthy Growth.

At a meeting of the board of directors of Los Angeles Chamber of Mines, held Thursday afternoon, the following were elected to membership:

The C. E. Mitchell Company, A. E. Cooch, Herbert E. Willis, Guanajuato-Los Angeles Mining and Development Company, E. A. Montgomery, Four Metals Mining Company of Phoenix, Ariz.; Western Gas Engine Company, G. A. Guenther, John B. Bushell & Co., Withee-Read-Pike Compajny, Dr. A. B. Allen Foster Bros. Syndicate, Fred Dorr, Garvin Cyanide Extraction and Development Company, A. F. Rosenheim, Gold Bull Frog Mining and Milling Company, Percy H. Clark, H. H. Kerckhoff, Pioneer Roll Paper Company, W. G. Hutchison Company, R. A. Rowan & Co., Herron Realty Company, Oil Well Supply Company, Bishop & Co., Charles E. Wilbur, Archibald Douglass, Fielding J. Stilson Company, Dr. John H. Cook, Stewart-Dawes Shoe Company, George H. Lightfoot, Dr. D. T. Bentley, Warren H. Cooke, Golden State Shoe Company, Taylor Bullfrog Mines Company, Whittier-Coburn Company, George A. Lonsbery & Co., George H. Stoll Company, Tarr & McComb, E. T. Earl, William B. Thorns, Henry R. Adams, A. J. Harshberger, B. F. Kieruiff, Jr., & Co., Central Oil Company of Los Angeles, Turley Brokerage Company, 216 La Salle street, Chicago, Ill.; C. E. Gould, president Oakland Bullfrog Mining Company, Oakland. L. V. Root, Needles; Forest J. Swears, 525 Main street, Goldfield; G .V. Burton, Goldfield, and W. J. Arkell, Manhattan, Nev.

James Bryce, the British Ambassador at Washington, is one of the very few men who have set foot upon the top of Mt. Ararat. This was nearly thirty years ago. The mountain is over 17,000 feet in height.

ARIZONA.

FAMOUS MINE TO BE REOPENED.

SILVER PRODUCER PROMISES TO BECOME COPPER MINE.

Clifton Reduction Works to Be Moved and Enlarged—Sale of Silver Bell to a Boston Company—Nevadans Invest in Harqua Hala Gold and Copper Property.

PHOENIX, (Ariz.) June 28.—The once-famous Vekol mine, thirty miles south of Casa Grande, is to be operated again, for the first time by strictly modern methods. It is a famous old property, shown by the Pima Indians to John D. Walker more than thirty years ago. Walker, with his brother Lucien, and Peter R. Brady, of Florence, worked the mine for years with nothing save Indian labor, as a matter of gratitude to the tribesmen who had made them wealthy. At first there was a mere pocket of almost pure silver, which soon was worked out. Then Lucian Walker kept up work, tracing a little talc seam till it ran into another silver pocket in the limestone even larger and richer than the first. Thereafter, when silver ore began to run short, there usually was a talc seam that could be followed to riches. These seams were followed wherever they went. As a consequence, the old mine is a veritable honeycomb of galleries excavated by unskillful Indian laborers, who packed the ore out in rawhide panniers. Brady sold his share for $65,000. When the Walkers died, the young wife of one of them was at law for several years with the half-Indian daughter of John D., and thus the mine was taken from the list of producers. It is now believed that the Vekol will follow the history of every other developed silver mine in Arizona and turn into a copper producer. Near by are a number of promising copper mines, whose ore bodies indicate a connection with that of the Vekol. Capital for the new venture has been furnished by S. J. and E. S. Garrett, Alabama capitalists. The whole district is showing well and much rich ore is being shipped.

It is told that the London-Arizona Mining Company will soon begin erection work on a 1000-ton smelter, with concentrator, on the Gila River, on the line of the Phoenix and Eastern Railroad, two miles this side of Winkelman station and five miles from the mines. Ore is to be brought to the works by aerial tramway.

There seems little doubt that the Arizona Copper Company at Clifton is preparing to move its reduction works from the mouth of Chase Creek Cañon, immediately above the business part of Clifton, and that a new smelter is to be built on the high ground across the San Francisco River from Clifton and below the town, near the works of the Shannon Copper Company. This much has been indicated by a purchase of 300 acres of Shannon ground. It is understood that a new concentrator of large capacity is to be built on the ground, immediately above the site of the projected smelter. The Chase Creek road will also be abandoned, it being probable that the Arizona company will build the ore supply road above flood line that has been surveyed by the Shannon company to its mines at Metcalf on upper Chase Creek. In the same vicinity the larger corporation has great mines, and the same road, from the Longfellow incline, brings down the ores and concentrates from the Humboldt and Longfellow mines at Morenci. Several times the Arizona Copper Company has lost immense sums by the flooding of its smelter and the destruction of its ore road by the annual floods that surge down Chase Creek and the San Francisco River.

It is expected that the July production of the Old Dominion at Globe will be about 3,000,000 pounds and in July, assisted by a new furnace now about ready to blow in, it will be at least 2,500,000 pounds. The mine force is to be laid off for four days around Independence Day and the smelters closed down for a day.

The old Silver Bell mine, in Pinal county, eight miles from Price station on the Phoenix and Eastern, has been sold by S. J. Tribolet and W. C. Foster, of Phoenix, to a Boston company for $90,000. The same property was purchased by the sellers only two months ago for $45,000. The ores run high in silver and lead.

The Pasadena Mining Company is a new Pinal county incorporation. The organizers are James. M. Wishart, S. C. Shook, A. H. Freshwater of Pasadena, Cal., J. H. Montgomery of Casa Grande, Ariz., and E. H. Monical of Indianapolis, Ind.

Nevada capitalists have purchased a number of claims on the eastern slopes of the Harqua Hala Mountains, west of Wickenburg, including the noted Pump mine, a gold producer proved by years of working. It has been found that the district is rich in copper, which can be worked profitably by modern methods.

L. E. Warner and wife of Los Angeles have spent a week or more in visiting the mines of northern Yuma county, looking for claims for bonding for a term of at least three years, a condition that has found little enthusiasm among mine owners.

DESERT PROSPECTS.

New Districts Along the Colorado Have Great Surface Indications of Ore.

MELLEN (Ariz.) June 24.—Many prospectors in this locality have "flown the coop," as it were; and will not return until cooler weather sets in.

Several railroad boys owning copper claims six miles west of Needles uncovered some high-grade copper ores a few days ago on their property. The section has been heretofore condemned.

Contract work is being pushed at Whipple Mountain, some twenty miles northwest of Parker, and statements are made of sensational ore values in the district, chiefly those of copper; with further development during the coming winter the facts will appear.

A large number of claims have been bonded recently in Copper Basin, which is on the California side of the Colorado River, and not far from where the new Santa Fé cut-off will be. The ore is contact between lime and granite and is, in places, a quarter of a mile wide. Practically no work has been done, but the new owners and leasers will put a large force of miners at work as soon as possible. So it is said.

The Quartz King and adjacent properties will be idle during the heated term. It is persistently rumored that the Quartz King people have purchased a large group of claims adjoining their mine for a price over $100,000.

The country between the Needles and Parker is comparatively new—in a prospecting sense—but wherever systematic work has been done good properties have been the unfailing result. Hundreds of square miles of copper-bearing schists, porphyritic rock and limestone on each side of the Colorado River are only awaiting capital for development. With these copper ores are good gold values besides.

The Chemehuevis Mountains, twenty-five miles southeast of Needles, present a good field for the prospector and mining investor. The entire range is mineralized, and ores of copper, gold, silver, antimony, graphite, lead, iron, magnesium and fluorite are there in more or less quantity on the surface exposed. Very little work has been done, and the range is now practically abandoned, the principal causes being scarcity of water and a long distance from supplies. Another drawback which is common to this portion of the desert, is that all mineral deposits are more or less "leached"—usually more—float and outcrop being the only evidence of mineral until depth is attained. The prospector finds a piece of rich float, traces it to where it came from and in a few hours, or days at most, has "worked it out," the result being, at times, a few sacks of good ore that he has no way of turning into "grub;" the same result is attained by others until entire mountain ranges are "hoodooed."

E. B. Gage went down 1500 feet of hoodooed ledge matter and opened up the Congress mine. His theory was, "where there is rich ore on top, there is rich ore on the bottom, and the bottom is where nature ceased leaching operations." It is a fact beyond dispute in Arizona that ores "rich on top are rich below." If this theory holds good, in a few months the new mining sections surrounding Salome will astonish the world in ore developed. No better surface showings of wide ledges and high-grade ores can be found in the United States.

The so-called "leaching zone" is encountered along the Colorado River, is from twenty feet to hundreds of feet in thickness, extends from Eldorado Cañon to Yuma, and has probably been the chief retarding cause, prospectors being unable to sink through "the leach" and capital unwilling to invest unless there was a good showing "below the sunlight."

YUMA COUNTY.

Strikes of Big Gold Leaders Reported in Kofa District—Copper Camps Active.

YUMA (Ariz.) June 27.—Within ten days four important gold strikes has been made in the Kofa district near the King of Arizona property, and a deal is now on whereby one of these finds is to be bonded by Los Angeles parties for $100,000. This property is about two miles northwest of the North Star, and has been located by Soderman and Amavisca.

One mile west of the North Star, Mathis Brothers and Norton are working the North Star contact where it again comes to the surface. They are already seventy-two feet down and are drifting across the ledge from that level. Everything they have taken out is ore. East of the North Star the contact crosses a wash. Here the vein goes under the valley for about one mile east and reappears, showing for about one mile, when it disappears and seems lost altogether. This property has been located by R. E. Black and G. M. Henshaw, who have five claims. So far they have done only assessment work, but the ore right from the surface assays from $5.25 to $22.60. About the center of their property, where it crosses the high divide between the two cañons, the vein shows 300 feet thick, showing much free gold in the sun.

Northwest of the strike by Matthis Brothers and Norton, another discovery has been made by Wineshank and De Laoso, which they claim is 200 feet across and which horns clear through, some specimens carrying free gold.

Two miles east of the King of Arizona a discovery recently was made by Black & Henshaw, in the form of a dike of quartz, 150 feet thick and from seventy-five to ninety feet high and sticking straight out of the ground. Its length is between 600 and 700 feet, and it assays $5.25 on the surface. At a depth of ten feet from the first shaft the ore runs $34.88. It was only seven miles from this point east that J. Fred Nortbusch discovered a ledge one mile in length, showing free gold and carrying a value of $5.25 on the surface. People who have seen both rocks say it is the same contact.

The King of Arizona, which is the camp of Col. Epes Randolph and Eugene S. Ives, is grinding its regular 200 tons every twenty-four hours and there is no end to the ore in sight.

The North Star people are still sacking the rich ore found in the new shaft recently. The whole bed is in ore which runs $150 a pound.

COPPER DISTRICTS.

In the copper districts in northern Yuma county the present week have witnessed much activity. A fifteen-horse-power gasoline hoist has been ordered for the Molina property, formerly known as the Torres mine. A road will be built from the McDonald-Enos camp to the mine, and as soon as the hoist is installed ore will be shipped continuously. This is a high-grade copper and gold proposition.

In the Boone camp they have struck twenty inches of solid sulphide copper in the drift being run from the bottom of the shaft, and twenty odd men are at work on the property.

More gold ore has been encountered on the old claims worked by Bill Fear and Newton Morris in the Pinnetehache Pass years ago. At that time they shipped several tons of high-grade free gold ore. George Ward, John Varble and James Merriman are now in possession.

The Bonanza and Golden Eagle Mining Company have purchased the Copper Bottom Company's mules and freighting outfit, and will use them in freighting from Salome to Harqua Hala. Some good ore has been brought in for assay from the Shamrock group owned by the McEntee brothers. Victor Satterdahl of the Brayton Commercial Company at Vicksburg is preparing to ship ore from his claims in the Granite Wash Mountains a few miles west of Salome. It is high in lead and carries good copper and silver values.

The old Castle Dome mine, forty miles north of Yuma, on the Arizona side of the river, is being worked at present by the Castle Dome Exploration Company. They are in ore which carries from 55 to 60 per cent. lead and thirty ounces of silver. Work is being done on Porter Moffett's camp, eighteen miles northeast of Gila City. This is the oldest mine in the country, yet has not been worked to any extent, as it was discovered when copper was worth so little. Now they have a vein which runs 30 per cent. copper.

Chicago people are making a preliminary examination of the old McCracken mine, west of Signal. These properties have produced millions of dollars and still have large ore bodies unexplored. In this district work is progressing on the Nonparell and other claims. It is reported that Epes Randolph has taken a bond on a group of twenty-five claims in the Cababi district from Ed Rochester and Ignacio Calvillo. Outcroppings of copper on these claims indicate large ore bodies. The ore is full of small particles of native copper and looks good. Some of it not only runs 18 per cent. copper, but carries 200 ounces silver.

In the Kelvin district the Calumet mine is now into the sulphides and large bodies of 4½ per cent. copper are being exposed. A consolidation has been perfected whereby the interest and holdings of both the Big Lead and Calumet mining companies have joined and the new company is to be known as the Kelvin-Calumet. The narrow-gauge railroad from Kelvin Ray is nearing completion, and this will give the Ray transportation for its ores, an advantage it has long desired. The property was opened years ago in anticipation of this facility. A 200-ton concentrator now being installed at Kelvin will be in operation in sixty days. It is owned by the Ray company.

GOLDFIELD'S PRODUCTION.

RICH ORE SHIPPED REGULARLY BY LEASERS ON BIG MINES.

Comstock Operator Thinks Combination Will Beat Record of the Old Bonanza Group—Permanency at Depth Yet to Be Demonstrated. Red Top Proves Rich.

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) June 26.—W. E. Sharon, after an examination of various Goldfield mines, said that this district is destined to surpass the $600,000,000 production of the Comstock, the only contingency being the permanency of the ore bodies to depth and there being present every physical promise of such future condition. At relative levels, he stated no mines in the world have showings equal to those of the Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company, owning the groups of the Combination, Goldfield Mining, Jumbo, Laguna, Mohawk and Red Top.

A statement which the Combination has filed with the assessor, being the basis upon which the property will be taxed this year, shows a total production for January, February and March of 2575 tons of a value of $162,135.50, an average of $45.35 per ton and $54,045.17 per month. Extraction and reduction cost $82,810.65, an average of $23.16 per ton, leaving net proceeds for the three months of $79,324.85, or average profits of $22.19 per ton, $26,441.62 per month.

Combination's present production is almost double the average of the first three months of the year, the Combination mill alone treating its capacity of seventy-five tons daily, 2250 tons per month, and some ore being shipped. The Kinkead mill has also contracted to treat about 3000 tons of fine ore on various Consolidated Mines dumps. The old workings on the January claim of the Goldfield Mining group have been abandoned, that property now being exploited through the Combination's diggings.

The Goldfield Wonderland Mining and Leasing Company has started work on the Golconda claim of the Consolidated's Combination estate, lying between the C.O.D. and the Red Hills, just south of the Florence. The Nevada Pearl Mining and Leasing Company, with a shaft down 220 feet, has rich seams in the face of its eighty-foot drift from a crosscut on the 200-foot level.

Jumbo's new shaft has reached a depth of 320 feet and will continue to at least the 500-foot. Laterals are running on the 225 level to connect with the Red Top workings.

The Laguna Goldfield Leasing Company, having a lay on the Miss Jessie claim of the Consolidated's Laguna group, near the Red Top, has its working shaft down 220 feet and will drop to the 300 level to crosscut for the rich ledge uncovered on the Vinegorone Fraction, between Laguna and Red Top. On the 120 this lease cut a stringer of fabulously rich ore.

Mohawk is shipping three carloads daily of average $150 dirt and is storing a product that runs much higher. The face of the drift on the 450 is all ore that runs from $70 to $100 the ton. The Ish-Sheets and the Kalfus leases, now operating as one, being consolidated under the title of the Mohawk Combination Lease Company, are making ready for an average daily production of $50,000, which should endure for six weeks. The Ish-Sheets has already turned out $750,000 in high-grade ore and there is an equally flattering showing on the Kalfus, the two being connected at a vertical depth of 165 feet.

Red Top has proved 550 feet of rich ore on the 160-foot level, the vein in places being 140 feet wide.

FLORENCE LEASES.

The Little Florence and Mohawk Florence leases on the Red King claim of the Florence group have been shipping at the rate of $150,000 per month, the output averaging without sorting $400 per ton and much of it now running $800. Just now the daily shipments average about sixty tons, but this will henceforth swell to 100. The present production capacity is estimated at $10,000 per day, better than a million and a half per annum, and there has already been declared a ten-cent dividend, amounting to $100,000. These two leases are practically one.

Shipments of high-grade ore are going forth regularly from the 300-foot workings on the January Jones lease on Florence's Cornishman claim and from the diggings of the Florence Leasing and Mining Company. The Baby Florence Company is sending consignments of ore from the old Peer-Pugh workings which it has acquired.

The Pollard lease on the Florence, down 370 feet, has accomplished 450 feet of crosscutting, now driving for the ledge at a depth of 350 feet. The Review lease, near by, one of the best equipped in the entire Goldfield district, is crosscutting south on the 300 for the Little Florence lead and north for the Florence's north system of veins, probably including the Jumbo and Cornishman.

S. H. Bingham and William W. Thompson of Chicago, J. M. Herbert of Colorado and Max Esternaux of Goldfield, have secured a lease on the Red King claim of the Florence domain between the Little Florence and the Baby Florence leases. The Florence Goldfield Red King Claim Leasing Company, down 300 feet, is crosscutting for the ledge and has struck a formation identical in appearance with the capping of the Little Florence lead.

Jack Conklin, managing affairs at the lease of the Goldfield Syndicate on the Florence, reports that he has all the symptoms of near-by ore. That lease has sublet a block adjoining the holdings of the Red King Claim Leasing Company. The Truett lease on Florence's O. K. Fraction, has done 360 feet of crosscutting on the 250 and 300 levels.

The Florence Hopkins lease is driving, in four directions at a depth of 370 feet, the Florence Ledge Mining and Leasing Company is drifting on the 260 and sinking, the Florence Aurelia is sinking from the 200 for the 400 and depth is adding to the shaft of the Florence Extension No. 2 lease on the Hustler Fraction, just over the Florence line and inside the Consolidated borders.

JUMBO EXTENSION.

Three leases on one little fraction of the Jumbo Extension group, the Gold Wedge, are shipping fabulous ore. They are the Mohawk Jumbo the Higginson and the Mohawk Ledge. A fourth, the Curtis, is getting into the same sort of ore and will shortly be added to the roster. It is the repeated strikes of high-grade ore and the avoidance of threatened litigation among the leasers that [illegible] the stock soaring and broke[illegible] crippled such brokers as were pla[illegible]ort. Last month's shipments cam[illegible]o $25,000, but that is not a marker to the thirty days' record which will be piled up by June. The Gold Wedge Fraction of the Jumbo Extension estate, shaped like a wedge with the butt to the southeast and tapering northwest to a point, is bounded on the north by the Rep Top and the Lucky Boy, on the east by the Lucky Boy and the Jumbo, on the south by the Jumbo and the Mohawk No. 2 and on the west by the Mohawk No. 2 and the Mohawk No. 1.

Until very recently the Mohawk Jumbo lease, controlled by Harry MacMillan of Ogden, Utah, has been shipping sixty tons daily of average $175 ore, taken out in the course of development; but now a spur has been run from the railroad to the lease, there is opened eight feet of marketable rock on the 450 level, and the daily output will average at least 100 tons. As in the past, the richest of the quartz will be sacked and reserved for consignment by express.

The Higginson lease on Jumbo Extension, connected with the McNaughton lease on Mohawk No. 2, is sending a daily average of thirty tons of high grade to market from a three-foot body on the 230 level that ships at $285 without sorting. The west drift at that depth is in an oxide ore, showing calaverite and pure gold, samples running upward of $5000 per ton and the vein constantly widening. The east drift, ten feet deeper, is in tellurium and sulphides, sampling $6328 per ton. Stoping is in progress from the 230 up to the laterals on the 175 level.

Adjoining the Higginson is the Mohawk Ledge lease, having the extension of the famous old Hayes-Monnette pay shoot on the Mohawk. At 310 feet depth this lease has pierced fifteen feet of vein matter, with neither wall in sight, five feet of the ledge returning $150 per ton and streaks running into picture values. The workings will soon be equal to a daily capacity of 250 tons and the shaft, which will be dropped to the 450 level without delay, should within fifty feet catch on its dip the monster lead, giving 300 feet on the course of the pay shoot. The Mohawk Ledge diggings, in charge of Tom Short, who struck the high grade for the Hayes-Monnette lease, has until midnight of December 31 to run. It formerly belonged to Kalfus, but was purchased last January by Lincoln Davis for his company, of which M. J. Monnette is president. The same company owns sixty-four patented acres in Goldfield district and is operating other leases, one of them being the Baby Florence, on the Florence.

BULLFROG DISTRICT.

Rhyolite, the Recognied Townsite, to Absorb Bullfrog—Operations in the Principal Mines.

RHYOLITE (Nev.) June 28.—When Uncle Sam gets through with a job now in hand there will be no town of Bullfrog on the map, and Rhyolite will be the metropolis of the Bullfrog country. W. O. Owens, examiner of surveys, is platting the townsite, armed with instructions from the Department of the Interior. He is empowered to select sites for a publi park and school buildings. While the site of Bullfrog will not be recognized, the official in charge is avoiding as much as possible all unnecessary inconveniences, such as the removal of large buildings now standing. It will require six months to complete the surveys here and in Goldfield district, Goldfield and Columbia to be merged into one. In Rhyolite townsite proper there are 530 acres.

C. B. Zabriskie, secretary and treasurer of the Tonopah and Tidewater Railroad, denies that that line has purchased the Brock road. That road, commonly called the Borax Smith, is now within thirteen miles of Greenwater, and by the first of September expects to be built into Rhyolite. The run from this place to Los Angeles over the Borax Smith will be sixty miles shorter than by the Clark route.

It is not unlikely that Rhyolite will become the reduction headquarters for all the great Schwab mines, including even the Tonopah Extension, at Tonopah. The Montgomery Shoshone mill may be increased sufficiently to give it a capacity for the treatment of the Tonopah Extension's output, to be shipped hither cheaper than a second Schwab mill could be erected at Tonopah.

The American Cyanide Filtration and Reduction Company is making Rhyolite its headquarters. It is building a plant here equal to a test of one ton per day by the Taylor cyanide continuous filtration process, and will have a small cyanide custom mill in connection.

Rhyolite, already well fixed for water, will this summer enjoy a larger supply than ever before. Developments now under way at the plant of the Indian Springs Water Company will result in an increase of 50,000 gallons in twenty-four hours. A new 50,000-gallon tank has been set up by the Patrick Water Company on Bonanza Mountain, which has a present flow of 750,000 gallons, and is making material improvements.

What is going on at a few of the Bullfrog mines is here submitted in brief:

Gibraltar.—An upraise from the lower tunnel has connected with a winze from No. 2, affording good air. Ore of good grade is being followed by a winze from the deepest adit. The principal office of the company has been removed to Salt Lake City.

Golden Scepter.—Excellent ore appears in the bottom of the new shaft on the Hobo ledge and in drifts along veins pierced by a cross-cut from the main shaft.

Hematite.—A twenty-five-foot ledge of average $7 ore is being explored by drift and the main shaft is 110 feet deep.

Hinkle.—A blind ledge of milling ore, very like that of the Mayflower, has dipped into the shaft.

King.—The King group and the Gold Hill, virtually the same proposition, adjoin the Belmont, three miles north of Rhyolite. A shaft is sinking on the Gold Hill, whose ledge averages $18 gold.

Manganese.—Surface trenching on the Golden Eagle claim has exposed a profitable grade of milling ore, apparently in place.

Montgomery Shoshone.—In both the Polaris and Shoshone workings are mammoth chutes of ore that await the breaking for shipment without sorting. All the main workings are connected down to the 400 level. The triple-compartment shaft has reached a depth of 530 feet, and on the 500 there is cut a station from which laterals will drive to undermine the runs on the 400 and 300 levels. It is expected that the great reduction plant will be in operation by the first of September at the latest.

National Bank.—Work proceeds at four points. One great ledge outcrops on the domain and several blind leads have been placed. There is ready for shipment a carload of ore that will run at least $500 per ton.

Original.—The two old shafts are being connected by drifts on the [illegible] and the two tunnels by upraise. A third shaft has started on the [illegible] resources. The Cross lease, now operated on company account, made a recent shipment of ore that went better than $300 per ton.

Pioneer.—A drift from the west tunnel, which cut the lead, is following quartz that runs from $10 to $70 per ton.

Tramp Consolidated.—One foot of five feet of shipping ore in the winze from the fourth level averages [illegible] gold. The product is being stored for the market.

OPERATIONS IN MANHATTAN.

High-Grade Ore in Many of the Mines Encourages Extensive Development.

MANHATTAN, Nev., June [illegible].—The tunnel on the property of the Big Four company, adjoining the Mayflower, has reached a length of [illegible] feet and is thought to be nearing the [illegible] from which leasers in the early days of the camp took specimen ore.

Croppings pregnant with gold are an incentive to strenuous development doings on the Breyfogle, the ledge being traceable across the acreage. A powerful hoist has been implanted and depth will be added to the [illegible] shaft with all possible speed.

Buffalo Extension is 110 feet deep in pay dirt, the quartz showing [illegible] sulphides and the ledge being [illegible] wide. This is thought to be the [illegible] vein.

On the property of the Manhattan Consolidated mines company there has been tapped a 28-foot ledge of high-grade milling ore, showing streaks of a shipping sort, assaying up to [illegible] per ton, gold, silver and copper. This exposure was made on the Silver Pick claim. Another new discovery is the unearthing of a four-foot lead which runs well in gold at the surface. The annual report issued by the company shows an expenditure for development last year of $56,000.

Crescent-Eureka is drifting at [illegible] feet on a 12-foot ledge of sulphide ore. From the surface the shaft passed through vein matter that ran from [illegible] to $60 per ton. An average from both walls on the 60-foot level went [illegible] and at 75 feet three average samples returned $32, $53 and $118.

Shipments of high grade ore are being made by the Kendall-Douglass lease on the Dexter. The Dexter company is soon to have in commission a 40-stamp mill, having now in the field a force of engineers gathering together adequate water rights.

From the 50-foot and the [illegible] levels of the Giant mine the C. S. [illegible] lease is extracting ore which is milled at handsome profit at the [illegible] plant.

While sinking from the 100-foot [illegible] the Gold Crater is milling some [illegible] for the purpose of determining the most practicable methods of reduction to be employed in a plant of its own. Tests made have shown a saving of 96 per cent.

On the Gold Wedge fraction of the Gold Wedge group the main shaft will drop to the 200 for lateral work [illegible] down 130 feet in pay ore. A hoist is provided at the Nellie Grey shaft, [illegible] feet deep. Leasers on the Gold Wedge company's Black Jack claim are sinking for the 300 level.

A 5-foot ledge of sulphide ore was cut at a depth of 230 feet in the [illegible] compartment shaft on the [illegible] which is going to the 500 level for the main lead.

At the Annie Laurie claim of the Manhattan Mining company's group a force of miners is blocking out ore on the drifts run at 50, 100 and [illegible] feet.

From upper levels in the [illegible] on the Mayflower's Big Pine there has been shipped a quantity of very rich ore, and at a depth of 100 feet the shaft on that lease has four feet of sulphide stuff that goes to mill.

The Manhattan Monarch is in a body of ore much of which samples up to $60 per ton and carries streaks of free gold.

Shipping ore is being taken from the drifts on the 256 level at the Mustang, where specimen stuff occurs in widths of from six inches to six feet and where there has been encountered a four-foot breast that looks as good as anything in Goldfield's renowned Mohawk. Mustang is soon to have a mill on its ground.

A new company shaft on the Mustang Extension is dropping [illegible] for a run in search of the extension of the Breyfogle and Thanksgiving leads, and the Evans lease on the same estate hopes to find the continuation of the Little Grey and Thanksgiving leads.

A new hoist is coming to the relief of the 100-foot shaft at the Nevada Southern, the floor being ore that averages $17 per ton, gold.

Original Manhattan is consigning average $100 ore to the smelters.

Twelve feet of ore, followed by a drift on the 150 level at the [illegible], shows free gold and sulphides.

A four-foot ledge, recently opened on the Wolftone and striking at right angles with the previously proved system on that ground, pans liberally in gold. A. H. Davis is to build a mill on the Wolftone.

DESERT MELODRAMA.

Another of Scotty's Friends Shot on a Trip to Mysterious Mine.

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) June 25.—Death Valley Scotty whirled into Goldfield by automobile, looked around a bit and whirled away again, taking with him two big autos, announcing that he will return shortly with a heavy consignment of high-grade. On his last flight, Sam Jackson, one of Walter Scott's employés, was shot and almost fatally wounded. The attack occurred about eighty miles from Rhyolite, and Scotty thinks the would-be assassins were after him. The wounded man is now at Scotty's camp.

The Death Valley mystery states that on his last excursion he saw nothing of Clarence Eddy, the poet promoter, and that A. M. Johnson, his Chicago friend, was loaded up with a supply of gold ore and sent back home, none the wiser as to the fabled mine's location. The reason for his keeping his treasure's whereabouts secret, he says, is that Julian M. Gerard, who once grub-staked him, claims an interest in all his possessions; that the fight against Julian has already cost Scotty [illegible] and that he does not propose to share with his whilom partner his private resources.

Scotty is careful to prevent his chauffeurs getting next to the location of his mine, invariably leaving his automobile and its driver a safe distance behind when he reaches a sequestered point within tramping range of his property. The hermit who talks little tells no secrets is sore on Los Angeles and opines that Los Angeles is [illegible] of him.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, who passed her 88th birthday, always keeps on her dressing table a copy of [illegible] which is her daily companion, and she recites to her grandchildren "Stud[illegible] enlieder," learned years ago from her brother. Her latest word to her friends is "The world wholly without railroads, by highways, so called, seasons of the year are wholly impassable, and with a steamer service by the coast which is almost of no practical use, the several Central American States are not only cut off from communication with one another but within their own boundaries transportation facilities could hardly be worse. Communication is maintained at long distance by the telephone, and in these troublesome times reports are set over the lines every few minutes. So it is that a tree falling upon a wire, or a rotten pole coming to the ground, fills the existing government with alarm at the vision of invading forces abroad cutting wires and marching on the capital.

Under existing circumstances, therefore, the great need of these countries is a connecting line of railroad, which will bring the Central American populations into close touch with one another, establish trade relations which hardly exist at all, and through introducing every man to his neighbor, tend to establish peaceful relations and promote the commercial prosperity and material welfare of all of this immensely rich stretch of country lying to the south of Mexico and extending all the way to Uncle Sam's big ditch.

It is universally admitted among the foremost thinkers and statesmen of these countries that an inter-continental railway, such as is embraced in the far-reaching enterprise of J. M. Neland of Los Angeles, in his Pan-American railway project, would be of more potential value than all of the navies of the world in establishing and preserving a permanent peace in a region which scarcely knows through actual experience the meaning of the term.

The republic of Salvador, one of the most advanced of all the Central American States, has for many years looked forward to the coming of this line of railway, and in the session of the last Congress entered into a contract with Mr. Neeland for the construction of the Salvador section of the Pan-American line. With construction almost finished in Mexico, and work soon to begin in Salvador, the time is not far distant when Mr. Neeland's dream of an all-rail line to the Panama Canal will be realized.

Following the lead of Mexico and Salvador, the governments of Honduras, Guatemala, Nicaragua and Costa Rica have asked Mr. Neeland for an outline of his plans, and have asked him to offer a proposition for the building of that portion of the road which corresponds to their own territories. This he is doing, and it is likely that next year will see the work carried on in several countries at one and the same time, the ultimate object being to connect all of the several links and form an unbroken chain of railway, comprising what will undoubtedly prove to be one of the most remarkable railway systems in the world, counting its great strategic value, the force which it will wield as a factor for peace, and a developer of trade and commerce, not to speak of the wonderful scenic attractions of a standard-guage rail line through the heart of the tropics of Central America.

EXTENSIVE MINING BUSINESS.

It is estimated that 60 per cent. of the business in Mexico is mining and from the fact that mines, mills and smelters are very large power consumers, Mexico is fortunate that it not only has such an abundance of large and easily developed water powers, but with it has all this extensive mining business which has been growing so rapidly in the last few years. Capital has been coming in from all sides, old properties being reopened and quantities of new ones starting. The last report from the American Consul General estimates the American capital alone which has been brought into Mexico since 1902 and invested in mining and smelting amounts to about $125,000,000 U. S. currency.

In the vicinity of the older mines which have been working by steam for sometime, wood has become scarce and correspondingly expensive, which has been responsible for the shutting down of many a property for the reason that the ore does not contain sufficient value to leave a profit after mining and milling. In many such camps where expensive fuel prevails and the haul to market for the ore is expensive, we find that the ore must run $50 to $60 to the ton and even more in some places to pay to ship it. This results in some good values going over the dumps after the richer ore has been sorted out. The remedy for this is a mill or smelter on the ground, or a railroad to reduce the cost of transportation. The latter is usually impossible on account of the expense due to inaccessible locations of the mine and furthermore would not be of so much help except in the case where a smelting ore was being mined. Whatever the class of ore being mined, cheap power at the mine is essential and if it be a milling ore, so much more is the cheaper power necessary, especially if it be of low grade.

Naturally, the cheapest source of power is to be found in water power if the cost of development be not too expensive. The development of the water powers, with which nature has so generously provided Mexico, that it may be made to drive electric generators is a very simple matter, the transmitting of this energy in the form of electricity by means of wires to great distances is equally simple. The pole line does not need to pick a convenient grade or follow the surface contour as does the railroad, for which reason the distance from the source of power to consumer is very much shortened.

In this day of alternating current with its high voltage, the distances to which it is possible to transmit electricity are almost unlimited. We already find the entire El Aro camp operating wholly by electric motors with the power-house supplying it located at Necaxa, 171 miles away, this too with practically no interruption in service. The cost of power is thereby reduced to from one-half to one-third of the former cost by use of steam and has at the same time increased the output and so reduced the expense of operating that an enormous pile of tailings consisting of several hundred thousand tons, from which all the values had been extracted as far as economical practice allowed with the former cost of power, is now to be reground to the fineness of flour in tube mills and passed again through the cyanide process to recover the minute particles of gold yet remaining in the sands.

ADAPTABILITY OF ELECTRICITY.

The electric motor is no experiment in the mining and milling field, though in Mexico it has been in use but a few years. With its introduction, however, it has come with a rush and more especially is this noticeable in mining work. Electric motors are especially adapted for the kind of work we find in mine and mill which may be partly responsible for their universal adoption, wherever power is available for this service.

If no water is available, gas producers, with engines and generators, are found to be the next cheapest, thus permitting also the application of individual motors to pump, hoist, compressor, and mill machinery, and there are to be found many of these plants, more especially in the northern part of the republic where water powers are less numerous.

In El Oro, we find a camp which has been operating more or less continuously from the start consisting of a few very large power consumers to whom the Westinghouse Company has supplied in the last two years over 12,000 horse-power of electrical machinery.

REWORKING THE DUMPS.

In Guanajuato, we have a camp quite different. With the exception of one property hardly any work was being done about three years ago. Fuel was very expensive and consequently steam power; electric power has been brought into the camp from a distance of about 100 miles with the result that a large number of old mines have been reopened and numbers of new ones are sinking shafts. The values in the dumps of many of the old properties now pay to mill. In this camp, we find that electric power has revived the whole community and is but what is taking place in other districts. In the reopening of the old workings, new strikes of very rich ore have been made, probably the most marked of these being that of the Pinguico mines. This property alone uses some thirty-five or forty electric motors and in this camp today are to be found some 200 Westinghouse motors of all sizes.

Twelve or fifteen other camps have begun the use of electricity comparatively recently so that when we consider what a large amount of electrical machinery has been placed in mining work in the last year or two and at the same time see the possibilities for future development, where water power is so plentiful and cheap power in such demand, it is natural to believe that Mexico bids fair to be, in a very short time, one of the largest (if not the largest) user of electricity of any country, in proportion to its size.

Due to this also there is no doubt but that the development of the industries and mining of the country will be much more rapid than would otherwise b. the case.

THE SUCCESSFUL MEN.

Have Been Those Who Have Stuck to One Idea, Making It a Hobby.

The men who have been most successful in their callings have been the men of one idea, an all-controlling idea, of which they made a hobby and which they rode to the mill, to market, and to meeting—about which they dreamed, talked, laughed, wept and prayed. Columbus rode a hobby from court to court till he found two Jews, Louis de Santangel and Gabriel Sanchez, enormously rich merchants, who supplied the funds needed to fit out Columbus's caravels. Isabella did not sell her jewels to fit out Columbus. She already had pawned them to defray the wars then devastating her country.

Morse was in Washington riding his hobby, the telegraph. One day, on leaving a Congressman, the representative said to one of his constituents: "What do you think that old fool wants me to do? He wants me to help him get a bill through Congress so as to stretch a wire from Baltimore to Washington, so that one fool over in Baltimore can talk to another fool over here in Washington."

Morse kept on riding his hobby until the telegraph encircles the globe and makes thought omnipresent. Harvey is distinguished for the circulation of the blood, and that alone. Arkwright, the cotton gin; Watts, the steam engine; Fulton, the steamboat; Jenner, vaccination; Edison, electricity; Howe, the sewing machine; Garibaldi, liberty; Bismarck, the unification of Germany; Wendell Phillips, the abolition of slavery; Lincoln, emancipation.

President Hayes said to Maj. William McKinley on his entrance into Congress: "To achieve success and fame you must pursue some special line. You must not make a speech on every motion offered or bill introduced. You must confine yourself to one particular thing—become a specialist. Take up some branch of legislation and make that your specialty. Why not take up the subject of the tariff? Being a subject that will not be settled for years to come, it offers a great field for study and a chance for ultimate fame."

McKinley began studying the tariff, became the foremost authority on the subject, and the McKinley Tariff Bill made William McKinley President of the United States.

Cyrus Field spent thirteen years of anxious watching and ceaseless toil, wandering in the forest of Newfoundland, in pelting rain, or on the deck of ships, on dark, stormy nights, alone, far from home, crossing and recrossing the ocean fifty times before he at last laid the Atlantic cable.

Industry is a good quality, but it never will win without concentration. The man who dabbles in too many things, who scatters himself on several lines, divides his purpose, wastes his energies, smothers his enthusiasm and usually fails. To succeed you must be unanimous with yourself. An old German proverb says: "To change and to change for the better are two different things."

It seldom is that the most brilliant men achieve the highest success, but the stickers. Persistency is more effective than brilliancy. When President Johnson tried to drive Stanton from the Cabinet, Charles Sumner sent the Secretary this message: "Stanton, stick." He stuck, and the nation benefited.

The men at the summit were not pulled into their positions. They pushed their way there. When Daniel Webster was speaking at Bunker Hill the crowd pressed so hard toward the platform, endangering those seated thereon, that Webster, seeing their peril, shouted to the people: "Keep back!" "It is impossible!" cried some one in the crowd. The orator exclaimed: "Nothing is impossible at Bunker Hill!"

And few things are impossible to the persevering, invincibly determined American man. You must carry a thing through if you want to be anybody or anything. The world admires and crowns the determined doer. Like the postage stamp—stick till you get there. The only "good time coming" you are justified in hoping for is that which you make for yourself.

Beautiful Corner-stone Ceremony.

A beautiful ceremony recently took place in Cincinnati at the laying of the cornerstone of a new home to be occupied by a German family. A few friends had been invited to witness the simple ritual, which was performed by a daughter of four years. In a receptacle exactly like those provided ofr great cathedrals and other buildings was placed a box containing the names of the family and a record of the event. When the topstone was placed in position, the mortar was put on, the stones were tapped and proclaimed straight and right by little Gertrude, who ended the ceremony with this beautiful prayer: "May this building always be the home of peace, happiness and contentment, and blessed by the Lord. Amen."

Labor's Open Shop.

INFLUENCES WHICH ARE CAUSING THE FAILURE OF THE SAN FRANCISCO STRIKES.

THE labor situation in San Francisco continues to be interesting, though it is evident that the end is not far distant and that end will be a defeat for the "closed shop." Honor is due to Mr. Calhoun for the manner in which the United Railroads have fought the striking carmen. The June bulletin of the Citizens' Alliance of San Francisco puts it about right when it says:

"It is the impression that the street-car strike is ended and members cannot afford to forget the tremendous amount of work Mr. Calhoun has done in the matter of freeing this city from the crushing pressure of labor-union dictation. Already there is an easier feeling everywhere. The better class of union men themselves confess that just such a fight was necessary in order to bring the radicals to an understanding of the true situation. The prospect of establishing the idea in this community that a fair day's pay entitles the employer to a fair day's work—is good. Union men of the better class favor the abandonment of limited production and are against the union rules that now obtain in the matter of apprenticeship."

There are also other good men who have exerted a proper influence in breaking the union rule, though they have had no prominence in the matter. One such man is Harry Baher, as the following correspondence will show:

"SAN FRANCISCO, May 23, 1907.

To Mr. Baehr, 1749 Fillmore Street, San Francisco.

"Sir: It has been reported at these headquarters that you have been riding on the cars. We have taken the trouble to find out that you have union men working for you. Are you aware that if this is taken up by this union that it might cause you a great deal of trouble and no doubt cause you to lose a great deal of business? Looking at this case it is hardly possible you would take such chances. We would like to hear from you immediately regarding this matter. Very respectfully, "W. C. LEFFINGWELL, Vice-Prest."

To this epistle Mr. Baehr promptly made the following fearless reply:

"SAN FRANCISCO, May 24, 1907.

W. C. Leffingwell, Esq., vice-president Carmen's Union:

Sir—In reply to your insulting and intimidating letter of the 23d inst., I wish to inform you that I have lived in California forty-nine years, forty-four of which were spent in this city; that I am an American, a taxpayer and a father of a family, and that I do not allow any body of men, whose chief aim is law breaking and whose membership, to a great majority, are Socialists or anarchists, to dictate to me what I shall or shall not do. I will ride on the cars when and where I please and your idle threats do not disturb me. "HARRY BAEHR."

The women of the city have also shown their courage by the manner in which they have braved insults and have ridden upon the electric cars. In "Everywoman" for June 12, Laura Lorimer says:

"Women have played a most important, if not generally recognized, part in the breaking of the street car strike. From the very first, as soon as the cars began to run at all after the demands of the Carmen's Union had been refused, women proved their most liberal and frequent patrons. The example of the few courageous ladies who knew where they wanted to go and how they chose to travel was an inspiration, not only to their own sex, but to all manner of men. It is the sacred duty of every woman in San Francisco, as well as to her best interests, to insist that men be permitted to work in lawful occupation in this city free from the dictation or the interference of any organized body of men. If Mr. Calhoun succeeds in establishing the principle of the "Open Shop" in San Francisco—a principle without which individual liberty becomes a farce—the women of San Francisco may well rise and call his name blessed."

Another reason why the strike will soon peter out is that the unions which have been asked to contribute money to aid the strikers are not so flush with their financial charity as they might be. They have been voting funds for the striking carmen and the striking carmen have been riding on the United Railroads' cars, and the Carmen's Union has violated its own resolutions by neglecting to fine such members for violation of orders. The metal workers, the telephone operators, the telephone linemen, the telegraph operators, and the laundry workers have use for all the funds they have in their business because of their own strikes. Already the Laundry Workers' Union reports that its strike has cost the union $21,000, which has used up all the funds in the treasury, and has run the union $600 in debt. When funds are gone the "Open Shop" is an inevitable result.

No Municipal Unionism.

Mayor Busse of Chicago does not propose to have m[illegible] employés under the dictation of any union totemites. The school teachers of that city had listened to the seductive pleas of the totemites, and had been allowed by the school board to form a union and become affiliated with the Federation of Labor. Mayor Busse has removed the members of the school board, and has set his foot down hard on the Teachers' Union. The firemen of the city have also become inoculated with the union virus, and disagreements peculiar to unionism and totemite dictation have already occurred in their ranks. Mayor Busse has, therefore, also turned his attention to that branch of the city's workmen, and has appointed a new fire marshal, with orders to run the department in the interest of the taxpayers and the public. Of the situation Fire Marshal Horan says:

"We have had sufficient examples of what the union does toward destroying discipline and efficiency. The Firemen's Union had caused trouble ever since it was formed. Non-union firemen had been ostracized and assaulted. Witnesses have perjured themselves and the department has deteriorated rapidly. It is now proposed to restore it to the same standing as the public schools under the new régime."

Federation of Employers.

The organization of workingmen and their federation has naturally resulted in the federation of employers, or the formation of a citizens' alliance. This movement is getting a good start on the Pacific Coast, and at the recent meeting of the State Federation of Citizens' Alliances of California, President George of the San Francisco Alliance reported that twenty-four employers' associations, covering twenty-four separate and distinct lines of business were members of the Citizens' Alliance, the working of which he described as follows:

"To illustrate, we will assume that the Bakers' Union seeks to force some unjust measure upon the master bakers and refuses to deal with the Executive Committee of the Master Bakers' Association. Suppose the master bakers stand together and meet a threatened strike with a threatened lockout all along the line. Then, as a means to further intimidate, the unions start a coöperative bakery (an old trick) and cut prices. To offset this, we call to the assistance of the master bakers the United Cereal and Flour Millers' Association, an association of flour manufacturers who got together last fall when the unions tried to force them to print the union label on all flour sacks. The millers quickly see the point and rather than jeopardize the patronage of the Pacific Coast Master Bakers' Association (the big association that includes all the small master bakers' associations of the California cities) the union coöperative bakery enterprise is put on a footing that means defeat for their plans of temporary ruinous competition as a means to force the master bakers to accept union rule. If the quarrel spreads to other associations, the Citizens' Alliance can call on other employer associations in order to stop the trouble. So you see, the Citizens' Alliance is not a union buster, but a union regulator. We seek to prevent strikes through thorough organization of employers in every branch of trade, and whipping strikes with strikebreakers is no part of our programme."

The platform of principles of the Citizens' Alliance includes: The open shop; against the boycott; no sympathetic strikes; apprenticeships for American boys of right age, without limitation; the merit system and no restriction upon output; the employment of safe labor-saving devices; no compulsory use of union label; sacrifice of non-union workmen at behest of labor unions not allowed.

WHAT WE GET FROM THE TREES.

Spices and Rubber and Turpentine, and Quinine to Cure Malaria.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

It is a matter of curious interest to examine a list of the articles of utility that we owe to trees. Articles of food, and wearing apparel, industrial products, objects of beauty—the list is a long one and interesting.

We get our allspice from an extremely handsome tree of Jamaica, called the pimento. Pimento plantations, or walks as they call them there, are formed by taking a piece of woodland containing a few of these trees and clearing it of all other wood. This refuse wood is left on the ground to protect the young pimento trees that soon appear, and at the end of two years all the brush and refuse is cleared away to give the young growth an opportunity to mature. The trees blossom and after the blossoms—which are very fragrant—have fallen, the berries appear and are gathered while green. These berries, when dry, form the allspice of commerce.

The clove tree is a native of the Moluccas, but it is also cultivated in Zanzibar. It is the little unopened flower buds, that never permitted to blossom, are plucked and add to the spicy flavor of our pickles and boiled hams, or "take away our breath" when we indulge in the odorous young vegetable that is so sweet at first but so reprehensible at second hand.

In the Spice Islands of the East Indies grows a nut called the musk-nut. It has an outer covering similar to the black walnut. The network inside of this is mace, and there is still a hard thin shell containing a rich seed which is our nutmeg.

Chocolate is made from the pulverized seeds of the cacao tree. These seeds are formed in a gourd-like pod which hangs from the trunk and larger branches of the tree. They are carefully cured before shipping. It really requires two trees to furnish us this delicacy, chocolate, as the cacao tree must be shaded in order to thrive, and a certain tree has been used so much for that purpose that in Trinidad the natives call it "Madre de Cacao," mother of the chocolate.

COFFEE GROWING.

One might pass through a plantation of coffee trees and not know it, for the coffee is planted in the shade of the forest which has been thinned for that purpose. In Mexico a row of coffee and a row of rubber trees is often planted. The rubber is of speedier growth and soon shades the coffee, but both must be well shaded until started and a crop of cassavas or bananas accomplishes this.

No more delicious yield is had from any tree than the syrup and sugar from our own maples. The old-time sugaring-off has given place to methods suited to the larger industry, but the flavor is more delicious to the American palate, however the product is cared for, than all the spices from Araby the Blest.

Resin or crude turpentine comes from the inner wood of pine trees. The pineries of the South supply a large part of the world's demands. It is not the sap of the tree, but when the tree is cut and the bark removed it exudes and completely covers the wound. This exuding material is resin dissolved in spirits of turpentine. As it comes in contact with the air, some of the turpentine evaporates, and the resin is left more or less fluid according to the amount of this turpentine. The two are separated in a distillery. In the South, the tree is scarified for a few feet from the base, and a deep cavity is cut at the bottom of the blaze. Into this cavity the resin drips from the wound above. This method results in the death of the tree in a few years. In the pine forests of France they cut a narrow groove, lengthening it each year, at the base fasten a small earthenware pot into which the resin drips. In time this groove grows over and one is cut on another part of the tree. The tree is not injured by this process.

Tannic acid is requisite in converting hides into leather. It is yielded by the leaves, wood and fruits of many trees. The oak has long been extensively used for this product. At one time hemlock trees were cut and stripped just for the tan-bark industry, and the wood was left to rot in the forest. South America ships the quebracho wood to this country and to Europe for its tannin. The black mangrove tree is very rich in this quality.

PRODUCTION OF CAMPHOR.

Camphor and cinnamon belong to the same genus. Formosa is a great camphor island and the industry is now in the hands of the Japanese. It is a beautiful tree, growing large, and living to an old age. It has a white blossom, and the fruit is a small red berry. Camphor is extracted from the wood. The tree is felled and cut up into small chips, these are boiled in water and the camphor passes off in steam and is deposited in beautiful white crystals in a condenser. In the Orient one often sees carved chests of camphor wood used to keep insects from clothing.

A valuable article used by painters is the yellow water color known as gamboge. The name of the tree from which it is obtained, and which is a native of India, is Cambodia—Cambogia, and gamboge is a corruption of that word. It is the juice of the tree. It is received in a joint of bamboo from an incision cut spirally half way round the trunk. When the joint is full it is heated, and the hardened result is our gamboge sticks.

No tree is of more importance in the medical world than the Cinchona, yhich yields quinine, and to it we owe many another product of the tropical world, for without its use it would have been impossible to explore and settle many of the fever-laden districts.

A great industry which is growing in importance is the dry distillation of wood by which wood alcohol is obtained. This is similar to the alcohol of whisky and brandy except that it is poisonous. A retort is filled with wood, and, too, wood which is of little value for anything else, knot wood and crooked branches may be used for this purpose. When the process is complete, this wood remains in the retort in the form of pure charcoal. There are also by-products, gases, tarry matters and acetic acid, all of commercial value.

One of the most indispensable of all tree products is that of paper. The amount of wood which is consumed in this manufacture is of such magnitude that unless one has seen it in bulk or handled it, it is difficult to appreciate it. The very paper on which this article is printed is made from wood. One and a half cords of wood are required to produce one ton of paper pulp. Common newspaper material is wood from which the bark and knots have been removed, ground into pulp and pressed into paper. There is nothink to be gained nowadays saving rags for the rag man. The first choice is spruce wood. Carolina poplar is also good. Tulip wood is used in the paper of our postal cards. Large quantities of the spruce wood used in paper making comes from Europe, especially Saxony and Bavaria. Our word library comes from the Latin "liber," the bark of a tree, a curious fact in this connection.

WHERE RUBBER COMES FROM.

The rubber tree well deserves to be called the tree of American fortunes. The name, India rubber, was given because it came first from India, and because it was originally used for rubbing out pencil marks. It is the use of it for tires of automobiles and bicycles that has brought wealth to many manufacturers The great rubber port of the world is at Para, a city of Brazil at the mouth of the Amazon River. The material exudes from the tree in a milk-white juice which is coagulated by heat and smoke. There are several varieties of trees that yield rubber, and they are found not only in South America, but in Mexico and Central Spain. Many of them produce a low grade because of the resin contained in the juice.

The trees to which we are indebted for food in the shape of nuts are legion, and both tropical and temperate zones yield their product to man.

Most of the woods used in dyes come from the tropics, as if the brilliant sun had transformed his hues into bark and fiber there to remain latent for future use. The word "Brazil" means dyewood, and the scientific name of logwood literally translated means redwood from Campeche.

One of the most valuable woods for use in the art crafts is teak. It is the most important tree of Java and India, and has been a royal tree for centuries, that is, reserved for the exclusive use of the government or royal personages. A native may not cut down a teak wood tree on his own premises for his own use.

Ebony is another valuable tropical wood; it is the heart-wood of several species of persimmon, and so heavy that it sinks in water, as will also teak.

Lignum-vitae is one of the hardest and toughest of woods; it is shipped in large quantities from tropical America, and is used in machinery, the manufacture of ship's pulleys and blocks, in ten-pin balls and the like.

Lancewood is extremely light, strong and elastic, and finds a place on archery, carriage shafts, whip handles, spars for small boats and wherever these qualities are desirable.

Mahogany is the Indian name for a tree that figures so largely in the manufacture of our large furniture. The tree is a native of the West Indies, Central America and Mexico. It is a majestic tree in appearance, not as tall as some, but shapely and imposing.

Cuban cedar is a finishing wood, used in cigar-box manufacture and in boat building. Properly speaking it is not a true cedar, that family being well represented by the deodar of India and the Cedars of Lebanon. The wood is aromatic and pale red in color, and the tree resembles the English walnut in appearance.

MULTITUDE OF OTHERS.

Every one who has thought at all about the uses of trees will realize at once that this is only a very superficial list of the tree products which are familiar to us in everyday life, but it will have served its purpose if it calls attention to our own deep indebtedness to the trees. To this may be added one fact that will immediately make the idea one of commercial value, and that is this: that certain species which are of great value to the commercial world are found growing in a very limited range, is no reason for assuming that they will not grow as well, if not better, elsewhere. Many trees grow equally as well in California as in their own native home. Note the eucalyptus, already become so great an asset to the State. The rubber tree thrives here and we have some magnificent specimens of the deodar of India. Even our lemons, oranges and olives are foreigners, to say nothing of figs, magnolias—the list is an exhaustive one.

California is young, with a wonderful, even miraculous range of climate, and sooner or later we shall wake up to the commercial possibilities that lie in the cultivation of foreign trees that will thrive in our soil and climate. It takes more patience to grow a mahogany tree than it does to propagate a strawberry plant, but there is no reason why we should not have both.

GUSSIE PACKARD DUBOIS.

Irrigation in Production.

Wildernesses not only west but east of the Mississippi are blossoming as the rose through the blessed offices of irrigation. Wheat, corn, and most other field crops suffer short drouths without potent harm. But the yield of lowland meadows and garden crops are vastly enlarged by irrigation during the dry years. In Pennsylvania the hay from 125 irrigated meadows was more than double the yield of similar meadows in the same localities, unirrigated. Cauliflower can be forced by irrigation to mature earlier and bring a larger price. In one place irrigated celery yielded $500 per acre, and lettuce $200, while under natural rainfall these crops were perfect failures. Irrigation costs more in the East than in the West. The soil is less retentive of moisture, the ground seldom has a regular slope, and often the gravity system of distributing water is not applicable. When ditches may be run from small flowing streams the problem is as simple as could be wished, for dams may be cheaply constructed. Some truck growers pump water from streams or wells. Some use city water. The average total cost of irrigation in the East has been between $30 and $100 an acre, and the profit has been fully $200 an acre. The success depends upon the great value of garden crops and upon the economic insurance of its application.

ALL READY TO LICK HIS BOOT.

If Only Calhoun Will Let Union Live.

Pitiful Confession of Poor, Crushed Cornelius.

Furuseth Is Present Danger in San Francisco.

BY HARRY CARR.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—Cornelius, the head of the badly-licked Carmen's Union, has been telling his troubles to a friend of mine.

He says the union has for weeks been imploring Calhoun to please settle the strike on any terms that he sees fit. Cornelius says that the unions are willing to let Calhoun absolutely name the terms of surrender; will gratefully get down and lick Calhoun's boots if he will only not insist upon annihilating the whole union.

Cornelius did not put it in just those words, but they represent the substance of his remarks.

Although they are scared enough of Calhoun, the union leaders are still more afraid of the growing rebellion among their own men.

You see symptoms of a smoldering revolt on every hand. On one of the dead walls on the water front these words appear, scrawled in chalk in a strange, foreign hand: "McCarthy—the muzzler."

Going home defiantly on the forbidden car the other day, a union machinist told me his opinion of the "inner-circle" of labor leaders—McCarthy, Cornelius, Tveitmoe, etc.

BITTER AGAINST LEADERS.

"They are all grafters," he said, "with the exception of Andrew Furuseth, and he is a fanatic. The rest of them 'do' us out of our money and Furuseth 'queers' the unions by his water-front murders."

He spoke bitterly of the fact that Cornelius is receiving an income of something like $480 a month while the men whom he forced to go on strike are watching their families starve.

All the married men get is $7 a week and the single men $5. They struck because they claimed men couldn't keep soul and body together in San Francisco on $3 a day!

The union men realize that their strike was forced largely by two elements—the politicians and the professional, acknowledged anarchists.

This is not only relatively but literally true. At the very outset of the strike, Emma Goldman hurried out to the Coast with a band of Chicago anarchists who have been working with the infamous I.W.W., which is an anarchist order pure and simple.

They have even gone so far as to distribute circulars among the soldiers at the Presidio, asking them to mutiny in case of being called out to preserve order.

Most of the workmen, in the unions as well as out, are decent, conservative men. You should see the expression of disgust on the faces of many of the "pickets" who are forced, by the threats of the union leaders, to stand out on the street corners. They are supposed to be there for the purpose of accosting and intimidating passengers. But I want to say to their credit that most of them have absolutely refused to do this dirty work.

The "rough-house" work has been done by a circle of ruffians specially detailed by the unions for the purpose.

WITHDRAW INTO HOLES.

It is a significant fact, that all the well-known union blatherskites, fearing the wrath of the men they have buncoed and robbed, have withdrawn into their holes.

Andrew Furuseth is left to face the music alone—or practically alone. This Russian Finn is easily the most interesting man in the labor-union world today.

He is, at once, the best and the worst man in it.

Pinhead McCarthy, Cornelius, Tveitmoe, Mike Casey are all in the labor-union business for the benefit of McCarthy, Cornelius, Tveitmoe and Mike Casey. They are in it for what salaries they can get out of it.

Furuseth is not a grafter. He is a fanatic, an inciter of murder, an organizer of thugs who has cold-bloodedly tried to strangle the prosperity of a stricken city in order to promote the greed of a lot of organized immigrants. He is all this—and it is stated mildly—but he is not a thief.

MAKE TROUBLE FOR CASH.

All the other union men vote themselves enormous salaries for their services in making trouble. Furuseth, on the other hand, only gets $75 a month, it is said, and lives in a poor little room on the water front.

Furuseth is a dreamer—a violent, crazy-looking one, with shabby clothes and fierce, glaring eyes that seem to burn into your very soul.

San Francisco will never forget the day when he armed all his villainous sailors and rough long-shoremen and marched them through the streets with rifles, on the verge of a strike—Andy's little hint.

He is San Francisco's present danger. Most of the other labor leaders are cheap, cowardly grafters who could probably be bought off. Furuseth could not be bought.

He means war and he has a brilliant, penetrating mind to direct it.

UNIONS IN TERROR.

The chief guarantee that San Francisco has of peace, however, is the presence of detectives in the inner councils of the unions. Somehow or other, the United Railroads know their every move. It is filling the unions with terror. They know not whom to trust. Every man in the union "inner circle" watches every other man with suspicion and distrust. They are afraid to talk to one another; afraid to consult.

There is nothing in the world so demoralizing to an organization. Calhoun has not been content to hit "tabby cat" blows on the outside. He has struck at the heart of the union.

No man can foresee the result to unionism in general.

There is a big open-shop campaign coming among the builders. It will be liberally supported and financed by a few men. As usual, the vast majority of San Francisco business men are hanging around in the shadow, weakly hoping that some one will lick the unions for them.

Calhoun may be a briber—maybe; but look at this slain dragon!

He has done it single-handed.

Our Credit System

Every article is marked in plain figures for spot cash. Our price for credit is 10 per cent. more than our spot cash price. By this system you know how much you pay for credit. We are not as wise as some stores that claim they sell on credit for the same price as for cash. We admit we do not know how it can be done and give a square deal to cash and credit buyers. Everybody knows cash will buy for less money than credit. Everybody knows 10 per cent. is a fair price for long-time credit. Whatever may be said, the fact remains that goods are invariably cheaper at Brent's. It's easy enough for some stores to mark goods up and then give big discounts. At Brent's you get real bargains always—sale or no sale.

BRENT'S

712-714-716-718 South Main Street, Near Seventh

We deliver goods, in our own wagons, to near-by towns.

If you cannot come to the store for what you want, write us. Make use of our mail order system—it is for your benefit.

For the benefit of those who cannot come during the week, our store is kept open Saturday evening until 10 o'clock.

OUR GRAND ANNUAL CLEARANCE

WHEN PRICES ARE LOWEST OF THE ENTIRE YEAR

Everybody is buying Brent's Anti-Trust Furniture. Brent's big discount Clearance Sale is unquestionably the greatest attraction in the city. Crowds flock from all parts of Southern California to partake of the bargain feast spread before them. Never in the history of Brent's bargain giving have such radical price cuts been made. Thousands of choicest pieces of furniture sacrificed at less than actual cost. Bring your dollars to Brent's; they will go twice and three times as far as usual. Here's a page of money saving opportunities.

A CHOICE 50-FT. LOT ABSOLUTELY FREE.

We have just acquired a large tract of land at a new townsite which has just been organized in Los Angeles Co., near the line of the Owens River aqueduct, and in order that it may become known in the quickest and most effective manner we have decided to give away absolutely free one hundred lots.

All we ask in return is that each person who gets a lot will give us the names of at least three persons who might become interested and to whom we might sell other lots. The one hundred lots will be given to the first one hundred replying to this notice, only one to a person.

The location of the tract is an ideal one, the land being almost level at an elevation of 2900 feet. The soil a fertile loam unsurpassed in the State of California, and the finest of artesian water on the tract.

The lots are full size, being 50x150. Free and clear of all incumbrance or restrictions. The first one hundred will be given absolutely free as above stated. Papers will be made out by a responsible abstract company through which the transfer will be made and the only item of expense to you will be the cost of the papers. This will not exceed $5 and includes deed, notary fee and certificate of title.

The one hundred free lots are equal in location and value to any other lots in the TRACT. They will be reserved accordingly as the requests are received. No two lots adjoining will be given away nor will more than one lot be given away to the same family.

Upon receipt of a postal or letter you will be given necessary information, etc. This proposition is bona fide and means just what it says.

Our object in advertising this great offer in this way is to avoid the confusion which would arise in so many people coming to our office and enables us to award the lots in the order the replies are received.

KNOW THY FUTURE.

BY CONSULTING THE

WORLD'S GREATEST PSYCHIC,

PALMIST AND SPIRIT PSYCHIC,

PROF. MILBURN,

PROF. MILBURN,

PROF. MILBURN.

PERMANENTLY LOCATED IN HIS OWN HOME, 639 S. HILL ST., 639; CORNER OF SEVENTH ST.

Forty years a practicing psychic, known from ocean to ocean, as the marvel of two hemispheres, press and public recognize Prof. Milburn as the foremost and most able psychic now before public. Where others fail he succeeds with ease, and he positively will NOT accept fee for his readings unless you are perfectly satisfied and receive the information you desire, marvelous demonstrations of second sight, that must be seen to be believed, so be sure and consult him at once. Elevate thyself. Know thy future. Positively no equal on earth in his profession. By his wonderful powers he will tell your full name, tells what you called for, tells what you want to know. If not correct, free free. So positive am I of my own power to tell the past, present and future that I will make NO CHARGE, NO CHARGE, NO CHARGE, unless you obtain the information you desire, and find me the superior of all psychics, and palmists in this city.

SPECIAL OFFER FOR ONE WEEK ONLY.

Realizing there are many skeptical people in Los Angeles, and that this city has been overrun with pretenders, etc., and that many of its best citizens would be only too anxious to visit a TRUE psychic exponent were they assured of satisfaction, therefore Prof. Milburn will (to convince the public of Los Angeles of his superiority over all psychics) give his full readings to all for seven days only, at 50c.

50c.

50c.

WHEN CONSULTING A PSYCHIC ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. AS A TEST IN HIS REGULAR READING, HE WILL TELL YOUR NAME, AGE, OCCUPATION, WHOM AND WHEN YOU WILL MARRY.

ASSISTANCE FOR TROUBLED OR unfortunate; if you are in trouble of any kind, discontented, unhappy, or not satisfied in life, or have domestic, love or business troubles, you will be told how to overcome all trouble. WHEN OTHERS FAIL, HE SUCCEEDS WITH EASE.

HE GIVES ADVICE ON BUSINESS, speculation, investments, insurance, changes, travels, health, sickness, love, divorce, marriage, lawsuits, separations, wills, deeds, mortgages, patents, claims, collections, mining, etc. He will tell you what trade, speculation or profession you are adapted for.

LAWSUITS, WILLS, DIVORCES. He can render you assistance and give you advice in a way that will bring success in business transactions, property speculation, investments, mining, etc.

LOVE, COURTSHIP, MARRIAGE. Gives truthful revelations of all love affairs, troubles, marriages, restores lost affections, reunites the separated, settles lovers' quarrels, etc.

Tells how to WIN the man or woman you love, and how to make your husband or wife be true to you, and how to overcome all your enemies.

WHY CONSULT AN INFERIOR PSYCHIC WHEN PROF. MILBURN, THE ACKNOWLEDGED LEADER OF THEM ALL, IS HERE AND HIS FEE IS NO HIGHER THAN THOSE LESS COMPETENT.

His past record and strictly honorable dealings are sufficient guaranty for his future work, and have won the good will of the press and public.

READING BY MAIL, ONE DOLLAR.

SEND DATE OF BIRTH.

MR. FAY

has appeared before T. C. Van Epps, notary public, legally appointed by Gov. Gillett of California, and made the following sworn affidavit:

I, H. C. Fay, psychic, 120½ S. Spring st., do hereby under oath solemnly swear to make you no charge if I do not faithfully fulfill every word embodied in this sworn statement. I WILL tell your name in full, occupation and address, friends, enemies or rivals, whether husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false. How to gain the love of the one you most desire, control or influence the actions of any one even though miles away.

I further guarantee and promise to make you no charge unless you find me superior to any other psychic you ever consulted. There is no hope so fond, or wish so great that I cannot accomplish for you. I guarantee success where all other psychics fail. I positively am one hundred years in advance in the power and knowledge over all other psychics, who try to imitate my wonderful work. I give never-failing advice upon all matters of life, such as LOVE, COURTSHIP, MARRIAGE, DIVORCE, BUSINESS, HEALTH, LAW-SUITS, BURIED TREASURES, SPECULATIONS and TRANSACTIONS OF ALL KINDS. I never fail to reunite the separated, cause speedy and happy marriages, overcome enemies, rivals, lovers' quarrels, evil habits, stumbling blocks and bad luck of all kinds. I lift you out of your sorrow and trouble and start you on the path of happiness and prosperity. There is no heart so sad or home so dreary that I cannot bring sunshine to. In fact, no matter what may be your hope, fear or ambition, I do guarantee to tell it all to you before you utter a word to me, and after I am finished, if you are not absolutely satisfied, and if I do not faithfully fulfill every word and claim sworn to above, then you pay not one penny and I do herewith to this sworn statement sign my name under legal oath.

H. C. FAY,

120½ South Spring st.

Subscribed and sworn before me this 12th day of June, 1907.

T. C. VAN EPPS, Notary Public.

YOUR WISH AND OBJECT IN LIFE CAN BE ATTAINED.

A SECRET YOU SHOULD KNOW—THE POWER OF CONTROL.

ONLY TO KNOW IS THE GREAT DESIRE.

PSYCHIC INFLUENCE GIVES THAT KNOWLEDGE.

Remember your prospects of today may be your fortune tomorrow if properly handled. If you are in doubt about your investments, consult Mr. Fay and learn what the result will be. Nothing too difficult for Mr. Fay, whose years of experience, natural aptitude and gifts make his words invaluable.

Satisfaction given or no fee accepted. Positively guarantees success when others fail.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,

OF 305½ S. SPRING ST., NEAR THIRD, THE CELEBRATED RELIABLE PALMIST AND ASTROLOGER,

whose work is known throughout this entire land, and who has made a life study of PALMISTRY AND ASTROLOGY, has convinced hundreds of the best intellects and persons in all walks of life that HIS REMARKABLE READINGS AND PREDICTIONS FOR FUTURE EVENTS IN THEIR LIVES ARE UNPARALLELED.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S readings, which are thorough and scientific, have nothing in common whatever with the fictitious readings of illiterate, unreliable humbug palmists, astrologers, psychics, fortune tellers, and those who, THROUGH TRICK METHODS, CLAIM TO TELL YOUR NAME, etc., etc., after you yourself have written the information—who scarcely know one line or mount from the other, and who, by their disgraceful readings, drag these useful sciences into the mire of fortune telling and fraud. PROF. ALTHOUSE is not actuated by any feeling of ill-will toward any reader who may be GENUINE (for he believes all reliable readers should be encouraged;) but he will—in the future, as in the past—denounce humbug work whenever and wherever he can.

A satisfactory reading can only be had from one who has thoroughly mastered the laws of these wonderful sciences through years of critical study of planetary influences on the lines of the PALM AND HOROSCOPE, combined with large experience, trained judgment, etc. All kinds of diseases can be accurately diagnosed. Careful advice given in domestic, love affairs, etc.; also of financial success or failure; changes, deaths, investments, vocation in life, and many other important things you should know, not mentioned here.

He stands at the very head of his profession, having read—FROM LIFE—more celebrated people than any other reader. He does not deceive the public in this respect. HIS READINGS, TOO, MUST IN NO WISE BE CLASSED WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER READER NOW OPERATING IN THIS PART OF THE COUNTRY, AND HIS SKILLED WORK HAS NO COMPARISON WITH THEIRS WHATSOEVER.

WITH EACH HAND READING, THERE IS ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK says: "Your reading was most marvelous." E. H. SOTHERN says: "I find your reading coincides with Cheiro's," and "I am greatly interested in Palmistry and Astrology." FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your skill in Palmistry is remarkable." LOUIS JAMES says: "Your reading was entirely satisfactory." JULIET CROSBY, actress, says: "Prof. Althouse has given me a most helpful, complete and satisfactory reading." PAUL GILMORE, actor, says: "Your reading is by far the most scientific I have ever had."

PROF. ALTHOUSE also read Admiral Schley, Senator Clark, ex-Governor Pardee, General Chaffee, Baron Rothschild, Edison, Joaquin Miller, James O'Neill, Ysaye, Sousa, Huntington, Parinta, Lillian Russell, Calve, Anna Held, Lillian Nordica, Constantino, Alice Neilson, Modjeska, Julia Marlowe, Adaberto, Sembrich, Jefferson, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott and hundreds of others.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

ASTROLOGY AND THE HOROSCOPE.

PROF. ALTHOUSE has also given many years of critical study to and is an experienced practitioner in the science of MODERN ASTROLOGY by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. THE HOROSCOPE IS DECIDEDLY A GUIDE IN LIFE, showing remarkable things when properly cast—from the position of the planets AT YOUR BIRTH; in fact, TELLS EVERYTHING ABOUT ONE'S SELF WORTH KNOWING, being in truth one of the best investments the world offers. Your horoscope is also a key to the character of others, and in this respect can be of the utmost use to you. SCIENTIFIC PREDICTIONS, embracing all questions of life, for the present, immediate future and events up to the close of life—giving dates of future events—made by these sciences—through the trained judgment of Prof. Althouse—will stagger the senses. Beware, however, of the incompetent and unreliable reader.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in hand readings and casting of horoscopes, has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.

Daily and evenings; Sunday 10 to 2.

STUDIO PARLORS, 305½ S. SPRING ST. 30

PERSONAL—

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, England, may be consulted at

322 S. SPRING ST. (Suite 17.)

by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READING FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

Mrs. Masson's knowledge of palmistry is founded upon SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLES, aided by years of EARNEST STUDY and patient PERSONAL INVESTIGATION. Her statements do not consist of vague generalities, which tell you nothing, but are EXACT, PRACTICAL and TO THE POINT; give PAST as well as FUTURE events, and cannot fail to be of benefit to you. They will assist you in the struggle for recognition by teaching you your possibilities and limitations; save you years of fruitless struggles in the wrong vocation by pointing out the line of work you are best fitted for, and lead you to wealth through information as to investments and enterprises, quite unobtainable through other sources.

CHANGES OF BUSINESS, LOSSES AND GAINS, LAWSUITS, DEATHS, MARRIAGES, SEPARATIONS, and, in fact, all that life holds for you, is plainly written in your hand; it is simply a question of correct interpretation.

(As Mrs. Masson's methods of hand-reading do not require the names of her patrons to be disclosed, they may rest assured of their identity being unknown, and that their confidence will be maintained inviolate.)

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

HAVE YOU A FUTURE?

IF SO, CONSULT

MME. LE PIERRO.

What is happiness? It is to know yourself. Is there on earth any human being that feels himself actually happy? Probably not, because divine wisdom uses our longing for happiness to spur us on and force us to the effort necessary for the accomplishment of our destiny.

A little thought makes it clear that men can neither hope for nor reasonably expect HAPPINESS, PEACE AND PROSPERITY in their present state.

Man looks out at the universe with the puzzled, ignorant expression of a small child when the light is suddenly brought close to its face. Everything that we see astonishes us and proves our ignorance. Happiness must be found in knowledge, and the power that knowledge gives. Men are ignorant. They know nothing of their destiny. Thousands and tens of thousands of centuries hence, as long as the sun's heat shall preserve us—human beings will still be seeking it, because HAPPINESS IS IN SEEKING, IN TRYING. If you have time this day for quiet thinking, reason it out.

CONSULT MME. LE PIERRO.

The world known, born with a double veil, can safely be consulted, and guarantees absolute satisfaction.

MME. LE PIERRO,

FOR SALE—
I. M. HOLLINGSWORTH,
HIGH-CLASS BUSINESS INVESTME
329 H. W. HELLMAN BLDG.

IN THE HEART OF THE CITY.
One of the nicest, cleanest, most profitable and most desirable retail institutions to be found in the center of our business center, will be sold on basis of invoice, approximating $10,000, as the owners are preparing to engage in wholesale business which offers employment for more capital.

A bonus has been offered for this lease and the good will is worth thousands, though no account will be taken of either. The business is netting better than [illegible] a year.

Commandingly located as it is on one of the best business thoroughfares, so thoroughly established and favorably known that a clean, handsome profit is insured every month in the year, no one contemplating engaging in like pursuit of similar magnitude can afford to overlook this very unusual opportunity. The books are open.

THRIVING LUMBER BUSINESS.
I have a thoroughly established business in this line that is a proven money maker, which, for the most legitimate reasons is offered for sale. Will invoice over $25,000 and is doing about [illegible] a year with a minimum expense. Will sell as a whole or might sell a substantial interest to right party.

If you think of engaging in this line of business which will always be safe, sound and profitable, you cannot afford to pass this opportunity uninvestigated. The books are open.

[illegible] of high character, either by outright [illegible] is my business to be in touch with

RARE OPPORTUNITY.
A prosperous and thoroughly established local manufacturing concern, producing a staple commodity used every day in every home has during the last year, netted over [illegible] per cent. on its capital, yet finds the need of more capital and energy with which to still further develop its business in its extensive field. This concern numbers four of our largest department stores among its customers.

A reliable and capable business man with $5000 to $10,000 can secure a substantial interest in this business, carrying an official position and a salary commensurate with services rendered. The books are open.

$1000 to $50,000.
I have a number of other strictly HIGH-CLASS mercantile and industrial openings ranging from $1000 to $50,000 approximating and covering practically all legitimate lines, that will stand the most rigid investigation though propriety forbids specific public mention.

Should you desire to connect yourself with an established and profitable business of high character, either by outright purchase or forming partnership, it is my business to be in touch with such openings and I can be of undoubted assistance to you.

WANTED—MAN WHO CAN DO THINGS. We are constantly on the lookout for the right man in every community to assist us in marketing the high class investment securities that we offer. Men are plentiful but good men are scarce. Once in a while we succeed in locating one of the right kind and when we do, we hook up and travel in double harness to our mutual satisfaction and profit. To the right man who can sell in his home town and vicinity, 6 per cent. preferred stock with 100 per cent. common stock bonus, yielding 12 per cent. annual dividends and secured by over 300 acres of the finest lemon grove within 75 miles of Los Angeles, we can offer a rare chance to make big money the year round. Then, if you can honestly and truthfully say to yourself, "I believe that I am the man these people are looking for," write us a personal letter stating qualifications and references, and maybe we can do business together. FOR SALE—

I. M. HOLLINGSWORTH,
HIGH-CLASS BUSINESS INVESTMENTS,
520 H. W. HELLMAN BLDG.

IN THE HEART OF THE CITY.

One of the nicest, cleanest, most profitable and most desirable retail institutions to be found in the center of our business center, will be sold on basis of invoice, approximating $10,000, as the owners are preparing to engage in wholesale business which offers employment for more capital.

A bonus has been offered for this business and the good will is worth thousands, though no account will be taken of either. The business is netting better than $[illegible] a year.

Commandingly located as it is on one of the best business thoroughfares, so thoroughly established and favorably known that a clean, handsome profit is insured every month in the year, no one contemplating engaging in like pursuit of similar magnitude can afford to overlook this very unusual opportunity. The books are open.

THRIVING LUMBER BUSINESS.

I have a thoroughly established business in this line that is a proven money maker, which, for the most legitimate reasons is offered for sale. Will invoice about $25,000 and is doing about $100,000 a year with a minimum expense. Will sell as a whole or might sell a substantial interest to right party.

If you think of engaging in this line of business which will always be safe, sound and profitable, you cannot afford to pass this opportunity uninvestigated. The books are open.

[illegible] of high character, either by out[illegible] it is my business to be in touch with

RARE OPPORTUNITY.

A prosperous and thoroughly established local manufacturing establishment producing a staple commodity used every day in every home has, during the last year, netted over 100 per cent. on its capital, yet finds the need of more capital and energy with which to still further develop its business in its extensive field. This concern numbers four of our largest department stores among its customers.

A reliable and capable business man with $5000 to $10,000 can secure a substantial interest in this business, carrying an official position and a salary commensurate with services rendered. The books are open.

$1000 to $50,000.

I have a number of other strictly HIGH-CLASS mercantile and industrial openings ranging from $1000 to $50,000 approximating and covering practically all legitimate lines, that will stand the most rigid investigation though propriety forbids specific public mention.

Should you desire to connect yourself with an established and profitable business of high character, either by outright purchase or forming partnership, it is my business to be in touch with such openings and I can be of unlimited assistance to you.

BUSINESS CHANCES—
Miscellaneous.

I WANT TWO OR THREE RESPONSIBLE business men who can invest from $5000 to $25,000 each to join me in establishing an entirely new manufacturing business to cover the United States; the product has never been manufactured before and is of daily use and consumption in every home and elsewhere. A factory for supplying the local market has been started in Los Angeles, and a large factory building fully equipped with spur tracks running into it from both the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe railways, has been leased for a term of ten years. The NET profits on the output necessary to supply the PRESENT local daily demand will be over $1500 per month, and recent developments prove conclusively that this demand will increase rapidly from month to month. This business is practically a monopoly as the product as well as the automatic machinery for manufacturing it is fully protected by United States patent just issued; it is absolutely safe, permanent, sound, of the highest class and will appeal at once to the most conservative business man. Much money and labor have already been expended in developing the subject so that it is now easily investigated. It has been submitted to the highest authorities in Los Angeles as to its sanitary feature and has received their hearty indorsement; can prove that more than $250,000 net profit can easily be made this year. Knowledge of the details of the business, which can be easily acquired will convince any person that the above statements are true and not overdrawn. Any person answering this advertisement will please give references or information which will enable the advertiser to determine their standing and responsibility, otherwise an interview will not be granted; no agents, principals only. For personal interview address R, box 123, TIMES OFFICE. 30

FOR SALE—DRUG STORE, CLEARING $150 per month, good clean stock, remunerative and growing; nice prescription business; business will double inside one year; no competition nearer than 2 miles, located near city limits; will take $1000 cash, balance as you can pay it, or would take clear property for same. Address "CAPSICUM," R, box 110, TIMES OFFICE. 30

FOR SALE—CASH GROCERY, CORNER, cheap rent, no delivery; this is the best paying proposition we have on our list of many good ones, the owner will take good clear lot, the stock and fixtures will invoice about $1500.

FOR SALE—MOLTING TIME.

Is the time to provide for eggs when they will be scarce and high. Don't let your hens molt for months. Don't let them get completely run down and all out of condition. Feed them a highly nitrogenous poultry food, rich in protein, composed of the finest grains, seeds, roots, salt, iron, charcoal, condiments, shell, oil cake, bone, meat and dried blood, to keep the poultry in good health, build up a strong and vigorous system. Makes the hen molt early and convert the surplus aliment into eggs. It is a full, scientifically balanced ration, containing no filler but every ounce is pure food. The hens like it, they eat it, there is no waste, hence it is the cheapest egg food on the market. Fed either dry or as a mash. Many dealers sell it. If yours does not and will not get it for you, phone us.

WEST COAST STOCK FOOD CO., 318 San Fernando st. Phone Main 3990. 30

FOR SALE—YOU CAN MAKE YOUR OWN egg food if you know how, that is, if you know the specific food value of each of the different materials to be combined, as shown by analyses, and the proper proportion of each to use. But then you could not make it any better than West Coast Egg Food and not nearly as cheap, for we buy all these materials in carload lots from first hands for cash, and after grinding and mixing, we charge no greater profit than we would for the materials separately. You can't buy nor make better or cheaper egg food than West Coast. 30

WANTED—$190,000

ON SPRING STREET PROPERTY NEAR FOURTH STREET.

Be wise—and make your loan while the banks are refusing to do so, thereby making rates higher. The wise buyer buys when the crowd is holding off and prices consequently lower, and sellers more anxious; the wise lender lends when banks are turning away applicants for loans, the fool borrower borrows like I'm doing now, when he's compelled to do so—and must pay the freight! If you have the $190,000 come in Monday and see me. I can give you security that will "let you sleep."

This ad. is confined to principals with apologies and regrets to Agents and Brokers! I don't intend to have this loan offered except at Room 447, Wilcox Bldg.

BOAZ DUNCAN, Owner.

P.S.—This property is worth $6500 per foot, or $390,000, but I'm in position to give additional real estate security if you demand it—$190,000 worth more—and can also give you $140,000 worth of bonds. In other words, if you have the $190,000 and want to lend it at a fair rate of interest, don't fail to see me, as I can satisfy you as to security. I have tickets bought to leave on the 9th for 2 months in the East and my present mortgage matures soon and I want to fix it before I leave. Hence these tears!

P.S. No. 2.—It may be this will be read in this column by some capitalist who prefers "safety and low rate of interest to speculation." Well, I'll be glad to see you and furnish the "safety" all right, but I want to tell you to "get wise" right quick on values on Spring and Broadway from 4th to 5th, and then look at Nos. 414, 416 and 418 South Spring—lot 60x150 to 20-foot alley, and when you come up to see me about the loan, just look into the matter of "BUYING" for a few minutes. I honestly believe that on Monday a man could buy from me this lot at a bigger bargain that he could get anywhere else in Los Angeles. If I feel then as I do while writing this ad. I'll sell it to you at $5200 per foot, but this ad. is public notice to every one to whom I've offered it this week that I hereby withdraw it fro mthe market, to be held at my hourly "whim." If I want to take $5200 for it, if you have a buyer, I'll do so, but I now serve notice that I do not bind myself to accept any price. If I owed nothing I'd not think of selling it. If I can even make a satisfactory loan I will improve it, beginning September 1st, when leases expire, with a magnificent latory (p'raps 2) building, and just "watch it grow" for a few years longer. But I'm right now in a humor to sell it—I'm kind o' sick and tired of some of the "features" connected with the borrowing business, and it will probably pay you to talk "buy" to me on Monday instead of lend. I sometimes stay in the same notion 2 days at a time and if you strike me in the humor of selling this lot at $5200 you'll make lots and lots of money on it, and I will—get rid of a nuisance—and probably make some money on my "equity." See?

P.S. No. 3.—Agents and Brokers will please "cut this out." 1

If you want the full list you must get the Southwest Mining News, 5c per copy. Sample copies will be sent free on request. When you are reading this I shall be examining the property of the Mohawk-Herald Leasing & Mines Co., preparatory to erecting a mill for the reduction of the ore which is opened up on the Anaconda claim at White Tank Pass, Gold Park, 29 Palms District, and shall give the stockholders a full report on my return which will be about Tuesday or Wednesday of this week.

Mr. J. W. Bergen will have full charge of my business while I am absent, and I am sure my customers will be fairly treated by him as my representative. No receipts will be honored unless signed by Edward MacDermott or J. W. Bergen. No other person has ever had authority to sign my name. I again advise the purchase of the good leasing stocks, such as SUPPORT A LOCAL INDUSTRY. THE new pavilion at Redondo was saved from damage and destruction on Friday, 28th inst., through having Keystone Fireproof Cement plaster on the exterior and interior walls. Only ten feet distant, the large Casino burned down, yet even with the intense heat and the flames at times licking the walls of the pavilion, not a crack appears on the surface; thus proving, that Keystone Fireproof Cement Plaster on tried merit, has no equal. The Keystone Company requires additional funds to complete its 1000 barrel per day factory in San Francisco; the investment is bona-fide; profits lucrative; management efficient. SNOWSTORM EXTENSION MINE.

The following is an extract from a letter received from Mr. James L. Brice, President of the Snowstorm Extension Mining Company of the Coeur d'Alene District, Idaho, after having visited and examined the property:

"The tunnel is now in a distance of 620 feet, 279 feet of which is on the vein. The tunnel for the last 10 or 12 feet has suddenly entered a very highly mineralized matter, showing more evidence of disruption as usually appears near ore deposits. I have learned that Mr. Greenough of the Snowstorm Mine stated that if we continued our tunnel straight ahead as started we would surely get the Snowstorm vein, and I do not understand how anybody could say otherwise. I got into a car loaded with Snowstorm ore and taking samples of it and comparing them with the matter now appearing in our tunnel, it was found that they are identical. Now this test will at once prove that we have the Snowstorm Vein."

WHIPPLE MOUNTAIN MINE.
SAN BERNARDINO COUNTY, CAL.

Even with the approach of warm weather on the desert at the Needles, the development work on the property of the Whipple Mountain Gold & Copper Mining Co. is being pushed with all possible effort. We have completed the shaft to a depth of 100 feet and the contractor states we are in copper ore. The work thus far completed proves that we have a very reliable and capable contractor, and we have just completed arrangements for continuing the shaft down another 100 feet. We are more sanguine than ever over the prospects of making a great mine of the property being operated by the Whipple Mountain Gold & Copper Mining Company. It is not the intention of the Board of Directors to offer any more of the treasury stock for sale at less than 25c per share.

We handle all Coeur d'Alene stocks and keep in touch with the developments of the different properties. If you are interested in the Coeur d'Alene we should be pleased to have you call and will give you whatever information we may have that will be of interest to you.

STOCK BROKERS BEWARE.
A GANG OF CURBSTONE FAKERS CAUGHT.

Great damage is being done to the legitimate stock business and those who would conduct it on an honest basis, by the operations of a gang of cheap fakers in Los Angeles city.

The honorable broker is to be respected in his business, but there are those without honor, business, tact or ability. Those with sound judgment know that to depreciate the value of an article by voluntarily lowering the price does not assist the seller and eventually tends to destroy the market for same.

During the past few weeks a great deal of stock in bona fide propositions has been offered for sale by some of these fakers in Los Angeles, but when the buyer produces the money and demands the stock, those who have advertised it cannot deliver. This game has been attempted several times, and each time has been traced directly to the same source. During the past week a gentleman whose name can be given, wished to purchase ten thousand shares of Ross Oscillating Pump stock and answered several ads, where stock was advertised much below the market price. He spent four days trying to secure this stock. After having his patience thoroughly exhausted, he determined to round up the gang, and within twenty-four hours discovered that there were eleven so-called brokers implicated in the game. The names of all these men can be given. He finally succeeded in cornering them and found that not one of them could produce a share of stock and when he insisted upon having it they were obliged to admit that they could not produce it.

One of this gang was recently released from a more serious charge by one of the stockholders of the Ross Oscillating Pump Co. for a similar trick.

There are sufficient opportunities for making money in our city without resorting to treachery or dishonesty. It is hard for some men to learn that honesty is the best policy, that murder will out, and that those who deal without honor, will soon find themselves without a job.

This class of dealing is not only very injurious to those who conduct an honorable broker business, but also depreciates the value of property of real merit in which people have placed their confidence and money. We trust the public interested in these things will have good judgment enough to depend upon the real value of the proposition in which they are interested rather than be influenced by the operations of these disreputable fakers.

PENN-WYOMING COPPER SMELTER.
The last of the material for the steel-concrete building will be on the ground within 17 days and by August 15 the whole plant will be in operation to pay October dividend; just before the fire the company was making daily 75 pigs of copper averaging 168 pounds each.

OR $3000 EARNED PER DAY.
By August 15 the railroad will be completed and cut off at least 30 per cent. of expense of the long wagon haul, or $150 per day; it costs only 6½ cents to make a pound of copper; it sells for 22 cents.

PENN-WYOMING COPPER IS A GOOD BUY.

"OPERATION, CARE AND REPAIR OF AUTOMOBILES." The book that tells the automobilist all he needs to know about his machine; tells how to locate troubles, and what to do when trouble comes; will save the car owner many dollars in repair bills each season. Without question the most useful and the only absolutely reliable book of the kind ever published.

Chapters on Ignition, Carburation, Lubrication, Tires, Inspection, Care and Use of Cars, Garaging, Washing and Shipping of Cars, Repair Suggestions and Winter Use of the Automobile. Each chapter a complete treatise on the subject, and any one of the eight worth alone the price of the book. Compiled and edited by Albert L. Clough, and published by the oldest automobile paper in the English language. 250 fully illustrated octavo pages, with a comprehensive index, substantially bound in cloth. By mail, postpaid, $1.10. HORSELESS AGE, 15 Murray st., N. Y., or LOS ANGELES NEWS CO., Los Angeles, Cal.

ROYALTY WATCHES MISS SUTTON WIN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] At Wimbledon today Miss May Sutton of California had the satisfaction of obtaining a most brilliant victory when, before the Prince and Princess of Wales, and four thousand spectators, she defeated Miss Morton with the loss of only two games in fourteen, thus entering the fourth round for the ladies' championship.

While her English opponent gave evident traces of nervousness under an exceptionally trying ordeal, the American girl showed marvelous self-confidence and in the first set she won ace after ace and did not forfeit a single game.

In the second bout Miss Morton made a brief but ineffectual rally, and succeeded in obtaining two games, but the end of Miss Sutton's victory was in sight, and she won almost as she pleased by a score of 6-0, 6-2.

During the match the Prince of Wales informed one of the committee of the All-England Club that he had long wanted to find an opportunity to see Miss Sutton on the courts, as he had frequently seen her photograph, and was conscious of her interesting personality and wonderful playing ability.

The Prince was disappointed that the match was so one-sided, and said that he would liked to have seen an English girl play Miss Sutton on more lively terms, and with a closer result.

The Princess greatly admired the Californian's pertinacity and marveled at the zest and vigor she displayed for one of her age.

Subsequently, the Prince and Princess witnessed a match in the second round of the doubles championship between Beals C. Wright and Karl Behr of America and H. W. Goss and Robert Borrete, which aroused the keenest interest.

Heavy black clouds were gathering overhead and the light was bad. The Americans led at 4-3 and again at 6-6, but though they showed much daring and brilliancy, they were not consistently sound and missed several strokes at the net.

Before leaving, the heir apparent expressed the hope that England would successfully defend the Davis Cup, but he was quite ready to believe that the country had a powerful and pushful antagonist in America.

FRANK GILL TAKES STAKES.

Rank Outsider Beats ePter Pan, Philander, Montgomery and Other Cracks.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, June 29.—J. L. McGinnis's Frank Gill, running in his best form, and practically unbacked, scored a big victory over Peter Pan, the recognized champion of the year, and Philander, in the Coney Island Jockey Club stakes at Sheepshead Bay today. This race is a new fixture with a guaranteed cash value of $25,000 for 3-year-olds, over a one and one-half-mile course. The defeat of Peter Pan and Philander was a great surprise to the public, who had backed both horses heavily, but neither finished in the money. Summary:

Steeplechase, short course: Delcanta won, Bell Ager second, Hot Shot third; time, 1:49 2-5.

The Sporting Stakes, six and a half furlongs: Shotgun won, Ontario second, Ed Ball third; time, 1:22 2-5.

The Great Trial Stakes, $15,000, six furlongs: Colin won, Meelick second, Monopolist third; time, 1:12 2-5.

The Coney Island Jockey Club Stakes, mile and a half, $25,000: Frank Gill won, Montgomery second, Salvidere third; time, 2:33 1-5.

Mile: Herodotus won, Golf Ball second, Smiling Tom third; time, 1:42 1-5.

One and three-sixteenths miles, on turf: Lancastrian won, Angler second, Flimnap third; time, 2:04 2-5.

AUTOS ENTER FOR GLIDDEN TROPHY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Up to Friday night eight automobiles had been formally entered in the Glidden tour, and a score of others had been promised before the closing of the list with F. B. Hower, chairman of the touring board of the A.A.A. at Buffalo, on Wednesday noon.

The latest change in the rules was made at a meeting of the touring board in Buffalo on Thursday. In response to the petition of several entrants, who thought the rules were too favorable to clubs having teams of large size, the progressive scale used in awarding the total number of points with which the teams will start has been abolished. Instead of a team of three cars having 1000 points at the outset and a team of ten having 1280 points to lose, all teams will start with 1000 points to their credit.

The system of penalization remains unchanged, so that a team of three cars loses one-third of a point for each minute late at controls; a team of six cars loses one-sixth of a point; a team of ten cars one-tenth of a point, and so on.

ENGLAND'S IDEA.

NEW YORK, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Leading critics are watching with interest the playing of Beals C. Wright and Karl H. Behr, the American Davis Cup team, at the All-England championship now under way on the historic Wimbledon courts.

Condition will play an important part in the coming international matches. Behr has never played in England before and the climate will undoubtedly affect him more than Wright, even if he does not play up to his form shown on this side. This is attributed by the English expert, H. L. Doherty, to the method of training in vogue among the visiting American players.

"Where the American players who come to England make their great mistake, in my opinion," he said recently, "is in overtraining themselves. They go in for too serious training before the matches. They consequently are stale before they have got half way through the tournament. Perhaps the English climate may affect them, but even if it does, they help it by changing their mode of living. I believe in living temperately, and while never drinking much wine, I always have a little with my meals and do not touch it at any other time. When American players come over here they give up wine and all other stimulants.

"Now, lawn tennis is such an exhausting game that I think a man needs a stimulant and I am sure American players handicap themselves by sticking to their mineral water and cold-water methods."

BREAKS RECORDS IN MANY EVENTS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] S. F. Edge, the Napier automobilist, has broken all world's records in driving his sixty-horse-power Napier, six-cylinder car on the new Brookland cement motor track. At the end of twenty-four hours of speeding, Mr. Edge's record was 1581 miles, 1310 yards.

Edge obtained permission to use the new speeding track, and asked for official timers and judges in his attempt to maintain a speed of sixty miles an hour for a day of twenty-four hours. He covered 1000 miles in 14 hours 54 minutes and 15 seconds.

MAY SUTTON HAS EASY VICTORY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

LONDON, June 29.—May Sutton of California, in the All-England lawn-tennis championship games at Wimbledon today beat Miss Morton, 6-0, 6-2. Miss Sutton played a faultless game and did not give her opponent a chance.

The Prince and Princess of Wales were present. The Princess frequently applauded the brilliant strokes of the American player. Miss Sutton has decided to go to Canada and compete in the championships there at the conclusion of her visit to England.

WOMAN FALLS FROM CAR.

Miss Anna Buxton of Orange street was seriously injured late last night by falling from an east-bound Washington-street car, near the Polytechnic High School building. The accident was caused by the burning out of the fuses in the controller box of the car, which sent out a blinding flash. Miss Buxton jumped at the deafening report which accompanied the explosion, and fell heavily to the pavement of the street. The car was traveling at a lively speed, and the victim suffered a severe concussion of the brain, as well as internal injuries. An ambulance was called, and she was sent to the home of her cousin, Dr. Edmonston, on West Twentieth street.

COWLEY NOT IN COURT.

A. W. Cowley, who was arrested on a Coroner's warrant on a charge of manslaughter, has not yet been called to the Police Court to enter a plea. Cowley is the motorman who was held criminally responsible by the Coroner's jury for the death of Arthur Jacobson.

While Mrs. A. G. McPherson was cleaning a pair of gloves with gasoline, last night, at her home, No. 2012½ Downey avenue, the fluid exploded and set fire to her clothing. She escaped, however, with slight burns on her hands.

STEALS IN OFFICER'S PRESENCE.

Albert King, a laborer, attempted to steal a suitcase from in front of No. 365 East First street, last night, while a policeman was standing a few feet away. King was captured and the property recovered.

JUNIOR FRENZY MAKES IT HUM.

California Endeavorers' Lively Session.

Little Tots Entertain the Grown-up Folks.

Many Services Scheduled for Today.

TODAY'S EVENTS.

- 7 a.m.—Quiet hour service.
- 9 a.m.—Convention Sunday-school.
- 11 a.m.—Services in Long Beach churches.
- 3 p.m.—Mass meeting; address by Rev. R. A. Hadden; Junior mass meeting, Plymouth Congregational Church; intermediate mass meeting, First Presbyterian Church, address by Dr. John Willis Baer.
- 4:30 p.m.—Wharf meetings at San Pedro.
- 5:30 p.m.—Open air meeting on Long Beach pier.
- 6 p.m.—Meeting for delegates only.
- 7:30 p.m.—Address by Dr. William Horace Day.

Yesterday was junior day at the State Endeavor convention, in session at Long Beach, and, if the watchword was "enthusiasm," at the opening of the convention on the previous night, it might be said that it was "frenzy" yesterday afternoon.

The Juniors began way down, "just so high," and ended with the intermediates, running to 16 years of age. They made things pretty lively around the auditorium while waiting for entrance, but if Endeavor means anything, it means the growing of these boys and girls in line with Christian thought and purpose.

A very large audience of grown-ups and Intermediates filled the main portion of the auditorium, while the Juniors occupied the large bank of chairs behind the desk. They were the chief attraction, and their performances were applauded vociferously.

The programme was in charge of Miss Marbella Austermell, Junior superintendent of Los Angeles county, and many of the little tots were paraded at their best.

An address of welcome was delivered by Master Fay Miner of Long Beach, who is a mature urchin of about 9 years; and Frances Covert and Bernice Kennedy, even younger, sang a pretty little duet. The trio of youngsters created a lot of enthusiasm for their cuteness.

Ruth Best of this city, a larger girl, sang in splendid voice and with fine effect, the well-known sacred song, "Face to Face."

There were songs and readings and drills by representative delegations from various societies, and the entire afternoon was a most entertaining one.

At the close of the junior session, the quarter-centennial memorial address was delivered by J. E. White, ex-State president, of San Francisco.

Last night, the first of the open-air meetings were held on the pier and streets, conducted by delegates of Endeavorers, and the great auditorium was crowded for the night meeting. There were two set addresses, Rev. H. H. McQuilkin of San José speaking from the topic: "Saving Souls—Our Boys and Girls;" while Rev. T. C. Horton of this city spoke on "Conversational Evangelism."

REPORTS AND COMMITTEES.

At the morning session yesterday President Brown announced the committees upon which will devolve the important business of the convention, as follows:

Nominating Committee — Leonard Merrill, Los Angeles; R. R. Paterson, Berkeley; Grey Skidmore, Los Angeles; Miss Lucie Ward, San Francisco; Miss Lenore Butler, San Diego; Miss Harriet Butler, Bakersfield; Rev. A. F. Mitchell, Long Beach.

Resolutions—J. O. Smith, Los Angeles; H. L. Brown, Stockton; W. N. Jenkins, Oakland; Mrs. Redman, Watsonville; J. E. Coulthurst, San Diego.

Place of meeting, 1908—W. P. Shepherd, Riverside; Dr. A. S. Kelly, Oakland; George S. Flagg, San Diego; M. R. Bergen, Santa Barbara; J. E. Duff, Oleander.

Business—E. McKinley, Diamond; W. G. Alexander, San José; E. S. Barr, San Diego.

Auditing—R. E. Small, Los Angeles; Harry Willett, San Luis Obispo; C. M. Faunce, Sacramento.

The roll of county and city unions was called, prior to adjournment of the morning session, and responses were made by each, sometimes through a spokesman, and often by the whole delegation rising and singing a stanza, reciting a passage of scripture or something specially prepared to suit the occasion. There was a constant rattle of applause during the reception of these reports.

An analysis of the registration lists shows some interesting facts. There were present up to last night, 2160 delegates, of which 343 came from the northern counties and 697 from Southern California, outside the city of Los Angeles, leaving 1090 to the city. Delegates are also registered from thirty States, Canada, Mexico, Japan and Ireland.

Sacramento is on the ground with sixty delegates, asking for the convention next year, and will probably get it. A telegram was read from Mayor Pierce of Sacramento, seconding the invitation of the delegates.

Today will undoubtedly be the biggest day of the convention, which will not close until Wednesday evening. It is expected that at least 500 more Endeavorers will register today and secure the coveted badges.

Everybody is delighted with the skillful manner in which the Long Beach Endeavorers have taken hold of the convention, and they will, of course, carry it through at the same pace.

WELSH TO MAKE MERRY.

Dr. E. Jenkins and D. Breeze, of the Committee of Arrangements, announce that an interesting programme has been prepared for the picnic of the Welsh-Americans of Southern California at Farmdale, on July 4. Three thousand persons are expected to be present. There will be sports in the early part of the afternoon, and, at 4 o'clock, Trevor Jones of Chicago, Maj. Powell, and others, will deliver addresses, and Prof. Jones of Pasadena will sing.

TWICE DECORATED.

Dr. Adkinson Receives His Degree Simultaneously from University and College—Brief Notes.

Rev. A. W. Adkinson, the earnest presiding elder of the Los Angeles district of the Methodist church, is to be congratulated upon having received the degree of "D.D." from both his alma maters at almost the same time. De Pau University, from which he graduated, and Hillsdale College, at which he was a student, both decorated him with the honor at the close of the last semester of their respective institutions.

Dr. Adkinson will preach this evening at the new Methodist church, Vernon and Vermont avenues, and the congregation will be organized at its first quarterly meeting on July 5.

Dr. David Beaton of the University of Chicago, will deliver a series of six free lectures in the First Congregational Church, on "The Relation of the Bible to Modern Life." They will be delivered tomorrow (Sunday,) Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, at 7:45, and on Monday and Tuesday afternoons at 4 o'clock.

O. P. Boyer of Nyack, N. Y., will speak at Union Rescue Mission tonight. Street meeting at First and Los Angeles at 3:30 and at First and Main at 5 o'clock.

Evangelist Ed Smith will preach every night at Penial Hall, for the next ten days, except on Monday night, when Rev. Charles Weigel will speak. Miss Zimmer of Guatemala will speak at the all-day missionary meeting on Monday.

WATER TANGLE GOING HIGHER.

BOTH SIDES IN IMPERIAL CASE FIGHTING TO FINISH.

Early Decision of United States District Court Expected in Million-Dollar Suit of California Development Company to Restrain the Sale of Certain Stocks.

Counsel retained in the million-dollar suit of the California Development Company against Imperial Water Company No. 5 are eagerly awaiting the decision of Judge Wellborn of the United States District Court, on petition of the complainant to restrain the defendant from selling any stock during the pendency of the action.

On an order to show cause why the motion should not be granted, the entire case was reopened last week, and counsel for complainant and defendant made lengthy oral arguments. They also submitted briefs. This side issue to the main question is considered important, as the defendant water company is struggling for existence apart from the parent concern, the California Development Company.

It was argued that the water company would be placed in a very embarrassing position if it could not issue stock to settlers. On the other hand, the complainant contends that the defendant has no right to dispose of unissued stock until the final decision is reached.

The case was instituted by the California Development Company to secure the cancellation of a contract made by its former president with the Imperial Water Company No. 5. It alleged the contract was made without the authority of the stockholders and directors, who repudiated it as soon as it was learned such a contract had been drawn up.

The present action pending in the United States District Court grew out of the methods employed for securing water for the great Imperial Valley. The California Development Company purchased the stock of La Sociedad de Yrrigacion y Terrenos de la Baja California, and the stockholders entered into a certain agreement.

As it was physically impossible to carry water into the Imperial Valley except through Mexico, it was thought advisable that the water should be delivered by a Mexican company.

The Imperial Water Company No. 5 originally made a contract with the Mexican company, whereby it agreed to pay rental for the use of the water and, in turn, was to issue all of its capital stock to the Mexican company. All these rights to stock the Mexican company assigned to the California Development Company. There was apparently no ground for litigation until the contract was made by the late A. H. Heber, then president of the California Development Company, in which he agreed to waive all rights to 65,000 unissued shares of stock of an estimated value of $1,300,000. In turn, the water company agreed to give up any claim upon the development company for the maintenance and extension of canals and laterals.

It was this action on the part of its president that precipitated the action in the Federal Court against the water company. The complainant claimed the action of its president was unauthorized, and it seeks to have the contract declared null and void.

The defendant put in evidence a document, which gave the president authority to sell the property of the California Development Company and to have full authority to make contracts in the name of the company. The development company, on the other hand, asserts this special authority was given to its president in order that he might sell the entire property to the United States government. Negotiations were pending for some time, and President Heber went to Washington to make the deal. It finally fell through, but the defense contends that Heber continued to have the authority to sell or make contracts for the sale of the property of his company.

This so-called "Heber contract" formed the basis for the suit which will be fought out in the United States courts. Whichever side is decided against in the United States District Court will doubtless appeal to the higher courts, and litigation long and expensive is promised.

GIFT OF BENNINGTON'S FLAG.

Comrade Presents It to Camp Roosevelt Which Recognizes Honor in Eloquent Testimonial.

Camp Roosevelt, No. 9, United Spanish War Veterans, is the possessor of the flag, which floated at the masthead of the U.S.S. Bennington on the morning of the disaster in San Diego Harbor. This flag was presented to the camp by Comrade Garbish, who has an enviable record as a sailor, and who wears a medal of honor in recognition of gallant service in the war with Spain, and of unselfish devotion to duty on the day the Bennington was blown up.

In recognition of the gift of the flag, Roosevelt Camp has prepared a testimonial for the giver, which reads, in part:

"We are unable to express in words the feelings of our hearts, but the presence of that glorious flag in our camp will forever inspire us to higher patriotism and deeper love for our country.

"When, in the quiet waters of San Diego Bay, the mailed hand of fate struck the Bennington that merciless blow, and she sank beneath the waves, the mourning of our people was tempered with something akin to pride, when they heard of the unselfish heroism of the survivors. Death was there in many a hideous form, still out of the stifling smoke and scalding steam, the manhood, the spirit, the soul of the nation, incarnate in her defenders, arose and wrote on fame's undying roll the names of those who died and those who lived."

VETERANS WILL CELEBRATE.

Soldiers of Spanish-American War to Have Special Exercises at Long Beach on Fourth.

The past week has been a banner one for the United Spanish War Veterans in Los Angeles county, for in that period more than 100 have been mustered into the various camps, and Ensign Bagley Camp at Pasadena has been established, with a membership of fifty.

A general reunion of Spanish War Veterans will take place at the Fourth of July celebration at Long Beach this week, when patriotic exercises will be held at the Auditorium. Capt. J. D. Fredericks will be orator of the day.

McKinley Camp of Long Beach will be the host, and almost the full strength of Camps Roosevelt of this city, McArthur of Ocean Park, and other points will be present. Athletic events, automobile races and fireworks will be features of the day's celebration, under the auspices of the Spanish War Veterans.

Handsome souvenir badges, an American flag and walking cane, will be given to every member attending. The Roosevelt Camp Ladies' Auxiliary will attend in a body. There will be a parade of the veterans, starting promptly at 10:30 o'clock.

GUSHER STRUCK AT SUMMERLAND.

OIL SPOUTS HIGH INTO AIR AND POURS INTO OCEAN.

Workmen Stop Flow by Directing Stream of Water Into Hole—Later, Large Tank Is Filled in Short Time. Well Only Four Hundred Feet Deep.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A gusher was struck in the oil field at Summerland yesterday. It is reported that men working the sand pumping rig on well No. 21 on the Southern Pacific wharf encountered a flow of oil that spouted high in the air and fairly drenched the derrick. In an hour many barrels of oil had flowed from the well into the ocean. The flow was stopped by the workmen, who directed a stream of water into the hole.

Yesterday, it was reported that the water had been pumped out and that again the oil gushed. It was caught this time in a large tank. This it filled in a very short time, and again the well was stopped with water to prevent waste.

This well was drilled several months ago as a final test well and is only 404 feet deep. The perforations were made at 320 feet. After drilling was completed and before the sand pump had been put to work, the shifting sand caused the casing to buckle. A smaller string of casing was put down and it was in that the bailer was working last Saturday.

The news is extremely important as it confirms the opinion of many that a big body of oil is liable to be encountered in Summerland at any time by the company that has the courage to go deeper than two or three hundred feet.

UNIONITES HISS FLAG.

National Emblem Is Insulted, and Socialists Are Lauded at Laborite Meeting.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Gross insults were offered to the American flag by a riotous gang of members of the Industrial Workers of the World here last night.

At an open meeting of the local labor body, Organizer Grant W. Hamilton, of the American Federation of Labor, discussed labor conditions in Goldfield. The disturbers came early and secured seats together. They loudly applauded mention of Debs, Haywood and others, and when the speaker mentioned the fact that the American flag was conspicuous by its absence to the celebration of "Bloody Sunday" in Goldfield, the hoodlums broke into loud applause.

One of them left the hall shouting "We don't want any American flag, anyway."

More than half the audience was on its feet in an instant and but for the immediathe control of the crowd by the speaker a serious riot would undoubtedly have resulted.

An unprovoked murder in the cause of labor at Goldfield was also vociferously applauded.

NEW CANAL IS INSPECTED.

Secretary Garfield and Large Party of Department Officials Visit Northwestern States.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HELENA (Mont.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Secretary of the Interior James Rudolph Garfield, accompanied by Gifford Pinchot and a large party of department officials, arrived in Williston, N. D., today, after having gone over the new canal now being built by the government between Glendive, Mont., and Buford, N. D., which will reclaim an area larger even than that of the Huntley project, just thrown open to settlement.

Secretary Garfield, was also accompanied by Senators Thomas H. Carter and Joseph M. Dixon of this State, and they were this evening extended a public reception. They will leave Sunday for Helena, arriving here Tuesday morning, where the Secretary will deliver an address on the anniversary of the assassination of his father by Guiteau. He will deliver an oration at Missoula, July 4.

MANY HEAR BAILEY.

DALLAS (Tex.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The crowd that heard United States Senator Bailey at Grand Prairie this afternoon was estimated at from 10,000 to 12,000. His audience was in strong sympathy with him, and cheered him vigorously.

Senator Bailey paid only passing notice to his political enemies and ignored entirely the recent anti-Bailey banquet at Dallas. He indorsed in a general way the reform tax measures of Gov. Campbell's administration, and expressed the hope that they may be further preferred in the interest of equal taxation for all the people.

CHINESE WOMAN ASSAULTED.

Chew Lung was arrested in Chinatown last night. According to the police he assaulted Sue Lim, a woman. It is also stated that he stole $200 from her.

JUDGE LOVING IS ACQUITTED.

Unwritten Law Plea Saves Him from Gallows.

Jury Takes Only Short Time to Reach Verdict.

Finding Is Applauded by the Crowd in Court.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HOUSTON (Va.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The jury in the case of Judge William G. Loving, tried here for the murder of Theodore Estes, returned a verdict of not guilty at 4:50 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The jury was out only a few minutes. The finding was applauded by the crowd which filled the courtroom.

Judge Loving's defense was the "unwritten law," based upon the claim that his victim had drugged and abused his daughter, Elizabeth. The young woman supported this plea from the witness stand, relating how Estes while taking her on a buggy drive, had given her whisky, which affected her as if drugged. She was discovered to be intoxicated after Estes had left her at the home of a relative. This kinsman reported the fact to Judge Loving.

The father waited until his daughter returned home the following morning and when, on her knees she told him the story, he took his shotgun, drove to Lovington and that afternoon shot Estes while the youth was engaged in his regular business pursuit.

The defendant is the personal representative of Thomas E. Ryan in the management of the New York millionaire's vast Virginia estate and has occupied the circuit bench in Virginia.

Judge Barksdale thanked the jurors and said he believed that the verdict was in accordance with their conscience. After the jurors had been excused, Judge Loving, his wife and other relatives shook hands and thanked each juror for the verdict. Tears streamed from the eyes of both the defendant and his wife. Judge Loving was surrounded by many of his friends, and there was no hostile demonstration.

Foreman McGraw is a merchant and farmer. He said that when the jurors retired, one of them did not understand all of the instructions of the court, which were read to them. McGraw said he then called for the vote, instructing all who favored the acquittal of the defendant to hold up their right hands. Every hand promptly went up. When asked what the basis of the verdict was, he said "insanity," due to the mental stress which had been brought on by the story told the judge by his daughter.

The following statement was given out tonight by counsel for Judge Loving:

"Withing half an hour after the rendition of the verdict by the jury and the adjournment of court, counsel for Judge Loving were called on by two of the jury, who stated that they had been appointed a committee representing the entire jury to convey to Judge Loving and his wife and daughter the information that, while they believed that Miss Loving's statement on the witness stand of what she had told her father was a true statement of what she had communicated to him, yet not for a moment did the jury entertain the opinion that an actual assault had been committed by the deceased upon the young lady, but, on the contrary, they were fully satisfied that no actual assault had been committed, but that there had been an attempted assault. Counsel for Judge Loving, on being interviewed in this connection, said:

"The conclusion of the jury that no assault was committed was absolutely correct."

SHOOTS AT JUDGE; GIRL FINED.

Jury Finds Maid Who Tried to Kill Jurist Who Decided Case Against Her, Guilty.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After a deliberation of two hours, the jury in the case of Rosa and Clara Weil, on trial in the Twelfth Division Criminal Court today, on the charge of assault to kill, Circuit Judge Jesse A. McDonald found Rosa Weil guilty of assault without malice, and fined her $100. Clara Weil was acquitted.

They were charged jointly with an assault to kill Judge McDonald, as he sat on the bench on January 2 last. The girls were said to have been dissatisfied with a decision of Judge McDonald regarding the division of their father's estate, and Rosa admitted that on January 2 they entered the courtroom, and she fired a revolver at him. Their defense was that they were then emotionally insane.

Judge McDonald, when on the stand today, declared he saw nothing abnormal about the statements or conduct of either of the sisters. Both girls are pretty and have been socially prominent in St. Louis. Their mother is living.

CRIME BRIEFS.

Insurance Men Indicted.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Indictments charging conspiracy and forgery against George R. Scrugham, manager of the International Policy Holders' Committee, and Charles F. Stirrup, an employé, and one of conspiracy against Charles Harrington, another employé, have been returned by the county grand jury. The charges grew out of the recent election of trustees of the New York Life Insurance Company.

Insurance Head Arrested.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 28.—James V. Barnes, former president of the Title Insurance Trust Company of this city, now defunct, was arrested Thursday night on a bench warrant charging him with embezzlement. There is a shortage of over $150,000 on the cashier's books.

Sewell, such high testimony to the of concrete to withstand shocks, it is pointed out construction going on at the time in San Francisco is ex- faulty. re of New Experiment.

y sphere in which there is riment in the use of concrete lding material is in the sky- of modern cities. The struc- ancient Greece and Rome were few buildings, all one story. rn buildings of cities like a and Paris are also of but height at most. Buildings stories in height are prac- known. Three or four-story are more within the scope of al rule. Here is where the and builders of modern cities need to pay exceed- attention in the use of con- a building material. Whether ed or plain concrete there is too much theory and too little as to the amount of strain buildings will endure. It is, we entirely in cases of very high in recent times that rein- concrete has failed. It is indis- that a good many builders are up so-called reinforced struc- at the present time which are tionable from the point of danger. There are buildings up in Los Angeles at this mo- where the reinforcement in the is of the most apparently in- dimensions. Some of these reinforced buildings have con- s of very narrow dimensions or two of concrete with a few the size of a whip-stock run- through them, where the walls d with numerous windows, little support between throwing great strain upon the corners, certainly afford room for misgivings as to their endurance, even under ordinary strain. In case of a conflagration or of a severe earthquake shock, it is very doubtful how long these would stand. Fortunately, Los Angeles is far out of the ordinary belt in which severe earthquakes manifest themselves. It is too far east to be touched by the disturbed region about San Francisco Bay, and too far west to be in the line of the seismic disturbances which run along the great backbone of South America, the Andes Mountains, and trend eastward into the West Indian Islands.

Successful Concrete Construction.

That concrete can be handled in such a way as to make it perfectly safe, even in very high structures, has been shown here in Los Angeles. One of the largest operators in concrete construction, Carl Leonardt of this city, has put up buildings which in every way have proved their power to stand all ordinary strain. He has put up monolithic chimneys of immense height, which are apparently as immovable as the hills themselves. At the present time, he is erecting three immense concrete structures in San Diego. The combined cost of these three structures will amount to nearly $2,000,000.

A Structure Unquestioned.

But after all, when it comes to a structure about which there is no question, it is generally conceded by architects and builders that the steel frame, with concrete or tile casing, is the one "to tie to." Those who inspected San Francisco after the fire were profoundly impressed with the resisting power against both earthquake and fire of well-used cement. The old Palace Hotel was a concrete building in the main, and its walls stood the shock of the earthquake like the Rock of Gibraltar, and endured the fire as adamant would not. In other buildings, where the steel frame had been thoroughly well encased in good cement or in hollow earthen tile and floors of hollow tile they stood most admirably both the earthquake and the fire. There seems no question that a well-built steel frame of sufficient massiveness in the plates and pillars used, these thoroughly encased either in hollow tile or any good cement, will endure any test. The steel frame exposed to enormous heat is sure to give way and let the whole edifice fall to the ground. The hollow tile or an abundant supply of well-laid cement protects the steel frame perfectly from the heat, and thus insures the standing of the building.

A Great Chicago Test.

About a year ago the National Fire Proofing Company of Chicago made a test by fire, load and water upon three reinforced concrete columns in that city. These columns were submitted to a temperature of between 1500 and 1600 degrees Fahrenheit and kept under that test for as long as five hours. After this, water was applied to the columns. This developed some barely perceptible longitudinal cracks, but otherwise was of no effect. In the load test, loads ranging as high as 167 tons were applied to the columns. A column under 1500 to 1600 degrees Fahrenheit for three hours loses 72 per cent. of its original load-carrying strength. A column protected by a three-inch porous terra cotta tile submitted to a temperature of 1500 to 1600 degrees Fahrenheit lost none of its original strength. Tests like these are exceedingly valuable. They seem to establish the fact that where a reinforced concrete column is protected by hollow tile, it will not only bear any ordinary weight ever likely to be placed upon it, but may be subjected to an enormous heat for a period of several hours without losing any of its load-carrying strength.

Important to Southern California.

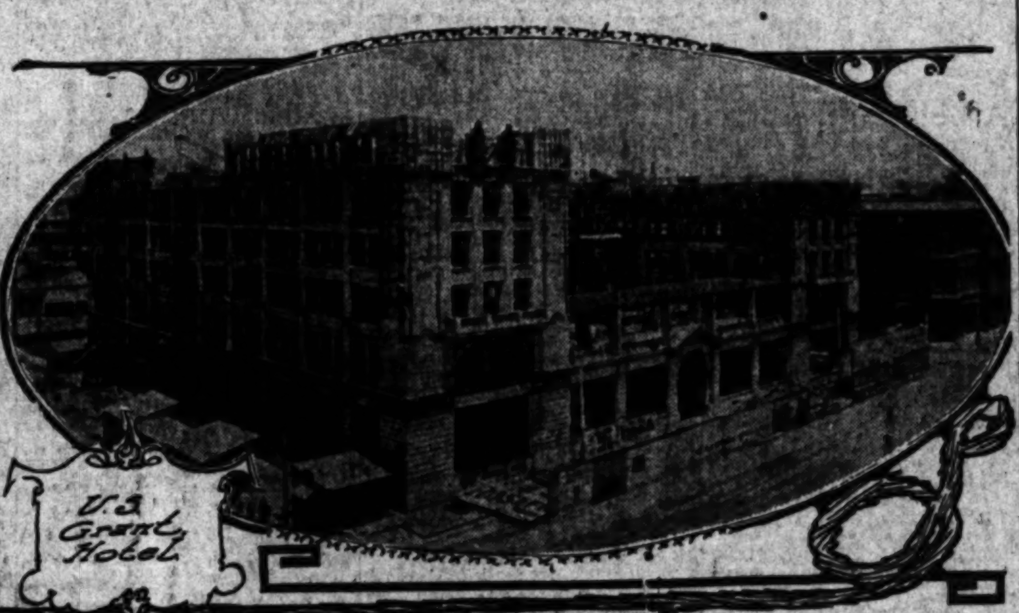
These studies are of particular importance to Southern California. We have in this district vast deposits of fine building stone and material for cement. From this time on, we will see fewer fine homes constructed of wood in Southern California, and more constructed of concrete, or brick covered with concrete. The hollow tile seems to be coming very greatly into favor as a building material. Whatever the architects of San Francisco may be leaving undone in the way of successful artistic ornamentation in concrete structures, the Los Angeles architects are very skillful in bringing out the most pleasing artistic effects in the use of this material. In the case of business structures, of course wood is a thing of the past. Brick or concrete, with hollow terra cotta for walls and floors and tiles for roofing, will become more and more commonly used in all Southern California cities and towns. In the skyscrapers of the big cities steel frame buildings will probably take the lead, but the frame will be encased in either an abundant coat of good cement, well laid on, or probably more likely in hollow tiles. The Chicago experiment referred to above fixes the value of this material as a protective against intense heat.

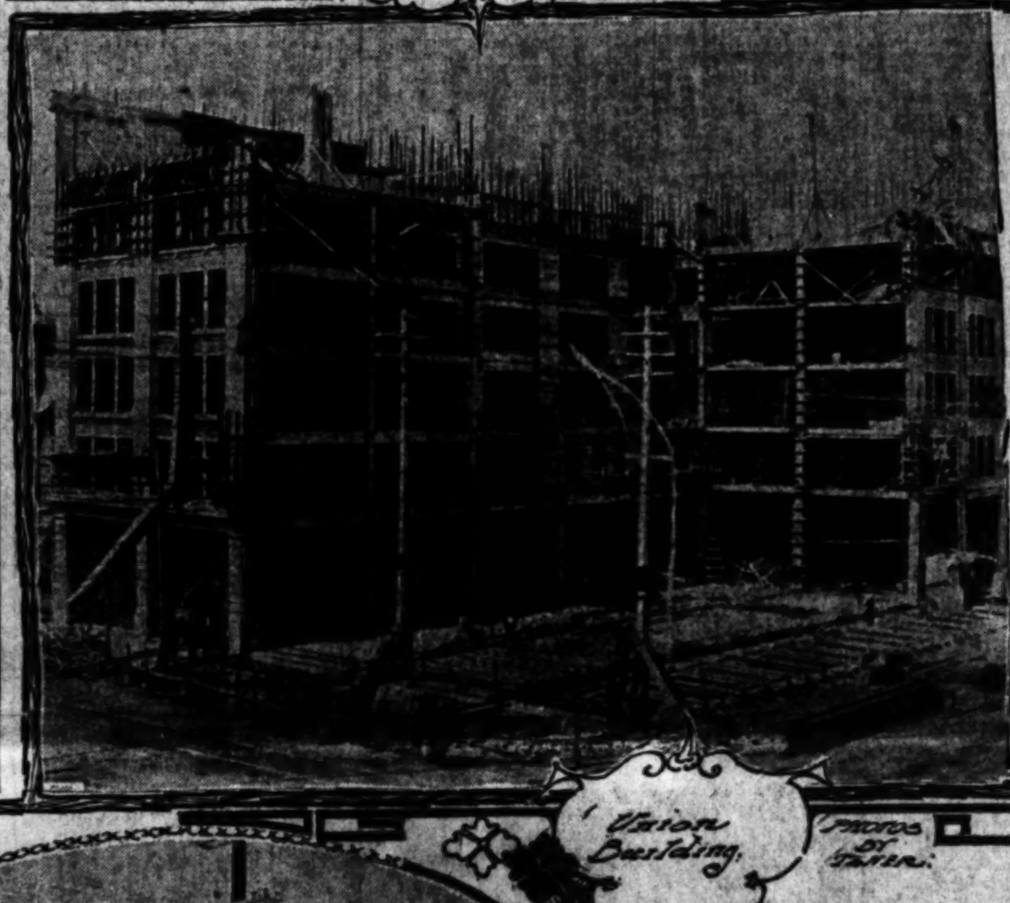
TWO BROADWAY LEASES.

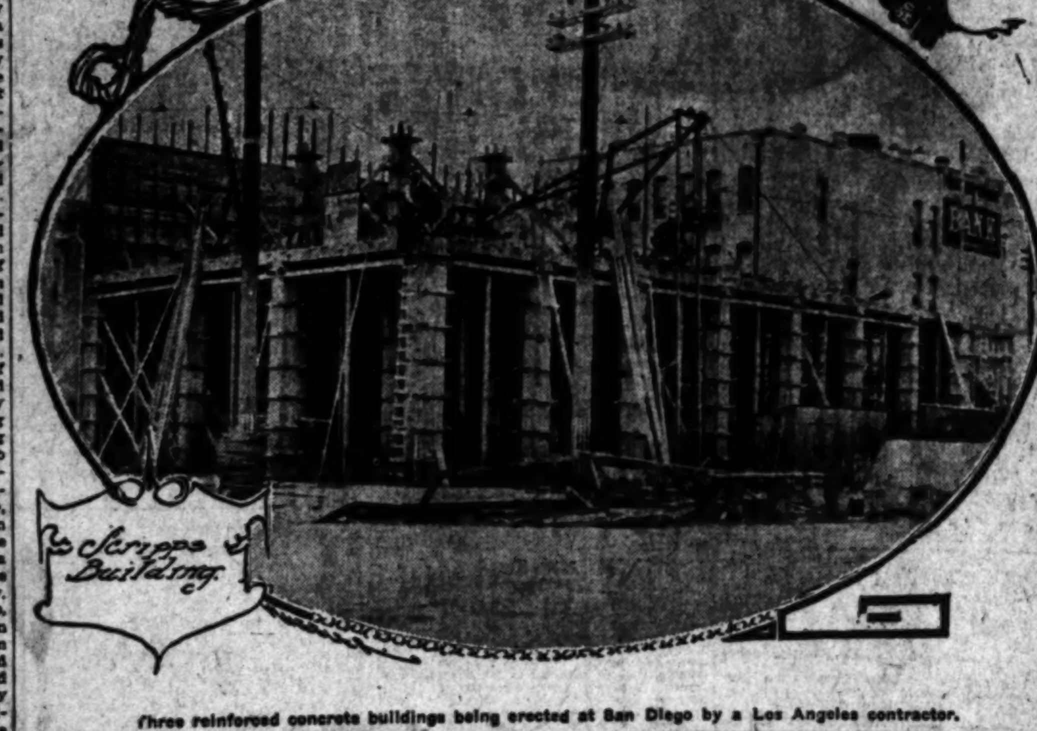
High Rent Paid for Choice Locations on Business Street—Each Is for Ten Years.

Two important Broadway leases were reported from the office of R. A. Rowan & Co., last week. The property owned by the Broadway Company at Nos. 343-45-47 South Broadway, now occupied by the Mackie-Fredericks Furniture Company has been leased by Fowler Brothers, for a term of ten years at the rate of $36,000 per year, or $360,000 for the term. The lessees expect to occupy three floors and part of the basement of the four-story structure, and may sublet the remainder.

The other lease is that taken out by Miss Terrill and Miss Swobdi, on the property on the west side of Broadway between Seventh and Eighth streets, consisting of a four-story, basement building. The lessees will occupy two floors, as a millinery and dress making establishment. The rate was $1500 a month, and as this lease also is for ten years the total rental will be $180,000 for the term.







Three reinforced concrete buildings being erected at San Diego by a Los Angeles contractor.

ONTARIO REALTY MOVEMENTS.

Considerable Activity Reported from Foothill Town—Houses and Lots Sell.

Kennedy & Wright report the following recent sales of realty in Ontario: L. Carpenter has sold his property on Vine avenue, between main and A streets, consisting of a lot 48x177 feet, improved with modern bungalow, to B. D. Gibbs of Cucamonga, for $1800.

Dr. Oakley has sold three lots, each 48x177 feet, on East A street, to J. B. Gaylord and C. P. Talbert, for $1600.

Q. W. Stone has sold one lot on Vine avenue, 48x177 feet, to L. Carpenter, for $475.

M. Caloway has bought of G. W. Patterson one lot improved with cottage, on the South Side tract for the stated consideration of $475.

George T. Barr has purchased of Mrs. W. Freeman, the east part of a two and a half-acre tract, situated on West Eighth street, for a stated consideration of $1100.

MODERN WAY IN OLD SAN DIEGO.

HUGH REINFORCED CONCRETE BUILDINGS RISING.

Los Angeles Architects and Contractors Do Work—U. S. Grant Hotel, Spreckels and Union Buildings, All Fire Proof, Will Cost Million and Quarter.

Illustrations on this page show three of the huge reinforced concrete buildings now under construction in San Diego. They are the U. S. Grant Hotel, costing $750,000; the Spreckles, or Union Building, estimated to be costing a quarter of a million, and the Scripps Building, which is said to be costing about $100,000. Harrison Albright of this city and Charleston, S. C., is the architect of the two first named. The latter is designed by E. C. Kennedy. All are being erected by Carl Leonardt, one of the best known contractors in Los Angeles, and, in fact, in Southern California.

The U. S. Grant Hotel is an enormous building. It is nine stories high in the central portion, with four wings each seven stories in height extending from the cenral part, the building being constructed in the form of a letter "H." It is 200 feet square. Between the wings, at the height of the second floor is a palm garden 100 feet square with a large fountain in front. The building is located on D street and extends from Third street to Fourth street, facing the city park or plaza, San Diego. It occupies the site of the Old Horton House. Several descriptions of the building have appeared in The Times, and it is needless to repeat all the details of the construction. The building will be absolutely fireproof, being of reinforced concrete throughout, of Heidleberg cement, shipped from the old German town, by way of the Cape of Good Hope in special freighters. It will be one of the most completely furnished hotels on the Pacific Coast when completed. There will 412 bedrooms in the structure.

The Union Building is being erected on a lot 85x160 feet, diagonally opposit from the corner occupied by the Hotel building. As the photograph shows, the building not only occupies the site of the old Union Building, but also a considerable area in addition. The latter was retained in its place as long as possible, while the L-shaped structure was being erected around it. When this was nearly completed the old building was demolished, and work has been begun on the corner, the picture showing construction work as it appeared nearly two weeks ago. It is six stories high and contains quarters for the various Spreckles companies, in addition to the plant of the San Diego Union, and the Tribune, as well as having the top floor occupied by the Cuyamacca Club.

The Scripps Building will be a six-story store and offiice building. It is being erected for Fred T. Scripps, on a lot 50x100 feet. It is entirely of reinforced concrete.

HOLLYWOOD HOMES BOUGHT.

Corner of Western and Franklin Avenues Sold for Twelve Thousand.

The Horace G. Hamilton Company reports the following transfers: P. E. Lindholm to T. D. Benjamin, a ten-room residence in Hollywood, at the corner of Western and Franklin streets, lot 100x170, for $12,000.

E. D. Taylor to Robert McDougal, an eight-room residence at No. 328 West avenue Fifty-nine, lot 50x150, for $7500.

Mrs. Anna Siebert to Miss Alice J. Peck, five lots in Glenvilla tract at Hymes, improved with an eight-room residence, for $2500.

Alice J. Peck to Mrs. Anna Sievert, a lot 55x155 feet, improved with a seven-room residence at No. 2914 Baldwin avenue, for $3500.

Harriette B. Goodman to C. T. Webner, a lot at Playa del Rey, for $3000; E. A. Daman to Mary Butler, a lot in Plummer Place, Hollywood, 55x135 feet, for $1150.

George A. Sarles to Horace G. Hamilton, lot 40x135, in Walnut Park, improved with a six-room bungalow, $3500.

George A. Sarles to Horace G. Hamilton, two lots at Dolgeville, improved with a modern four-room residence, $2500.

PASADENA DWELLING BOUGHT.

Joseph Deiderich has bought of William F. West, a lot 120x500 feet, improved with a ten-room house, No. 545 East Villa street, Pasadena. Mr. Deiderich will improve and remodel the property. The price is reported as being $10,000.

ACTIVITY AMONG ORANGE GROVES.

COUNTRY PROPERTY REPORTED MUCH IN DEMAND.

Four Hundred Acres at Richfield, Near Yorba, Purchased for Forty-five Thousand—Los Nietos Grain Ranch—Orange Grove Near Pomona—Several Others.

Four Hundred Acres Near Yorba.

Jacob Stern of Hollywood and W. A. Fruhling of Los Angeles have bought over 400 acres of land in the vicinity of Richfield on the Santa Fé, near Yorba, for the reported consideration of $45,000. In the deal S. P. Mulford and Willis H. Perfect of Los Angeles transfer to Stern numerous lots and blocks in Hazard's subdivision and the Richfield townsite. It is understood that Stern will put the property on the market in five and ten-acre tracts.

Grain Land at Los Nietos.

Fifty acres of walnut and barley acreage near Los Nietos, has been sold by E. R. Guirado, to Alphonso Bell of Los Angeles. Mr. Bell also is the owner of a big ranch at Santa Fé Springs. The consideration, it is understood, was in the neighborhood of $12,000.

Pomona Orange Grove Bought.

E. R. Sheppard has sold to Dr. J. C. F. Cummins his twenty-acre navel orange grove, north of Pomona, for $30,000. The grove is in full bearing, and is amply supplied with water from the Loop-Meserve system, in which water costs only about 50 cents per acre a year. Dr. Sheppard takes as part payment a fine apartment house on Center street, near Garey avenue, Pomona, at a valuation of $10,000, and also gets cash amounting to $10,000. The house is rented at the rate of $70 per month. J. A. Fitch of Pomona was the agent.

Small Ontario Grove Sold.

A. N. Cavanaugh has sold his two and a half acre navel orange grove situated one mile east of Ontario, to Mrs. D. F. Stoner; amount stated, $4000.

At Cucamonga and Rivera.

T. B. Benjamin has sold to P. E. Lindholm, ten acres at Cucamonga, set to oranges and lemons twelve years old, improved with nice residence, $11,-6.0; O. H. Dimmitt to George A. Sarles, ten-acre ranch at Artesia nicely improved, for $7000. The deal was made through the agency of the Horace G. Hamilton Company. The same agent reports the following: Robert McDougal to E. D. Taylor, nine acres at Rivera set to walnuts, fifteen years old, improved with a substantial residence and other buildings, for $7500; C. T. Webber to Harriette B. Goodman, 240 acres at Ocean Side for $3000.

Buys Ranch Near Whittier.

The Harley Adams ranch, through the agency of Hazzard, Hiatt & Hazzard, in East Whittier, to Adam Knupp, for $10,000.

S. W. Barton & Co. report the sale of a ten-acre tract in La Habra to Mr. Hall of Iowa, for $6500.

Ontario Peach Orchard.

G. W. Russel has sold to W. K. Merril his forty-seven-acre peach orchard situated four miles southeast of Ontario for a stated consideration of $5000.

Buys Unimproved Land.

W. G. Correll has sold to A. C. Harvey, 120 acres of unimproved land situated three miles southeast of Ontario for an estimated price of $3600.

Another Ontario Orange Grove.

E. J. Saunders has bought of Bank & Fischer, a five-acre naval orange grove on San Antonio avenue, Ontario. The price reported being $4300.

Norwalk Land Bought.

Tuttle & Russel report the following: Lynden Russel has sold to A. Armstrong, twenty acres of unimproved land at Norwalk for the reported consideration of $2000.

Buys in Blackburn Addition.

W. E. Bybee has bought of Thomas Arrowsmith, his ten-acre peach orchard, improved with cottage, situated in the Blackburn addition two miles southeast of Ontario. Consideration stated at $1800.

SOLANO HOME SOLD.

M. J. Nolan reports the sale of the Solano Home, on the southeast corner of Twenty-third and Figueroa streets to a San Francisco millionaire for the reported consideration of $55,000. The property consists of a lot with a frontage of 120 feet on Figueroa street, and a depth of about 165 feet on Twenty-third street. There is a three-story house on the lot, which has been built about four years.

FOR SALE—
THE INDEPENDENCE OF AN ACRE HOME OF YOUR OWN.
$20 DOWN.
WHERE BERRIES AND POULTRY MAKE THE PAYMENTS.

Here is a plain statement of fact divested of all exaggeration. I can sell you an acre—full measure—for $[illegible], in payments of $20 down and small monthly amounts like rent. The land is not far from 6th and Main sts., and can be reached in 30 minutes by two fast electric lines. The soil is a sandy loam, and as water is free and unlimited, berries may be raised to create a substantial income. Vegetables will supply all domestic needs, and poultry may also be relied upon to pay expenses. These acres are situated on the way to the sea, where values are constantly advancing. When the land finally becomes too valuable for berries, vegetables and poultry it may be sold for many times the purchase price, netting you a very handsome profit while affording you a home in the meantime.

FOR THE MAN OR WOMAN DISSATISFIED WITH THE LIMITED POSSIBILITIES OF A CITY LOT THIS OFFER
MEANS THE BEGINNING OF A COMPETENCY AND MAY LEAD TO INDEPENDENCE.
THE START IS EVERYTHING.

These acres have graded and oiled streets and water piped direct. There are schools, churches, stores, telephones, and all modern advantages available. This is a rare opportunity scarcely possible anywhere else, as land available in single acres in such close proximity to the city is fast passing into the hands of capitalists and is sold only in small lots. As an investment alone, this chance appeals to every prudent man and woman. Free cars every 30 minutes. Come in for maps and further details.

MISSION COURT.
MISSION COURT.
ON THE NEW COVINA LINE
NOW OPERATING.
HALF-ACRE SITES,
COMMANDING THE BEAUTIFUL
SAN GABRIEL VALLEY.
CHARMING RESIDENCE PLACE.

Mission Court is the pick of the delightful section opened up by the Covina Electric Line. It has been for many years the fairest garden spot around Los Angeles. The mountains, the Mission, the rolling landscape, the pure air and the artesian water all contribute to render it ideal for homes. Mission Court has graded and oiled streets, and water piped to every lot. Schools, churches and stores are within easy reach. With the opening of the electric line it will become the most desirable home place for Los Angeles people. It is within 30 minutes of 6th and Main streets by the Covina Electric Railway. The price of these handsome villa lots is lower now than it will ever be again. The lots are half acres, the restrictions are reasonable, and the terms inviting both for home and investment. There will be a very rapid advance in values, as this property has been coveted for years by home builders.

FOR SALE—
A CHOICE 50-FOOT LOT ABSOLUTELY FREE.

We have just acquired a large tract of land at a new townsite which has just been organized in Los Angeles Co., near the line of the Owens River aqueduct, and in order that it may become known in the quickest and most effective manner we have decided to give away absolutely free one hundred lots.

All we ask in return is that each person who gets a lot will give us the names of at least three persons who might become interested and to whom we might sell other lots. The one hundred lots will be given to the first one hundred replying to this notice, only one to a person.

The location of the tract is an ideal one, the land being almost level at an elevation of 2000 feet. The soil, a fertile loam unsurpassed in the State of California, and the finest of artesian water on the tract.

The lots are full size, being 50x150. Free and clear of all incumbrance or restrictions. The first one hundred will be given absolutely free as above stated. Papers will be made out by a responsible abstract company through which the transfer will be made and the only item of expense to you will be the cost of the papers. This will not exceed $5 and includes deed, notary fee and certificate of title.

The one hundred free lots are equal in location and value to any other lots in the TRACT. They will be reserved accordingly as the requests are received. No two lots adjoining will be given away nor will more than one to be given away in the same family.

Upon receipt of a postal or letter you will be given necessary information, etc. This proposition is bona fide and means just what it says.

Our object in advertising this great offer in this way is to avoid the confusion which would arise in so many people coming to our office and enables us to award the lots in the order the replies are received.

TWO BARGAINS.
$100,000—Best corner on Figueroa st. south of Seventh, intersection of two main car lines; improved with modern 3-story pressed-brick building; income over $6250 per year. Property a little over half improved; income can be increased over 40 per cent. with very little expense. Only force of circumstances will compel one to trade property of this character, as it is not only a big income producer but is right in line of near future developments. Will sell for half cash, or will exchange equity of $50,000 for good close-in property up to $30,000, and $20,000 in cash.

$75,000—Olive st., one block from Hamburger's new store building, improved with 3-story pressed-brick building; income nearly 6 per cent. Will double in value inside of 3 years; will exchange or sell at the above figure. Will consider good apartment-house site up to $35,000 clear, $15,000 in cash, balance 6 per cent.

FOR SALE—

CONCERNING JEFFERSON STREET.

(Second of the series showing progress of the GREAT SOUTHWEST, and why JEFFERSON Street, from Main to Wesley, must soon become THE MOST IMPORTANT OUTLYING BUSINESS CENTER OF LOS ANGELES.)

NUMBER TWO.
OPENING OF AGRICULTURAL PARK.

A committee composed of leading citizens of the city, is now being selected to raise a fund of $20,000 for the preliminary work of beautifying and OPENING to the public, AGRICULTURAL PARK, which is about one-fourth of a mile south of JEFFERSON and Figueroa sts. It is expected that this park, comprising 120 acres, and destined to become the most famous on the Pacific Coast, will be thrown open within the NEXT NINETY DAYS.

Have you even BEGUN to realize what that epochal improvement will do for the entire south and southwest portion of the city—or for the WHOLE city?

It means the fashioning of the largest and most beautiful pleasure ground in Southern California, available to more than 300,000 people of Los Angeles and immediate suburbs for 325 of this world's most glorious, sunshiny days every year.

It means splendid buildings for holding annual fairs, permanent exhibits of all kinds, agricultural experimentation, etc.

It means playgrounds for thousands of children who sadly need them, and football, baseball and tennis grounds for thousands more of lovers of these invigorating sports—and, incidentally, the ONLY public grounds of this character in the city.

It means daily visits to this magnificent park of from FIVE THOUSAND to ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND PEOPLE.

What MADE the famous "Westlake District?" What would be the value of property in this district today—every foot of which for an area of about four square miles is $100 to $250 a foot—if it were not for Westlake Park? Barely half what it is at present. And Westlake Park is ONLY ONE-FOURTH THE SIZE OF AGRICULTURAL PARK.

Notwithstanding the marvelous rate at which the Fifth Ward is growing now—adding about 12,000 people every year, this rate would very nearly DOUBLE, with Agricultural Park properly beautified and opened to the public.

The damnable conspiracy of a handful of crafty politicians, who have sought since 1881 to rob the people of Los Angeles of what rightly belonged and still belongs to them, has served to retard the progress of the GREAT SOUTHWEST for years, and has, in addition, burdened one of the fairest portions of Los Angeles with the ugliest 120-acre high-board-fence eyesore ever contained within its borders.

But in a few short months ALL THIS WILL BE CHANGED, thanks to the public spirit and energy of an at last awakened people, and AGRICULTURAL PARK, THE GREATEST ON THE PACIFIC COAST, will be OPENED FOR THE ENJOYMENT OF ALL SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA. Also mark this well—IT WILL NEVER AGAIN BE CLOSED!

If this park were five miles from JEFFERSON Street, I'd be just as heartily in favor of it, because I believe, now that the Owens River matter is settle, this is the MOST IMPORTANT PUBLIC PROJECT IN THE CITY, and that it will benefit a greater number of people, poor as well as rich, than anything else that could be devised. And surely, "the greatest good to the greatest number" should be the motto of every lover of right and justice and humanity.

But to get back to real estate, JEFFERSON Street, at Figueroa, as it happens, is about 1400 feet north of the MAIN ENTRANCE of this grand park. If you know anything about ANY big eastern city you will appreciate the marked and IMMEDIATE effect that the opening of a large park has upon the nearest business street. Figure things out in this case and you discover another incontrovertible reason why JEFFERSON Street, between Main and Wesley, MUST BECOME THE MOST IMPORTANT OUTLYING BUSINESS CENTER OF LOS ANGELES.

FOR SALE—BUSINESS PROPERTY IS OUR specialty, and as we confine ourselves to high-class, centrally located investments, we are in a position to recommend some of the best investment opportunities available. Witness the following choice offerings:

Northwest corner of Seventh street and Flower, 67½ ft. on Seventh by 155 ft. on Flower. Seventh st. between Main and Figueroa is perhaps the most promising of our thoroughfares, and the only one likely to rival Broadway in the future. We can deliver this at the price of $150,000.

Southeast corner of Hill and Sixteenth sts., with about $12,000 worth of improvements, paying about $190 monthly. Price $38,000.

Southeast corner San Pedro and Fourth sts., 110x104 ft., a splendid wholesale site, $80,000.

We have other fine buys. Call and see us about them if these do not meet requirements.

is now over, and 100 carloads of this choice product have been shipped from Lindsay, thus completing the year in which more than 800 carloads have been shipped from this point alone.

Valencias from this district brought fancy prices, netting the producers over $2 per box. The navel crop also brought top prices. One carload shipped by Mr. J. J. Cairns in April brought $800.70 net.

There is never a failure of crop in this district, no fruit pests to contend with and oranges can be produced at one-half the expense of other sections of the State.

We are offering here the finest orange land in the State at one-fourth the price asked in other localities ranging from $75 TO $100 PER ACRE.

I SELL THE EARTH.

R. S. BASSETT.

COUNTRY PROPERTY IS MOVING.

More people now looking for cheap acreage than for years before, and there is a reason for it, for a number of years past people throughout the United States have been crowding into the cities till the business opportunities of the cities are over done and people must make a living; so they go back to the natural place for making it, that is to old mother earth, the source of wealth.

One can invest a few thousand in city lots, with but small or possibly no income, when the same amount invested in cheap acreage will bring in a suitable living and oft-times wealth; in the present day people are beginning to realize this. In looking around, the San Joaquin Valley midway between Los Angeles and San Francisco one wonders at the extent of this vast acreage of fine lands and when one investigates the returns from these lands, from peaches, apricots, table and raisin grapes, hogs, cattle, alfalfa and dairy products, one begins to realize why it is that so many people are now buying these lands.

ONE OF THE BEST LOCATIONS TO PURCHASE NOW IS AROUND CORCORAN, KINGS COUNTY.

This is a new community; only 3 years ago it was a large cattle ranch, now it is a prosperous young town with brick business buildings, schools, telephone and telegraph, electric lights, creamery, with capacity of 2000 cows, good hotel and bank, $1,000,000 sugar factory to be built this coming years, $20,000 depot to be commenced August 1; many good houses, thousands of acres in alfalfa and beets; many fine flowing artesian wells, junction of Santa Fe R.R., surely this is the place to buy now and will be for a number of years to come; one is bound to make money if he purchases property here.

We are quite well posted in lands in this part of the valley.

WE HAVE FOR SALE.

3320 acres, located 4½ miles from Corcoran, about the same distance from Angiola and Waukena, all on the Santa Fe R.R. and 7 miles due west from Tipton on the Southern Pacific R.R. Tule River and Elk Bayou runs through the property; abundance of shade trees along stream. We can sell you this property in one body for $21 per acre on easy terms.

Then we have a tract of about 400 acres further away from Corcoran at $22 per acre. We have also several sections for $15 and $16 per acre. Terms on all.

We have traveled over this section of the valley quite extensively lately and will be goin up again next week. Say, will you go along?

FOR SALE—
Suburban Property.

FOR SALE — THE MOST BEAUTIFUL suburban home that can be bought for the money in Southern California. The kind that is rarely on the market. A chance for a man of moderate means to acquire the kind of home place rarely owned except by the very wealthy, with wide expanse of new, velvety lawn, sweeping driveways, numerous rare and stately trees, shrubs and flowers.
Situated in beautiful Alhambra, short distance from Huntington Drive and Oneonta Park section of South Pasadena, convenient to San Gabriel, Monrovia, Sierra Madre and Pasadena, Wentworth, cars.
Lot has frontage of 281 feet by 220 deep, on wide avenue with cement sidewalks and curbs and wide parkways all in lawn.
Modern, substantial and imposing 8-room colonial house, just completed with fine finish and appointments.
The oldest and largest rubber tree in the State; the largest spreading oak and dozens of other magnificent trees, some of them rare and unusual, even in California, besides half acre of oranges and other fruits, rose garden, shady nooks and mammoth rose vines, enveloping great trees with flowers and foliage, newly-planted borders and beds of rare plants and flowers.
An ideal place in prime condition; has been in the hands of expert landscape gardeners for several months.
Easily worth $20,000, but will take much less for quick sale; cannot be duplicated for double the money.
Can be handled with $4000 to $6000 cash, balance long time, at 7 per cent.

SAN GABRIEL VALLEY.
SAN GABRIEL VALLEY.
CHARMING RESIDENCE PLACE.
Mission Court is the pick of the delightful section opened up by the Covina Electric Line. It has been for many years the fairest garden spot around Los Angeles. The mountains, the Mission, the rolling landscape, the pure air and the artesian water all contribute to render it ideal for homes. Mission Court has graded and oiled streets, and water piped to every lot. Schools, churches and stores are within easy reach. With the opening of the electric line it will become the most desirable home place for Los Angeles people. It is within 30 minutes of 6th and Main sts. by the Covina Electric Railway. The price of these handsome villa lots is lower now than it will ever be again. The lots are half acres, the restrictions are reasonable and the terms inviting both for home and investment. There will be a very rapid advance in values, as this property has been coveted for years by home builders.

FOR SALE—I AM FORCED TO SELL MY 50 acres of San Gabriel Valley property on new Covina line. I own 50 acres of the choicest property in the famous San Gabriel valley only 20 minutes from 6th and Main sts., via the new Huntington electric line to Covina, which opens today. If I could hold this property for another year I would realize a fortune from it. Pressing obligations compel me to raise money immediately, otherwise I will lose heavily as the banks won't loan money on outside property, it will be necessary for me to sacrifice this magnificent piece of close-in acreage. This land is 10 to 20 minutes nearer the city than is Hollywood, has a gentle slope to the south and is level; ten acres set to table grapes, 20 acres to wine grapes, now in full bearing. Walnut trees have been set between the vines and balance is set to fruit trees. Will sell as a whole or in part at a price several hundred dollars per acre less than adjoining property can be bought for. The reason for this is given in four words—I NEED THE MONEY. This is not a professional real estate ad but an appeal to the man with the cash who is looking for a safe investment that is sure to show big returns. Address OWNER, 144 Rose Lawn Drive, Los Angeles or Phone Sunset East 172 before 9 a.m. 30

ALHAMBRA.

FOR SALE—
ALHAMBRA.
The advantages of good street car facilities, only 25 minutes' ride from Los Angeles, a seven-cent fare. Fine school system, grammar as well as high school, churches, social organizations, fine stores, bank and everything that a modern city can offer.
Would you not rather select a lot or a home at even a lesser price in a community of this kind than what you are paying for a lot in new subdivision without any of the above mentioned advantages?
We have a half dozen or more different locations, none further away from the business center than one-half mile, good street work, close to the car and the price only $400 and up; size of lots no less than 50x150, and a good many a good deal larger.
The "Bishop" Tract leads them all as far as nearness to the business center. The lots are large, being 75x176 feet, all covered with large orange trees and other trees; prices run from $[illegible] and up.
"Washington Irving" Tract at the junction of Wilson ave. and Main st.; lots 50x150, [illegible] than 400 feet from the car line, $[illegible].
We have a few lots left in the "C. & M." Tract, on South 5th st.; street work all in; good many new houses built on the tract; you can still get a lot for $475 or up, according to location.
The "B. H." Tract is pretty well sold out, but we could give you a bunch of lots on Vega st., and if we could sell to one customer who wants a good home, we would give a good bargain. These lots are east front, only 400 feet from the car line and are cheap at the regular price of $450 each.
Main street lots in the same tract, $750 and up; these are a good investment.
The "Dixey" Tract joins the "B. H." Tract on the north; we have several bunches of lots in this tract, with all improvements in; water to each lot; street oiled; you can get some lots in this tract as low as $400 per lot.
We have a bunch of lots on Garfield ave., near the Monrovia line; we would sell one or all and it would make fine home sites with two lots for each home; these lots are only a block from the Monrovia car with a ten-minute service; the regular price is from $900 to $1000; if you know what Garfield ave. is you know the property is very cheap.
A few special home places close to the Monrovia car, 100x150, with several live oaks; east front; street work in; only 300 feet from the car line and adjoining elegant homes—price $3000.
150x150 with two live oaks in the same neighborhood, but without street work, $2250.
100x300; street work in on three sides; this includes two corners and will make an elegant home site; price $4000.
HOUSES.
Fine lot with large trees, only 200 feet from the car line, with 2-room house; price only $900; you are getting a lot cheap with a house thrown in.
Another one 50x150 with a 2-room house, close in, center of town; street work all in; price only $1150.
Modern 4-room bungalow, lot 50x120; street work all in; nice shrubbery, shade trees; small house on the rear; gas, electric light, etc.; price $1750; a bargain.
Modern 4-room bungalow, east front; street work all in; lot 125x150; fine trees, shrubbery, etc.; price $2600.
Special bargain in an elegantly finished, artistically built bungalow home, within one-half block of the car line; can be bought with one lot or two at the price not much over what the house could be constructed for; come and see it—it is a beauty at the low figure.
We have two or three of these same things which are actual bargains; watch the papers during the week.
SMALL ACREAGE suitable for suburban homes, ranging from 2 1-4-acre lots to whatever size you want; prices will vary according to locations, but all is good, and most of it has an income already established; come and see if it won't suit you for that little ranch you are looking for.
We have closed our office in Los Angeles for the summer, but we will give you so much better service if you come to Alhambra, and if you will take the trouble to write us we will send you free transportation by mail.

FOR SALE—
A REAL HOME.
and one of the few places where you can enjoy the pleasures of a real home orchard, for besides 400 full-bearing navel orange trees, there are grapefruit, tangerines, peaches, loquats, apricots, apples, lemons, figs and olive trees, with guava and 5000 strawberry plants, just coming into bearing and fine specimens of ornamental trees, beautiful roses, and other things that make a very attractive home place. One of the most desirable things about this home place is that it has a frontage of 200 feet on one of Alhambra's finest streets, and is so located that with a few slight changes it could be subdivided, either with a private court or with a through street, giving 2 tiers of lots. It is not often that we can have a proposition for sale that furnishes so well either a home or a subdivision. The house is an 8-room, 2-story house, with gas and bath. It would be worth your while to look this over, if you are looking for a home all improved.
$1400 will purchase a cozy, little home with large lot, set to orange trees, 54x165, close to car line, and this can be sold for $250, and balance like paying rent.
$2500—New 5-room house, 200 feet from car line, lot set to orange trees, with all street work in. $500 will take this. Has all modern improvements, and in a very nice neighborhood.
We have only 3 lots on Fourth st. at $450, with all street improvements in and when these are gone we have nothing within $100 of the price.
2½ to 5-acre tracts in the Hubbard tract and Champion tract, at from $450 to $800 an acre, are the very best buys in the rich belt of strawberry and vegetable and walnut growing section. These are going rapidly and if you want to get a bargain in this line, you will have to come at once.
¼-acre lots in Alhambra at $250 and $300, with graded and oiled street and sidewalk and cement curb; these lots are 49x218, and have a beautiful view of the valley and mountains. New homes are growing up in this section, which lies midway between the Covina line and Alhambra line.
4 lots on N. Marguerita at $400 each. The street is now under way for improvements. These are bargains.
On N. Curtis ave., 4 lots at $350 and $[illegible], with all street work in.
$1700 will buy a cozy home, near car line and business center, within the next 10 days. This is an excellent opportunity, and will pay inspection.
One of the finest residence lots in Alhambra, in a high-class neighborhood, 75-foot frontage on 2 improved streets, all set out with fine large specimens of ornamental trees. At a real bargain price the rest of this week. For a fine home there is nothing better in the county.

HOLLYWOOD.

FOR SALE—
TEN. ACRES OR PART IN HOLLYWOOD.
Only one block from Franklin and Gower and 5 minutes' walk to Prospect ave. cars, and but short block from new Franklin-ave. line, to be built within 6 months, good 7-room house, barn, fine navel orange orchard, bearing; large number of apricot, plum, prune, fig, loquat, olive, lemon and grapefruit trees; also grapes, all bearing; fine well, gas engine and pump, or Hollywood city water can be put in; many decorative trees, palms, rubber, almond, umbrella, bamboo, banana, eucalyptus, etc. This is close in to center of town, and is the most sightly location in Hollywood, being on the first eminence of the hills with a view of the valley, ocean and city of Los Angeles unsurpassed; is sheltered from the cold winds in winter, and gets the sea breeze in summer; it adjoins and overlooks the site chosen by Artist De Longpre for his new home, and will make a wealthy man's home place unequaled around Los Angeles.
For a hotel or sanatorium the site could not be improved on, and there is 19 years' growth of foliage, flowers and fruit already there for embellishment.
Is easy of access, yet an elevation of 350 feet above the sea, and health is in every breath drawn on it. A better investment could not be found than to hold or subdivide this location, and it is offered for $22,000, $10,000 cash or will take good Los Angeles or ranch property at cash value, and the balance 3½ years, 6 per cent., or will sell north 3 acres for $6000, middle 3 acres for $7000, either making beautiful site for fine home.

OCEAN PARK.

FOR SALE—
OCEAN PARK property, at present prices, is one of the safest, surest investments in the southwest today.
Prices are, in general, based on the PRESENT earning power of the land.
Improved residence property should, if carefully purchased, return 10 per cent. net yearly to the buyer.
Vacant property can be improved so as to return 10 per cent. on the total investment.
We are not only going to need more houses in the future, WE NEED THEM NOW. To prove this for yourself, just try to find a desirable cottage for the summer.
Sometimes it is cheaper to buy than to pay rent.
We offer the following bargains in sand lots—
$[illegible]—So. front lot, Short Line Beach, 25 ft.
$[illegible]—Strand corner [illegible] ft., faces south.
$[illegible]—30 ft. on Park ave., one of our grand streets.
$[illegible]—25 ft. on Breeze, this for few days only.
$[illegible]—30 ft. ocean frontage, north corner, good location.
Many good things in houses for sale, easy payments, let us show them to you. For instance, $2750—Lot on paved st., 2 houses furnished. This is the best for the money on the beach. $1000 cash, balance 6 and 12 months 7 per cent.
Desirable cottages are getting scarce. We have a few left, but don't wait too long. See the ROBBINS REALTY CO., 146 Pier ave., Ocean Park. Both phones.

FOR SALE—SNAPS THAT WILL STAND the closest investigation.
$[illegible] a foot for Mottimer ave., 40 feet, west of trolley; others ask $150 a foot.
$[illegible]—Fourth st. lot facing ocean, near Ocean Park.

We have at last had a sample of beautiful summer weather, a little like that "Good Old Summer Time" away back East, which a few of us still remember. No, it is not hot; just warm, and the best kind of trading weather in the world. It is this weather that finds the "Wizard" at his best, limbering up his bones, muscles and brain, and puts him in fit shape for the trading arena. He has trades for you all, both great and small. Read his bulletin again today, read it carefully. Pick out those things that suit you best; then come in, or write the "Wizard."

FOR SALE—PIANOS—.

IMPORTANT SPECIAL SALE AT FITZGERALD'S.

You save from $100 to $250.

There are many people in Los Angeles and Southern California who would buy a slightly used piano of a standard make if they knew where to go. This is the place, and the object of this advertisement is to bring together real piano bargains and the people who want them. We are not in the second-hand piano business—get that clear in your mind—but unusual conditions bring here every day standard-grade pianos—most of them actually as good as new—which we can sell at remarkably low prices.

We control and sell the PIANOLENO, SIMPLEX and LINDEMAN PLAYER-PIANOS, which are upright pianos that every one can play with the aid of a wonderful mechanism which is concealed within.

To get these player-pianos, people are offering their Steinways, Knabes, Chickerings, Deckers, etc., in exchange as part payments. Most of them come to us as good as new. We have a large number on hand now, and want to sell them speedily. We need the room they occupy on our floors.

WE QUOTE A FEW PRICES.

	Price New.	Price Now.
Ivers & Pond, mahogany	$450	$235
Standard, oak case	$350	$145
Chickering & Sons, mahogany	$550	$225
Kohler & Chase, oak case	$350	$225
Decker Bros., walnut	$500	$245
Everett, walnut	$450	$225

Don't worry about the terms. We will see to it that this part of the bargain is no burden at all.

If you can't come, write for more prices and further details.

PHYSICAL MAN IS NOT IDEAL.

Athlete Says the Elements Must Be Mixed.

Abnormal Development Gives Unbalanced Status.

Theodore Roosevelt Selected as Representative.

BY EDWARD J. ROBINSON,
Physical director for Jonathan Club.

The Good Book tells us that God created man in his own image. This necessarily means that in the very beginning it was intended that man should be many-sided, but evenly balanced in all his attributes; he must be of sound body, capable of doing and daring; of sound mind, capable of compelling the body to do its will; and of all the moral courage to achieve what the brain conceives and the body was to execute. It was evidently not the intention to people the earth with giants, with Sampsons, having abnormal physical development; nor with Paderewski's or Blind Toms, whose musical genius has developed into abnormal proportions.

It is true that in this day great things are done by specialists. We live with nervous intensity and the demands of the world for special results can be met only by devoting lives of painstaking effort to the accomplishment of those ends. This is both a gain and a loss, for the law of compensation steps in and says that by the rule of achievement in such matters the individual must sacrifice well rounded development in other ways.

The athlete who is developed only physically is one-sided, just as the man who has only intellectual development is one-sided, each is only half a man.

No man can be abnormally developed in one place without weakening some other part. An extremist who gives his undivided time and attention toward developing a great physique and neglects his intellectual development is like a man who carries his arm in a sling; not only does his brain fail to improve, but it actually deteriorates from disuse. So, the man who neglects his physical welfare and is bent only on intellectual development, puts his whole body in a sling. No great pugilist has ever been the father of a great pugilist. How few instances there are in this country of a great statesman being the father of a great statesman; or of a musician, an artist, or even a general having a son equal to the luster of the parent. If there is anything in the law of heredity should not the children of the intellectual or physical giants inherit the marked characteristics of their parents?

ABNORMAL MUSCLE.

I never saw a great mountain of muscle that was interesting in any way other than to look at; on the other hand, I never saw an intellectual giant that was capable of being interesting if he were to attempt a physical feat, with one exception to be hereinafter noted.

The man who is abnormally developed intellectually, is usually to an equal degree undeveloped physically; the result is that when you average his personal equation, his percentage is that of an ordinary man. Such a man is almost without exception the father of a very ordinary child.

A man is not perfect, in my opinion, no matter how perfect may be his physical proportions, unless he is able not merely to be somebody, but to do something, and that to a definite and worthy purpose. I have seen and read about men whose lines and muscles measured up to the full standard of so-called physical perfection, and yet who seemed to be able to accomplish nothing that required science, skill or endurance. Such a person is no better than a wooden man—an Indian dummy in front of a cigar stand.

It is said that at one time in Chicago, the gripmen of the cable car companies were suffering to such an extent from biliousness or chronic stomach ailment of some kind, and were requiring so many leaves of absence, that the service of the company was becoming seriously crippled. A thorough investigation into the cause of the trouble was instituted and as a result it was discovered that the handling of the brakes and levers of the cable cars, was causing an abnormal development of the right side of the body, and the muscles of the left side of the body were so poorly developed in proportion that the men were actually incapacitated. Gymnasiums were started by the company and the employés were compelled to take certain exercises prescribed by the physical directors. In a short time the men were restored to normal condition, and the public service went on unhampered.

My point is that the physical and mental qualities of man must be developed not only evenly, but thoroughly and evenly. The perfect man must have that nice balance between his physique and his mind that the body is capable of performing the feats of strength and skill that can be accomplished only by careful and persistent training and attention, and that the mind shall have such care as is adapted to its best development; and that the two shall be coördinated; the body under perfect mental control, the mind aided and assisted in its work by a body that is capable of enduring the strain that is put upon it. Still, a man may possess great physical development and great intellectual power and yet be utterly lacking in that quality essential to greatness or perfection, moral control. He may be like a great army without a general.

A man may be giant in stature, with the strength of a Sandow, and have, in addition, wonderful cunning and intellectual power, and yet, from lack of moral force, be like Fleenor, the barefoot burglar, who was a giant in strength and wonderfully cunning, merely a criminal.

The period in man's life when this thorough and even balance between mind and body may be found, is the next inquiry. The body develops rapidly; the mind slowly. The highest physical development is often attained at twenty-three years of age, but of course the highest intellectual development comes much later. Many a professional boxer has won his championship title before he was 21. The young athlete graduating from his college may have won laurels with the crew, on the track, or on the football field, and may have a record of prowess never before excelled and seldom after equaled; yet it will probably be years before he reaches his highest intellectual development. It should be his effort to keep himself in his splendid physical condition so that as the years roll on and he attains the zenith of his intellectual power, his physical capacity shall be equal to the demands that should, and will, be made upon it.

The nearest approach to my idea of a perfect man, in the sense that I have been trying to present, is found today in the person of our President, Theodore Roosevelt. He exemplifies better than any other man I have ever known, heard of, or read about, the combination of physical, intellectual and moral greatness, which, in my judgment, are necessary to constitute the perfect man. It is true he is not a giant in stature; were he so he would be abnormal, as he does not belong to a race of giants. His physical proportions are excellent; his body under perfect control; it works in complete harmony with his intellect, as is proven by his many physical accomplishments. He has the ability to do, and the courage to dare. His fine physical development, combined with his intellectual force and capacity and his moral strength, make him the man that he is.

No one ever questioned his courage. There are many different kinds of courage, some that partake more of foolhardiness than of real bravery; for instance, the man who goes up in a balloon and comes down in a parachute, or loops the loop, or does other reckless things for pay, and to please a throng of people eager for new thrills of excitement, his courage of a special kind; but in some other crisis in life, he might prove a craven coward. It takes an intelligent man to possess that fine type of courage, which, while thoroughly conscious of the danger, is willing to take the risk unhesitatingly when the crisis demands sacrifice for the accomplishment of a worthy purpose.

VERSATILE VIRTUES.

President Roosevelt is perfectly willing to lead a charge up San Juan hill, or go down under the waters in a submarine boat, as the call of duty may come to him; equally at ease hunting big game in the mountains, ranching on the western plains, or assembling the Rough Riders for deeds of valor. Fearless of assassins at Washington, he also has the moral courage that dears to do right even in the face of adverse criticism.

As an athlete, he has few superiors. Compelled by ill-health when a boy to adopt a rugged life, he has, by persistent and careful effort, learned to excel in nearly everything. As a professional boxer and wrestler he could have made a good living; in broadsword work and in tennis he has great skill; in walking and in horseback riding there are few men in public life that can follow his pace; while as a marksman and in the craft of the cowboy and the skill of the western hunter, he has never been looked down upon by those who knew him intimately in that strenuous life. He is a loyal friend, and a determined, but merciful foe.

With all these rugged qualities, he is an ideal husband, a gentle, kind, and affectionate father, a lover of little children, fond of music, flowers and art; while in literature, few men in public life have written as much or as well as he.

There is hardly a walk in life in which he would not have succeeded—from carrying the hod to running the government. In whatever position he might be placed, the public would confidently expect him to "make good."

Such a man, with so rare a combination of the elements of physical, intellectual and moral greatness, exemplifies my ideal of a perfect man—a true type of the best American manhood.

A friend of the cowboy, a comrade of the western ranger and hunter, the hero and idol of the soldier, the recipient of the Nobel prize for international peace, a statesman among diplomats, the peer of kings—he is at home in every society and always a man among men.

physical director for the Jonathan Club and well known athlete.

MEN'S VANITY FORMS ONLY HUMAN IDEALS.

BY ROBERT J. BURDETTE,
Pastor of Temple Baptist Church.

FOOLISH people waste time and brain energy thinking and writing about him and trying to invent him, when in sober reality he is about the commonest creature on earth. He is numerous and obstrusive as red ants at a picnic. Far from modestly concealing himself, he thrusts himself upon the attention of the world. He is always "among those present," when he isn't featured as the guest of honor. If he isn't the star, he poses as the understudy. If he doesn't deliver the address of the evening, he unrolls his little manuscript when "and others" are called upon for a few feeble and nebulous remarks. "The Ideal Man." You can't get rid of him. You can't shut him out of society, religion, politics. His picture is half-toned in the papers. It smirks with the "pleasant look" that destroys all characteristic expression of humanity in the show frames of the photographer.

I think there are forty-five billions of men in the world. I haven't got quite through counting them and there may be a few more. And if there is one of them to whom I have spoken about the matter who isn't "The Ideal Man" the world is looking for, he is an awful liar. And, the man ought to know, himself, what manner of man he is. And when he describes, as his idea and conception of the "Ideal Man," a creature who is a ringer for himself, who am I, to sit in judgment upon his "ideal ideal," and condemn it, and insist upon his taking a description of myself from the old circulars I used in the years of my lecture life, most of which I composed and all the rest of which I compiled myself? "The Ideal Man" is white, black, yellow, red, copper colored; brown and little, white and big, thin lipped, blubber lipped; wears no hair, and lots of hair with feathers in it; rides like a centaur, and falls off the porch when he sees a horse; sails a yacht; gets seasick on a turntable; is fond of war and full of fight; is an arrant coward who would "rather hear the devil than a drum;" is an American evangelist; an English bishop, and a French atheist; is an old bachelor and an undetected bigamist; a heart broken lover and a man with three divorces to his credit. A Pittsburgh steel baron is a good ideal man for a door mat, and a San Francisco Mayor is a good ideal man for a mud scraper to fasten alongside the mat; William Bryan is an ideal man for a candidate and Theodore Roosevelt is an ideal man for a President.

The universal ideal man. Well; when you find "The Ideal Man," for the sake of humanity you ought to label him, large and plain, so that the rest of us, humdrum, commonplace, everyday seven-by-nine men and women can detect him before he sees us. We don't want any ideal man that the rest of you can describe.

An "ideal" is something to have; not to describe. It is something too high and sacred and beautiful for description. The man who can describe his sweetheart, just as he sees her, isn't in love with her, not a little bit. And if the "ideal" is so near to you, so plainly fashioned that you can write a description of it in a pamphlet, it is a very low ideal; clumsily fashioned of coarse material.

However, people who really wish to know more about the "Ideal Man" of the twentieth century may find me in my study at the usual hours. Unless I see them coming.

In all seriousness and reverence, however, there was a man born into this imperfect world about 2000 years ago. Born, well-nigh an outcast child. It is written of him and of his enemies, educated, wealthy, influential men, high in station and well qualified to judge, that "they watch him, that they might find fault with him." And then, from the seat of Roman authority, a Roman governor, speaking as the legal representative of the world power, an enemy of the religion and the ethics taught by this man who lived in "the fierce white light" of hostile criticism, "I find no fault in Him." It was the verdict of the ages—past, present and to come. It was spoken of but one man in all the world, and in all time, the God-man, Jesus Christ—the only ideal man. And then, they crucified Him. The truly ideal man is never the popular hero.

LAWYER'S VIEW.

BY J. D. FREDERICKS,
District Attorney of County.

The Perfect Man—he does not exist. At least I have not met him.

In my line of business I see more of the other fellow—the imperfect man. I can tell you a lot about him.

A perfect man would not have any very great lead over the rest of us anyhow. Man's ability to do and be are matters of development. If all the faculties were fully developed, muscles, body, soul, etc., they would stand around in each others' way. What advantage would Samson's strength have been to Milton? If Spencer had had Sandow's body the world would not have had Spencer.

Man is capable of attaining the perfect in any one of many different fields, but the goals in each are too far apart to be reached by any one person.

I should say the perfect man was the man who, gifted with great natural powers in some one particular, had developed those to their utmost, and possessed sufficient of all other faculties to permit of that development and sustain its activity.

For instance, if nature has given one a mighty intellect, and he has developed it to the utmost, he must also have a good stomach, legs, lungs, heart, and soul strong enough and fit enough to act as a stalwart, sure and reliable setting for that magnificent gem.

Observe I place stomach first. If you intend to be a perfect man, and have a poor stomach, either forget your ambition, or get a new stomach.

But for me, give me the man who has his religion and is true to it; who has his home and family and lives for them; who is true to his country and loyal to it; interested in politics—not for gain, but for the upbuilding of his community, and educating himself so that his talents may be used for the benefit of others; faithful to his profession or business; honest with himself and others; not too severe on his enemies, but ascertaining what good there is in them.

"In men whom men pronounce as ill,
I find so much of goodness still;
In men whom men pronounce divine,
I find so much of sin and blot;
I hesitate to draw the line
Between the two, when God has not."

We have our Roosevelt—politically, a genius; mentally, a power; morally, true to his convictions—yet, is he a perfect man?

Napoleon, acknowledged to be a great general, mentally supreme, yet morally was far from perfect.

McKinley, our martyred President, was, no doubt, a great man. He managed the affairs of our great nation, yet he could not manage affairs of his own.

Bismarck's influence will be felt in Europe for centuries. It is true, like most great men, he shows to better advantage on a pedestal than under close inspection. He was cruel and relentless; he was cunning and revengeful; he cherished great ambitions and provoked great wars; but, first, last, and always, he was completely and unselfishly loyal to his Fatherland.

However, since perfection is not found in poor humanity, the portrait gallery of the world's great characters will evermore contain the faces of these men.

Be true to yourself and loyal to your friends; firm in your convictions, if right; easily to be convinced, if wrong; not easily influenced because of popular opinion; loyal to your God and country—these are the qualities of a perfect man.

PUTS MILLION FLIES AT WORK.

BUT NEIGHBORS OBJECT TO SUCH ENTERPRISE.

Humble German in East Los Angeles Raises a Community Row Because He Employs Insects to Clean His Bristles—Health Officer Says He Can Explain in Court.

Col. Mulberry Sellers and others of that ilk have been outdone by a humble German living in East Los Angeles. He has harnessed millions of flies to do the work formerly requiring weeks and months to accomplish.

Miller makes mattresses. The hair comes from hogs' bristles to which adhere bits of dried skin and flesh. This extraneous matter must be gotten rid of in some manner.

For a time Miller resorted to the old custom of laying the bristles on shelves until the tissues rotted off. But, noticing the avidity with which flies attacked the bunches of bristles, he conceived the brilliant idea of making use of the household pest.

Placing the bunches of bristles in his yard, he allowed the flies to clean them. With a tear of gratitude in his eyes, the German of inventive genius watched his faithful slaves flitting above his bristles. Next day free from skin and tissues, the bristles were ready for the mattress.

The scheme might have worked to perfection but one thing—Miller's free fly boarders would not remain at home but wandered about the neighborhood of Avenues 19 and 20, to the great annoyance of the neighbors.

Gorged with food from the jungle the flies swarmed about neighboring houses to the great dismay of tidy housewives. A complaint was made to Health Officer Powers. Inspector Bamji was sent to investigate. Miller, aroused by unfavorable criticism, also sought the officials of the Health Office to explain his little device.

He reminded Dr. Powers that flies are natural scavengers. They were doing their duty with promptitude and never went on a strike. He argued he could not control their time after hours and was not responsible for their domiciliary visits.

Dr. Powers said he might make his argument to a Police Court jury. Inspector Bamji secured a complaint from the prosecuting attorneys. Miller will appear in court tomorrow.

Withal the ideal man is irrepressible, at college he leads the class room and on the gridiron. He hits the line hard wherever he goes. In business his word is his bond; in politics he is fearless and independent; in society he cares more for a little child than for all the pampered dogs of the effeminate rich; in religion he is tolerant and orthodox. He believes there are eternal verities, and he steers his life ship by their guidance.

The ideal man is kind, gentle, forbearing, affectionate, loveable. His capacity for work is measureless, and his interest in work-a-day things is inexhaustible, but he masters those things, they cannot enslave him.

The ideal man cannot be lost in the maze of business nor in the labyrinth of pleasure. His real interest centers in the search for truth. Its acquisition is the far high mountain tops of his earthly hope. The ideal man seeks truth with a whole heart fervently. His search for truth links him with the great and good of every age and of every time. He is under the charm that inspired them, the imperial power of truth. It was for this that Noah became a laughing stock to his generation; that Moses relinquished the throne of the Pharoahs; that Socrates drank the hemlock draught of death; that Christ bore the heavy cross; that Columbus voyaged west with a convict crew; that Andree sailed into the North, never to return.

PHYSICIAN DEMANDS MORAL PERFECTION.

BY DR. ALBERT W. MOORE,
Member of Los Angeles Board of Health.

"VIRTUOUS and vicious every man must be,
Few in the extreme, but all in the degree."

Thus truthfully and thoughtfully is said of man as we find him today.

No man is perfect mentally, morally or physically. He may be perfect himself in one of these qualities, so far as any human beings may; but, as the poet Burns truthfully said, "A man's a man for a' that." We all have our ideals; some desiring to perfect themselves in mental lines, others to be moral, and still others to be physically perfect. Yet how few understand the meaning of perfection.

We have our war heroes, of which many songs have been sung. They perhaps were mentally and physically strong, yet morally weak.

"Yet are we, who are human, fit to judge another man's works?"

"Say, first, of God above or man below,
"What can we reason but from what we know?"

We all have our ideals. Some put their standard as the man who has attained great political achievements; others adore the man who has high religious attainments, while still others place their standard as the man who has accumulated great wealth. These, they say, are all perfect men.

DR. ALBERT W. MOORE,

MATINEE GIRL'S IDOL IS THE LEADING MAN.

BY DORA ECKL,
transcribing composite impressions.

THE matinée was over. From the realm of the noble-minded hero and the gentle dovelike heroine issued a stream of beplumed and very much dressed worshipers. Some of them were young; some of them were not. But that makes small difference. They were all talking fast.

"I just can't forget his voice, can you? I never heard a man with a voice like that before. Most of the time I don't hear what he's saying at all, I just listen to him talk. Couldn't you listen forever?"

"M'hm"—from beneath an overflowing hat-brim successfully smothered in staple vegetables and sundry stylish thingamujigs.

"'Tisn't his voice gets me though. It's his hair. He's got the most scrumptuous curls I ever saw. Black and soft and——"

"And girls, don't his eyes just give you the jim-jams. I read it in a novel, 'burning yet tender, sparkling and with a mystery'—well I don't know the rest, but I started at him as hard as I could to make him look in our box just once."

"Did you notice his swell figure?"

"Men haven't got figures. They've got physiques."

"Whatever it is, he's got it swell. And his beautiful walk. That shows what a fine actor he is. 'Tisn't everybody can go across that stage in about three steps and look so graceful."

"Did you get onto the way he made love to the leading lady? That's the part I always like best. Makes the thrills run through me when he just takes her head in his hands—sometimes I think he's going to pluck it right off her shoulders—he's so masterful, you know."

"I ride on the same car with him nearly every day. He'll sit there kind of easy, you know, and unconscious of everybody else, and pretty soon he'll pull out a great, big, thick book, his part, you know, and he'll begin to study—those actors just kill themselves working, that's what makes him look so tired out with those interesting, dark circles under his eyes. Oh, girls, do you s'pose I could get a job just as a supe and kind of be his servant or maid or something?"

Her heart-rending appeal was of slight importance among the others, whose longing was fully as consuming, if not so specific.

"He plays baseball, too. I think that's wonderful. I saw him and he plays swell. Why, he didn't have to run around the field once, mind you. Just took it all as cool! All the others went galloping around the place. And he leaned on his bat in the most fetching pose! I think he's simply grand."

One maiden looked slightly introspective.

"He's awfully handsome, of course. But he don't look very brainy, do you think so?"

Alas for the introspective maiden.

"Brainy? What does he want to look brainy for? I hate brainy men, anyway. They always look so dowdy. And he! Why, isn't he the swellest dresser and the handsomest looker and the most fascinating, compelling fellow you ever saw? Why don't they have men like that off the stage? Girls do you s'pose he'd answer if I wrote him a note? Just a formal note you know, telling him how much we girls all think of him and how we come every Saturday, and how we'd love to meet him. Girls I'm going to try it. I'm sure he'd know how it was meant. And he's not a bit conceited, you know. I'd just die of joy if he'd only speak to me once. I don't care what anybody says. He's my ideal of a man, so there."

How about it, girls?

The Ocean Park boy still holds his place at the head of the column and has strengthened his position by about 700 points over his opponent, Edna Wagner, on the next round. He was the first caller at headquarters yesterday morning, his face radiant because he had reached his heart's desire. He realizes, however, that his position is rather shaky. He knows that there is a perfect horde of hungry ones just below him reaching for that top perch and he hustled for all he was worth yesterday. In the first mail came four coupons for Stanley, mailed from the St. Regis Hotel in El Paso, which indicates that his career is being watched from afar.

Chonita Palomares, the lively Lordsburg lass, steps up to the fourth row again, but is only 12 points ahead of the Boston-street hustler, Jennie Bloom, who is one of the best racers in the whole flock.

WILTS FOUR COLLARS.

George Felker, the Pasadena boy, came into headquarters last night and laid down the largest score of the day which landed him in the sixth row, three pegs higher than he stood yesterday. "I have wilted four collars today," announced the lad as he wiped the sweat of honest toil from his perspiring brow. That's the kind of work that tells, though, in a race like this—the warmest ever run by Times contestants.

GOOD JUMPERS.

Rosine LeHardy makes a fine leap of three rows and sits contentedly on the ninth perch this morning, and Laura Lloyd springs up a couple of rows. Geraldine Fuller and Mabel Gordon have a tie in points and Ralph McNitt makes a good jump of four rows. Ralph has to work days and has no time to solicit subscriptions till after 5 o'clock, so he is especially grateful for any help that comes his way. He has had a vacation of a week and has made a good start, but it will be harder for him from now on.

Edith Dickerson, the San Diego girl, comes up eight rows this morning, and Margaret Chung, by the aid of a subscription turned in for her from Santa Monica, goes up a peg. Margaret needs all the help she can get.

A REMARKABLE REUNION.

A Times scholarship boy was the means of bringing about a most remarkable reunion of two veterans of the Civil War the other day. Maj. John Q. Walker of New York, a member of Lafayette Post, 140, Department of New York, has been a guest in Los Angeles during the winter, stopping at Hotel Orena. He went to the annual reunion of the old soldiers at the Soldiers' Home last Wednesday, and while there discovered that Wallie Swain, the Soldiers' Home candidate in the contest, is the only child of his old boyhood friend and comrade whom he had not seen for forty-six years.

Maj. Walker called at scholarship headquarters yesterday and told the story. "Before the war," he said, "three boys were attending the same public school in Wisconsin and, at the first rumble of war in '61 all three of us left school and enlisted with Col. John C. Starkweather in the First Wisconsin Infantry, but as at that early period, West Point controlled the standard muster, all three of us were returned to our mothers with the memorandum, 'Refused on account of age.' Other regiments were formed and eventually all of us got to the front, but in different regiments and two of us never met again during the forty-six years intervening until last Wednesday, when, through the instrumentality of the lad, Wallie Swain, we were brought together, and renewed the close acquaintance of boyhood days. The other one of the trio of boys of '61 continued in the army after the close of the war and is now Lieut.-Gen. Arthur McArthur."

Friday evening there was a big banquet and reunion of Stanton Post and among the guests was Maj. Walker, who was called for a speech, during which he made an impassioned appeal for Wallie Swain, the son of his old comrade and chum. With the manly little lad standing beside him before the great audience Maj. Walker said: "I desire to introduce to you this evening, a son of a veteran, and to ask your support—each and every one of you—for this lad in attaining the height of his ambition, a thorough education that will fit him for the highest position in the gift of the American people, which means a far higher standard and study then when we 'old soldiers' attended school before the unfortunate unpleasantness occurred between the two sections of our beloved country. He has the indorsement of our comrades at the Soldiers' Home, and if, added to this, he receives the united support of comrades and loyal friends in Los Angeles and throughout this beautiful Southland, he should, like his soldier father, lead the columns in the field. The circumstances that brought this boy to my attention were extraordinary," and then Maj. Walker related the story of the meeting. The result of this eloquent plea was a unanimous vote that Wallie Swain be adopted by the G.A.R. and W.R.C. as their Mascot in the scholarship contest. Mrs. Nellie Leonard of No. 2217 Hoover street, was appointed treasurer to receive subscriptions and coupons for the lad. His father is a member of the Uncle Sam Post.

HOW SHE'S GROWN.

The career of Laura Lloyd this year is one that "points a moral to adorn a tale." Laura was in last year's contest and finished No. 43—but four rows above the very last one. Just glance at her standing this morning and note the difference. She has now almost half as many points to her credit as she had last year at the close of a contest that ran sixty-six days—and this one is just six days old. Laura has certainly developed running power. This morning Laura rises two rows and drops down on the eleventh peg to rest till Mondoy when she will get up and hustle again.

HELP YOUR FAVORITES.

Every morning The Times will print a subscription blank just below the coupon. The purpose is to enable Times patrons, who so desire, to fill in said blank with their subscription and forward it, accompanied by the cash, to The Times in favor of any contestant they may choose to assist. Whereas the coupon counts but one point, a single month's subscription renewed counts twenty-five points and a new subscription for one month counts fifty points. While a renewal for one year counts 500 points and a new subscription for a year counts 1000 points.

THE PRIZE PIANO.

The prize piano offered as a special reward to the contestant who ranks highest this year is a splendid instrument of the Kurtzmann make. It is fully warranted by the manufacturers and indorsed by the Geo. J. Birkel Company. It is conservatively valued at $425 and the winner may select either mahogany, walnut or oak case. This fine piano will be placed on exhibition in the windows of the Birkel company at 345-347 South Spring street where it may be seen by all the contestants and any who wish to inspect it.

TEN ACRES BURN IN BISBEE.

Fire Destroys Large Part of Residence and Business Sections and Is Only Stopped by Dynamite.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Fire which started from a gasoline explosion in the Colorado Hotel, early today, resulted in an area of ten acres of residence district being burned to the ground, and over two hundred houses in the section known as the Chihuahua Hill destroyed. Part of the business section was devastated.

Owing to a high wind, and scant water supply, the flames were beyond control until noon, and were only checked by the blowing up of some buildings with dynamite.

Bisbee has about 20,000 inhabitants, and is the headquarters of the Phelps-Dodge and other large mining companies.

Talks on Teeth

By S. I. REX, M. D., D. D. S.

Loose Teeth

The most dreaded disease of the dental profession is Alveolar Pyorrhea, commonly known as Riggs' Disease.

In such cases the gums become congested, recede from the teeth, causing them to become loose and in time to fall out.

Most dentists; in fact, we might say ALL dentists, throw up their hands when a case comes before them and declare there is no remedy for the "loose teeth" victim.

They can only suggest the "pulling" cure, and as a consequence many an unfortunate is wearing a whole or partial plate today by reason of such ignorant advice.

It seems a pity. Teeth perfectly sound—just LOOSE. WE CURE SUCH CASES AND GUARANTEE THE WORK.

When we make this statement we are fully aware that almost every other dentist in town will want to argue the question with us and enter a firm denial that Riggs' Disease can be cured.

Why not? Simply because they have tried and failed.

That won't do for an answer.

If YOU have some loose teeth, and want a practical demonstration of our ability to cure the cause and make the gums strong and healthy again, it is only a short walk to our offices.

It will be an easy matter to make to "fish or cut bait." The examination is absolutely free.

A few years ago Marconi came before the world and said he could send messages through the air without the use of wires.

Every telegraph operator in the land said, "Nonsense, it can't be done." But Marconi did it, and is doing it today.

We shall go a step farther and make a broader claim for our method of curing loose teeth.

If you have two or more teeth in either jaw, whether tight or loose, we will not only tighten the loose ones, but will build teeth around them and give you a full set of teeth that will look, feel and to all intents and for all purposes be the same as those that nature gave you, WITHOUT USING A PLATE.

With these teeth you will be able to chew beefsteak or anything else you care to eat, and get all the enjoyment you used to get when you had all your natural teeth.

Now, if this statement is true, it is remarkable.

Such a thing had never been attempted before and we patented the process. It is so remarkable that we are not surprised sometimes that doubting Thomases who come here and demand proof before they will have the work done. We are glad to give you the PROOF.

Don't, we beg of you; don't allow a single loose tooth to be pulled without first letting us look at it.

Send for Dr. Rex's book, "Alveolar Dentistry," which goes into details. It is FREE. But where possible come to our offices and let us look your teeth over. This is free, too.

BRONZE TELLS HERO'S STORY.

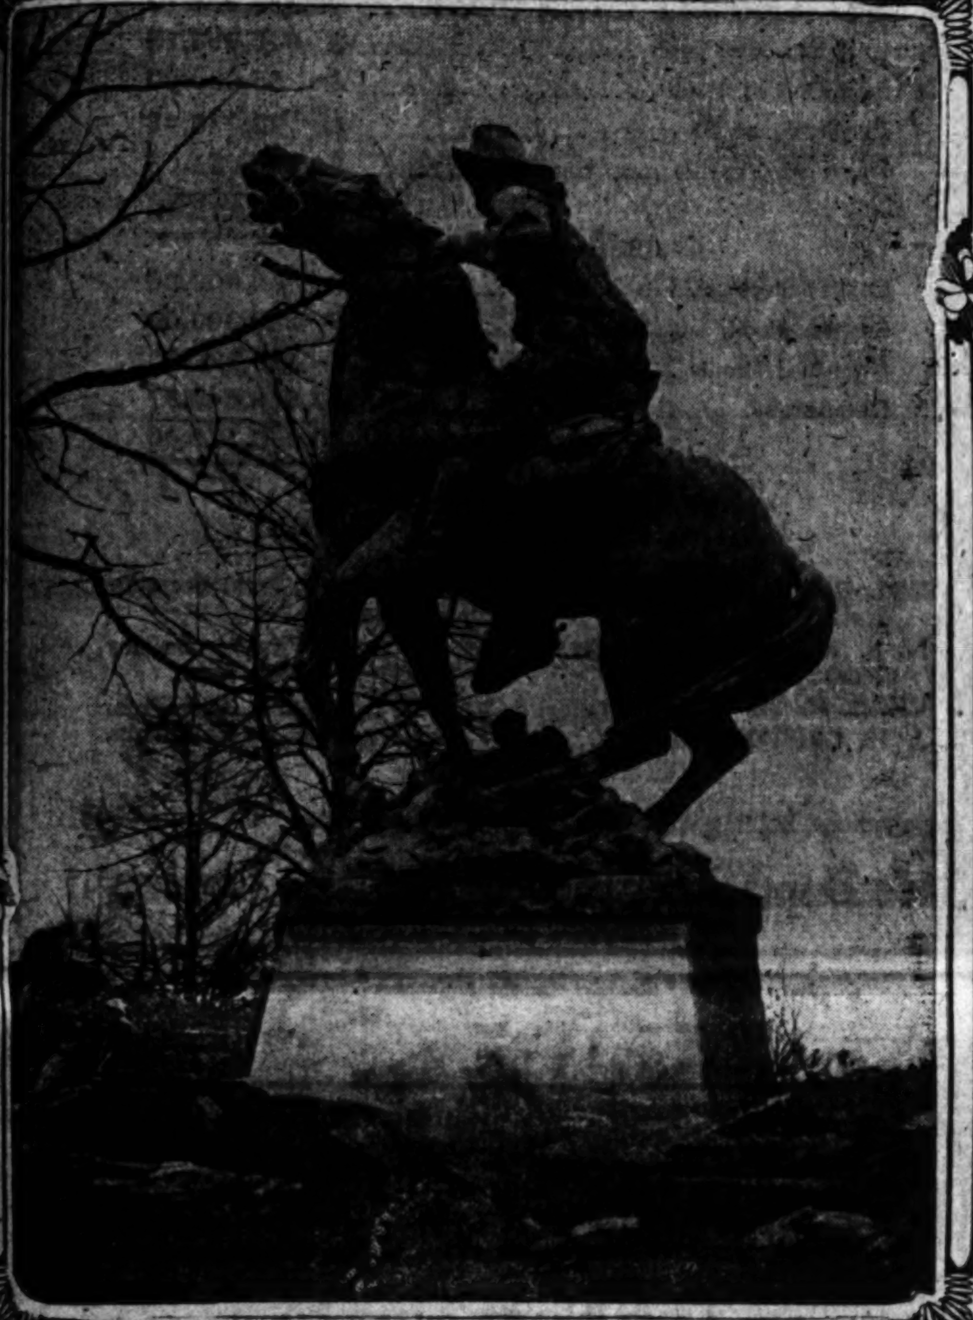
Honors at Prescott for "Buckey" O'Neill.

Enduring Metal Image to Be Dedicated There.

Monument for Soldier Who Fell in Cuba.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) June 29.—On July 1, 1898, in a Cuban jungle, Capt. William O. O'Neill fell by an unaimed Spanish bullet. On Wednesday, July 3, the people of Arizona propose to dedicate at Prescott a monument erected in his honor, and in honor also, of the other Arizona Rough Riders who died under the colors in Cuba.



ue of Capt. William O. ("Buckey") O'Neill, to be dedicated at Prescott, Ariz., next Wednesday.

The monument, on the Prescott Plaza, is on the very spot where Arizona's first two troops of the First United States Volunteer Cavalry were paraded May 1, 1898, to receive their formal farewell. O'Neill, affectionately known as "Buckey," then was Mayor of Prescott. The city government, lacking time to procure a saber, armed him for the fray with the best revolver that could be found at home. To the squadron the ladies of Phoenix presented a home-made silk flag that served as regimental colors during the brief war, and which now, bullet-torn, has honored place in the Territorial Capitol.

The flag presentation was by Gov. M. H. McCord. There were short expressions of acknowledgement from senior officers and then was put in motion what is believed to have been the first military column started for the front. Maj. Alex O. Brodie (later Governor of Arizona,) was in command. The captains were O'Neill and McClintock, and the lieutenants J. L. B. Alexander, Frank Frantz, George B. Wilcox and J. B. Patterson. When Troop C was formed, Alexander was made its captain and Frantz (later Governor of Oklahoma,) succeeded to the command of Troop A on O'Neill's death. Later, also, T. H. Rynning, J. D. Carter and Samuel Greenwald were promoted to lieutenancies.

It is believed that O'Neill was the first to suggest the idea of the formation of a western cowboy regiment at the time when war with Spain first began to be a possibility. He and his associates had enrolled nearly 1000 suitable men for enlistment even a month before the declaration of hostilities. They didn't call them "Rough Riders," for the term was not known in the Far West in those days. But when war came, instead of a regiment, the War Department allotted Arizona only two troops of cavalry, with total strength of 214 men.

So down to that limit there had to be elimination, much to the disgust of the hundreds of available Arizonians necessarily left behind. It is probable that no organization of volunteer soldiery ever had more rigid examination for enlistment.

STRONG HOLD ON MEN.

O'Neill's only military experience had been as a militia captain, in command of the Prescott Grays, about 1887. In the field he proved an excellent officer, alert and painstaking, with the strongest of hold on his men. It is history how, after passing unhurt through the hot fight at Guasimas, he was killed at San Juan. Implored by his men to use the cover of a sunken road they were hugging, while in reserve, as shelter from the stray bullets that sang angrily through the trees, he rolled his last cigarette and airily observed, with a wave of his hand, "The Spanish bullet isn't molded that will hit me." Then it was that he was struck down by the messenger of death. He died as bravely and as recklessly as he had lived.

Much has been written concerning an alleged utterance of O'Neill's, "Who would not die for a star?" This has been interpreted variously as meaning the annexation of Cuba and the placing of Arizona's star of Statehood on the nation's flag. It is probable that its basis can be traced back to a dramatic presentation of commissions to the Arizona officers in Phoenix, when Adjt.-Gen. E. Allyn Lewis, lifting his glass of wine, exclaimed: "Here we drink the soldier's toast: Death or a star!" Lewis then explained that he meant that a soldier's ambition should be attainment of the star that marks a general's rank.

O'Neill was 38 years of age, born and reared in Washington and there educated in Georgetown College. With a knowledge of typesetting and stenography as his capital, he came to Arizona in September, 1879, to be a compositor on the Phoenix Herald. He was printer and court stenographer for years, working both in Arizona and New Mexico, even then noted for a reckless liberality that made him a friend in every man "down on his luck." Finally, in Prescott, he was elected Probate Judge, later gaining the lucrative office of Sheriff at a time when the notorious Tonto Basin war was on and "things were doing."

It is proud local history how O'Neill brought in a batch of Basin outlaws and how he ran down the Cañon Diablo train robbers. About 1902 he became dissatisfied with the way the Mormons were assailed in a Territorial Republican convention and turned from the Republican party to Populism. It is worthy of note that in that convention the successful opposition was led by R. E. Morrison, now a leader in the movement toward honoring the hero's memory. As a Populist, O'Neill twice ran for Congress, in one contest narrowly approaching election. Despite the fact that he gave away his loose cash to any cowboy or prospector who asked, he became even wealthy in his latter days through the sale of an onyx mine near Prescott and of copper claims near the Grand Cañon of Arizona. The money he realized he placed mainly in Phoenix realty, still held by his widow.

REARING THE MEMORIAL.

The idea of a monument to the Rough Rider dead is believed to have been broached first by M. J. Hickey of Prescott, one of O'Neill's oldest friends. To private subscriptions made has been added a donation of $10,000 by the Territorial Legislature and one of $1000 by the Supervisors of Yavapai county. President Roosevelt sent a check of dimensions noted by the committee as "generous." The statue itself is of bronze, designed by Solon H. Borglum of New York, a sculptor who achieved fame at the St. Louis Exposition through his cowboy and Indian figures. Naturally, the statue is equestrian, the figure half cowboy, half soldier, in a pose alert and effective. Horse and rider, the casting is ten and one-half feet in height. The pedestal is a great granite boulder, taken from a near-by hill, raising the statue to a total height of eighteen feet.

In the celebration that Prescott has arranged is something of a disappointment. It was scheduled that the next reunion of the Rough Riders' Association should be at the time of the dedication. This spring it was announced that President Roosevelt, honorary president of the association, would be unable to attend. Upon receipt of this news, President C. E. Hunter announced the abandonment of the regimental reunion for this year. So few Rough Riders are expected from outside of Arizona. Hardly half the Arizona troopers now are in the Territory. Many died on Cuban battlefields or, later, of Cuban fever, and the survivors are widely scattered.

Elaborate plans are afoot for the dedication. Gov. Kibbey will be present and will accept the monument in the name of the Territory. It is expected, also, that Gen. Adna R. Chaffee will be a guest and will deliver an address at the unveiling. The parade will be joined in by troops from Whipple Barracks and by local organizations, and the exercises will be the beginning of a patriotic celebration that is to fill every hour of two days' time. John S. McGroarty of Los Angeles will be the poet of the day.

H. C. Withrow of Duluth, Minn., who went to Butte, Mont., two weeks ago for the benefit of his health, committed suicide at the home of his brother-in-law, by drinking carbolic acid. He was 40 years old and unmarried.

Every loan held by this bank is properly and sufficiently secured by first mortgage on real estate. Valuations are very generally below the selling value. No money is loaned on personal security. No loans are made to any officer, director or employe on any security whatever, neither are they personally interested, directly or indirectly, in any loan made or security purchased.

Under the law the directors are trustees for the depositors, and as such will gladly furnish information to them at any time concerning the investment of their funds.

We encourage small savings accounts, as well as the larger deposits, for permanent investment. Interest compounded semi-annually.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS

Four Per Cent. on Term Deposits Three Per Cent. on Ordinary Deposits

For the accommodation of those who have money temporarily idle, but which may be needed at any time, WE ISSUE CERTIFICATES OF DEPOSIT BEARING 3 PER CENT. INTEREST FOR TIME ACTUALLY DEPOSITED, with a stipulation that thirty days' notice may be required before payment. It is the custom, however, to pay these on presentation.

DEPOSITS IN SAVINGS BANKS ARE EXEMPT FROM TAXATION

The right uniformly reserved by savings banks, to require notice, before any sum may be withdrawn, is not ordinarily enforced, but as a general rule depositors are permitted to make withdrawals at will.

No new unrestricted checking accounts are being opened. By SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT ONLY with those who find it inconvenient to come to the bank to draw money, we permit checks to be issued against the ORDINARY account.

These "SPECIAL ACCOUNTS" bear interest at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum, computed on the smallest amount on deposit each calendar month. No interest will be paid for any month in which this smallest balance is less than $300.00.

OUR NEW SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS AFFORD EVERY MODERN SAFEGUARD FOR THE SAFE-KEEPING OF VALUABLES.

"OLD GUARD" GETS A SHOCK.

UTILITIES COMMISSIONS NAMED BY GOV. HUGHES.

Men Comparatively Unknown in Public Affairs Are Selected, Much to Disgust of Politicians, Who Were Figuring on Securing Several Rich Plums.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Completely ignoring political considerations and selecting only such men as he thought would most faithfully serve the interests of the people, Gov. Hughes today appointed the two State utilities commissions to regulate the public service corporations of the State. The commission for New York City is composed of these men.

William R. Wilcox, Manhattan, chairman (R.)
Milo Roy Maltbie (Ind. R.)
William McCarroll (R.)
Edward M. Bassett (D.)
John Edwin Eustis (Ind. R.)

The commission for the rest of the State is composed of:

Frank W. Stevens, chairman (R.)
Charles Hallam Keep (R.)
Thomas M. Osborne, Auburn (Ind. D.)
James E. Sague, New Hamburg (R.)
Martin S. Decker, New Paltz (D.)

Surprise was general at the selections, particularly at the members of the New York commission. While every one conceded that the appointees are all men of the cleanest records, it was a subject of comment that practically none of them had been discussed, and that some of them are men comparatively unknown in public affairs. They will draw salaries of $15,000 a year each.

Believing that, after all, Gov. Hughes, in his appointments to the $15,000 jobs—places which few Governors ever have had to distribute—would remember some of the old-line Republican leaders, the "Old Guard," was deeply disappointed.

The public utilities statute recently enacted over Mayor McClellan's veto gives the two commissions whom the Governor has appointed extraordinary and sweeping powers over the public service corporations. Among other things the commissions may fix the charges to be made for street railway fare, gas, electric lighting, etc.; authorise or deny stock and dividend issues, mergers, etc.; compel improvements of properties; and regulate the relations between employer and employé.

TURBINES TO BE UTILIZED.

DEPARTURE TO BE MADE IN NAVAL POLICY OF AMERICA.

Decision Is Reached to Place Curtis Engine in One of New Battleships of Dreadnought Class—Secretary of Navy Defers Action on Contracts for Vessels.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Secretary of the Navy Metcalf has received the recommendations of the Board of Naval Construction as to contracts for the two 20,000-ton battleships of the Delaware or American Dreadnought class, and submarine torpedo boats. He deferred action until tomorrow, but it is known that the board's recommendation is favorable to these contracts:

One battleship, with Curtis turbines, to be built by the Fore River Shipbuilding Company of Quincy, Mass., for $4,377,000; one battleship, with reciprocating engines, to be built by the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company of Newport News, Va., for $3,987,000; five or more Holland submarine torpedo boats, to be built as designated by the government at varying prices.

Secretary Metcalf inclines to follow closely the recommendations of the board, in which he reposes great confidence, not only because of the ability of its members as experts in construction, ordnance, steam engineering and equipment, but also because of the experience of Rear-Admirals Converse, Mason and Cowles as seagoing officers. The installation of turbines in one of these ships will mark an important departure in American naval policy. The British battleship Dreadnought, already in commission, is equipped with turbines, but their installation in three scout cruisers, still under construction, is the limit of American naval progress in this direction. The Newport News company entered a bid for a battleship equipped with the Parsons or British type of turbines, which differs from the Curtis, or American type, in that it has four propellers instead of two.

CARNEGIE TALKS HOPEFULLY.

Declares That General Decline in Values in United States Will Be of Benefit.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

LONDON, June 29.—Andrew Carnegie, in an interview, dealing with G. B. Harvey's recent statement that President Roosevelt's popularity in Europe was due to the fact that his policy had driven from France, Germany and Great Britain all thoughts of American industrial rivalry, says:

"These countries and their governments are not so savage as to gloat over the misfortunes of other lands. No nation can prosper without Great Britain sharing its prosperity, and no nation can suffer reverses without Great Britain suffering also. The same applies to France and Germany.

"It is a surprising commentary on Mr. Harvey's charge that under President Roosevelt's administration our country had enjoyed the greatest season of material prosperity ever known."

Mr. Carnegie thinks the present general decline of values in the United States is nothing serious; that it is in every respect a wholesome check which it is much better to have come to the surface, and that the President's declared intention to regulate corporations is a factor to only a trivial extent. He says that the President is a truly conservative man, who recognizes abuses. He is the best friend of the railroads, and, so far from lowering the value of bonds and shares, will enhance their value and give to the European investor an element of security hitherto lacking.

PEASANTS REVOLT.

TULA (Russia) June 29.—The incendiary movement among the peasants in revenge for the dissolution of Parliament has assumed serious proportions. Six large estates including those of Count Vladimir Bobrinsky, president of the Constitutional Democratic party, and Princess Vjadebolnskaya, were devastated by incendiary fires yesterday. The losses were very heavy.

JAPANESE BASE PLEA ON TRADE.

CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE SEND ADDRESSES TO AMERICA.

In One to Like Organization in United States and Another to President Roosevelt Fear Is Expressed That Commercial Relations Between Two Nations Will Suffer.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

TOKIO, June 29.—At a joint meeting of five Chambers of Commerce here it was resolved to address the principal chambers of commerce in America as follows:

"It has always been a matter of profound satisfaction to the people of Japan to witness the constant growth of cordial relations between our two countries and of our community interests in the field of trade and commerce, but since last year the people in a section of your country have unfortunately acted in a manner calculated to prejudice the legitimate rights of the Japanese people, who have been frequently subjected to unjust and abusive treatment at the hands of a lawless element prevailing there.

"The right of education has been denied them; their houses have been repeatedly attacked and their property destroyed without the least cause or provocation, with the result that not only have the treaty rights of the Japanese been wantonly disregarded, but their persons and property also, have been exposed to serious danger.

"It is to be extremely regretted that such unfortunate incidents should be allowed to occur so frequently, as it is feared that unless they are speedily stopped the ill-feeling which our countrymen are now constrained to harbor against the people of a single section in America may eventually have an unhappy effect upon the development of the commercial relations between the two nations, for while the United States is a good customer for our national products, Japan is also increasing her demand for American goods and promises to become one of the most important markets for your ever expanding and prosperous industries.

"Should the progress of trade and commerce between the two nations be obstructed as the result of the unwarrantable action of a small section of your population, the loss sustained by the two countries would be incalculable.

"We therefore venture to address you and express our views on the situation, confident in the hope that they will be shared by you and that you will, considering the matter on the right principles of national intercourse and the mutual advantages of trade relations, do your best to speedily eliminate the present causes of discord and to insure our common prosperity for the future."

SEND MEMORIAL TO PRESIDENT.

The Chambers of Commerce have also addressed President Roosevelt as follows:

"We have always watched with profound satisfaction the growing strength of the bonds of traditional friendship between America and Japan, coupled with the steady progress of the commerce between the two nations. It is therefore a source of deep regret and concern to learn of the actions frequently reported since last year of a section of the community in San Francisco against Japanese residents there, whose presence and property have thus been exposed to serious danger. While highly appreciating your unremitting efforts in the cause of justice, we humbly think that if such abuses are allowed to continue the development of commerce based upon the friendly relations of the two nations may be eventually retarded.

"We, the undersigned representatives of Chambers of Commerce, taking special interest in the promotion of our mutual economic relations, are unable to remain silent spectators of this state of affairs.

"We accordingly have addressed the principal chambers of commerce in America, inviting them to exert their best endeavors for the amelioration of this situation, relying at the same time upon your personality and wisdom for a speedy and satisfactory solution of existing difficulties, and we respectfully appeal to you for your friendly support."

AGAIN IN CUSTODY.

Douglas Dawson Escapes from Private Hospital and Is Captured by Detectives.

Douglas Dawson, the alleged defaulting cashier of the William Hoegee Company, is detained in the Receiving Hospital by the request of his wife. Mrs. Dawson had her husband removed to a private sanatorium at No. 2814 Downey avenue about a week ago because he threatened her life.

Immediately after Dawson escaped from the sanatorium Mrs. Dawson was notified. She called the police and asked them to take charge of her husband as she feared that he might attack her. About 5:30 o'clock last night Dawson was located at Second and Broadway and was taken in custody by a detective. Dawson is said to have been under the influence of liquor.

On April 16 Dawson was held by Justice Frederickson to answer to the Superior Court on the charge of stealing $1730 from the Hoegee Company. Dawson's trial was set for July 17. Since that time he has been residing at his home on Westlake avenue, but a week ago he was sent to the sanatorium. His wife arranged for his detainment there with Dr. Brainard.

It develops that Mrs. Dawson told the police yesterday after she learned of Dawson's escape that he has several times hurled her to the floor and threatened her life.

At the time that Dawson was held to answer to the Superior Court his attorney, Earl Rogers, stated that the case would be thrown out of court or at least would be dismissed after the evidence was heard.

Rogers maintained in his argument before Justice Frederickson, that Dawson was the victim of a plot in which Fred Hartman, one of the owners of the Hoegee company, was the principal plotter. Rogers also maintained that Adolfo Hartman was implicated in the plot.

Last night Dawson was sullen and appeared to be in a dejected mood. He had just had a private conversation with his wife. When asked whether he had been drinking or not Dawson assumed an insulted air, and became insolent. He said he did not wish to have any conversation with those who truckled with the police. Then he hurled abuse at the officers.

According to the officers, Dawson has pawned his valuable diamond ring and also pawned his watch yesterday. He is supposed to have had a check for $180 in his possession, but this was not found when he was taken to the Police Station. It was stated by the acting Chief of Police that Dawson will, in all probability, be removed to the Downey-avenue sanatorium today or tomorrow.

FRUIT MEN FEARFUL.

SACRAMENTO, June 29.—California's dried-fruit interests are doing considerable worrying over an act passed by the last Congress, which forbids the use of sulphur in all food products.

Already the bill has been signed by one or two of the government departments at Washington, and combined efforts are being made in this State to prevent the act going any further and becoming a law.

Sulphur is used in California to dry every variety of fruit, and it is declared if such a law were put in [illegible] and the use of sulphur pr[illegible] would cause untold losses to Cal[illegible] fruit men.

The Beautiful "Redondo Villa Tract B" The Beautiful

Only $90 Per Lot $4 Down, $4 Per Month No Interest, No Taxes

Dirt is Flying, Rails Are Being Laid, Spikes Are Being Driven. Join the Rush to Redondo

Large, level lots, 50x150 feet. Rich Soil, Pure Water, Fine Climate. All lots, including corners, one price—$90 per lot—no more, no less. You know what you have to pay—$90 per lot—no higher. At Redondo over $2,000,000 has already been expended in grand and substantial improvements. The beautiful "Redondo Villa Tract B" is on the Camino Real (King's Highway) boulevard connecting Redondo with Los Angeles. We have just bought this beautiful tract for $151,000, and believing in the principle that it pays to let our customers make a profit, hence we have decided on this grand profit-sharing plan. We will make a profit and all our purchasers are guaranteed a profit of 25 per cent. within one year, as per our written agreement.

MR. H. E. HUNTINGTON IS EXPENDING OVER A MILLION DOLLARS AROUND REDONDO IN SUBSTANTIAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Go down to Redondo and see for yourself. At Jefferson street and Grand avenue see the immense stacks of heavy steel rails for the double-tracking of the present two electric lines of the Los Angeles and Redondo Railway Company. The rails are arriving daily. Dirt is now flying. Better buy now. Then there's the Los Angeles-Pacific Railway Co.'s electric line to Redondo, the broad-gauging of which will soon occur. And in addition to the above three electric lines now running to Redondo is the great Santa Fe steam railroad. With four lines of transportation it would seem as if same would be sufficient, but surveyors are in the field laying out the shortest line of all to connect Los Angeles with its choicest seashore suburb—Redondo. Mr. Huntington is now building at Redondo the largest electric power house on the Pacific Coast, to cost $1,250,000, as fast as men and money can do it. Go down and look at the mammoth cement smokestack.

A suburban electric railroad is now nearing completion at Redondo. The grand three-story business block of Mr. W. M. Garland at Redondo is just finished. Follow successful men like Mr. Huntington and Mr. Garland—they know that Redondo is substantial and a safe place to invest in. Buy anywhere around Redondo and you are sure to make large profits. Three commercial wharves. A safe harbor by twenty years' practical test. Redondo is permanent and has just begun to grow. Then again, referring to successful men, we notice that the following men have bought to the north of Redondo:

Mr. Edwin Chambers, the far-sighted General Freight Agent of the Santa Fe; Mr. George H. Peck, the successful banker of San Pedro; Mr. John J. Byrne, the capable General Passenger Agent of the Santa Fe, and Dan Murphy, the millionaire oil operator of Los Angeles. A word to the wise is sufficient. BUY.

Remember that your purchase is made with the distinct understanding that we will refund all money paid us, with 6 per cent. per annum interest added, if, after visiting the "Redondo Villa Tract B" it is found that we have misrepresented our proposition in the slightest particular.

25 Per Cent. Guaranteed Increase

For $4 down and $4 per month until paid for we will sell you a "Redondo Villa Tract B" lot for $90, subject to the following guarantee from us: If at the expiration of one year from purchase this $90 lot is not worth $112.50—or 25 per cent. increase—based on the price at which our corps of salesmen will then be selling similar lots, we will refund all the money you have paid us, with 6 per cent. interest additional. If you should die at any time before payments have been completed, we will give to your heirs a deed of the lot without further cost. If you should lose employment or be sick you will not forfeit the land, but as each written certificate of sickness or non-employment is received monthly your time for payment will be extended another month.

THE GRAND MILLION DOLLAR HOTEL AND TROPICAL GARDENS AT REDONDO.

Free car tickets to Redondo furnished all interested. Electric cars leave every twenty minutes.

Get your free tickets at our office in advance. Automobiles will carry you around Redondo and to the beautiful "Redondo Villa Tract B."

GRANDEST SUCCESS OF THE SEASON—Everybody delighted. The golden spike of the Redondo Villa railroad was driven January 6—the commencement of great transportation facilities for the Redondo Villa Tract. The roadbed has been graded, ties are on the ground, rails will soon be laid.

Title Guaranteed Absolutely Perfect

The 604 acres of the Rancho Sausal Redondo, embraced in the "Redondo Villa Tract B," was purchased by us from George H. Peck, president of the Bank of San Pedro, for $151,000.

It is protected by an Unlimited Certificate of Title and all deeds to purchasers of lots in the "Redondo Villa Tract B" will be Warranty Deeds, which is an assurance that every purchaser in the "Redondo Villa Tract B" will receive an absolutely perfect deed.

Be On Hand Early. Come at Once

This sale of large, level lots, 50x150 feet in size, for only $90, in payments of $4 down, $4 month—no interest, no taxes—is unparalleled.

Remember that the "Redondo Villa Tract B" has the advantage of having no city taxes to pay.

Our Restrictions

No saloons, no shanties, no factories. Purchasers are not compelled to build, but if they do then they must erect attractive looking houses, there being no "dollar limit."

We leave it to each purchaser to build a pretty looking house, which must be neatly painted, as we know that for a moderate sum one can now build a very pretty bungalow. Lumber is cheap at Redondo, as there are three commercial wharves at Redondo, at which lumber schooners are daily discharging their cargoes.

If Russell Sage, the multi-millionaire of New York, told you that you could make a fortune in suburban real estate (especially when it costs you only $4 down and $4 per month) wouldn't you be impressed? Well, listen! That's just what Mr. Sage did say in the New York World of September 28, 1902: "Young man, buy real estate, especially acre property, in the outlying boroughs, and then work hard at your usual vocation. Your real estate purchase will make your old age comfortable."—Russell Sage.

COME ONE! COME ALL!—Office open every night during week days from 7 to 9 p. m. to accommodate those who cannot come during the day.

BUY WHERE THE AIR IS THE PURE OZONE FROM OFF THE HEALTH-RESTORING WATERS OF THE PACIFIC.

Buy where the soil is rich and injurious frosts never prevail.

Buy around Redondo, where there are three electric lines and one steam railroad, and there will soon be another electric line.

Buy where the purest of water, from the large water works now on the tract, can be had for only 7½ cents per thousand gallons for irrigation.

Buy where you will make large profits.

Buy at the opening sale, which has been the history, invariably insures a great profit. If you can't be on hand at the office tomorrow morning, then telephone (Main 3379 or Home 5339,) telegraph or write at once, and a beautiful illustrated prospectus map and sample contract will be mailed to you absolutely free.

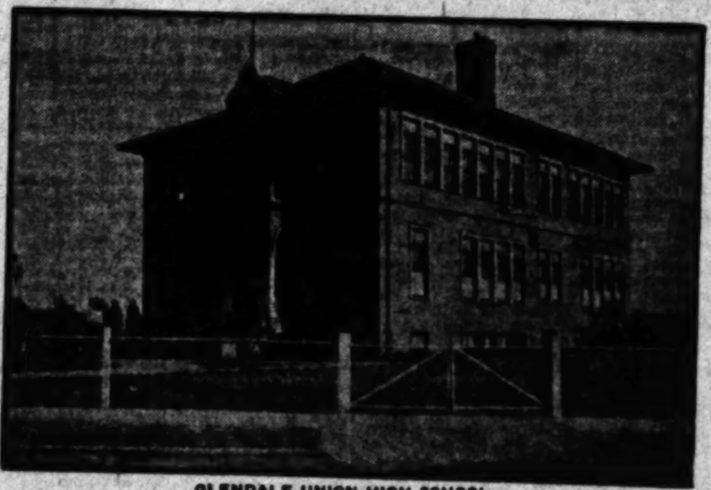
ERKENBRECHER SYNDICATE OWNERS AGENT. 122 W. 6TH ST. LOS ANGELES.

LOTS $275 AND UP
EVERY MODERN IMPROVEMENT

Eight Lots Sold In Seven Days

That's the record—not bad for a so-called quiet market. But our experience shows that there are plenty of buyers for good property at right prices, and that's what we have in Glendale Valley View Tract. The beauty of the proposition is that so many are buying for homes. It's a home-builders' tract. Just plain, comfort-seeking people—the kind that we neighbored with "back home." Three new houses started in the past week!



GLENDALE UNION HIGH SCHOOL.
Stands high among suburban institutions. Graduates are accredited to Universities. Residents in our tract send their children here, and it is only 700 feet distant. This is a feature not to be overlooked in purchasing a home-site.

There's a Good Reason Why

IT'S THE BEST THING ON THE MARKET TODAY. There's everything to make it so—cement walks and curbs; oiled streets; water—the finest mountain kind—piped in front of every lot; and—here's a feature that costs big money and is absolutely unique in suburban tracts—electric light available NOW for house use. Then look at prices—$350 to $525, and on your own terms—this last isn't talk, but fact. Let us show—at our expense.

Woman's Parliament Will Be Twig Bender.

Interesting Discussions Are Promised by the Sea.

All Southern California to Be Represented.

"All aboard for the Woman's Parliament," will be the cry at the Fourth street station tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock, when special cars will carry delegates to Santa Monica.

The local committee of arrangements, of which Mrs. D. G. Stevens is the head, reports that it expects a larger number of representatives from various woman's organizations than has ever been known at any previous meeting of the parliament.

The sessions will open Tuesday morning at Odd Fellows' Hall, but Monday evening a reception and social entertainment will be tendered to delegates and friends by the Woman's Club of Santa Monica.

The main purpose of the thirty-first annual session of the parliament will be the development of the Juvenile Court work in the counties of Southern California. A symposium for the discussion of questions affecting childhood, with prominent women from each county to give advice, will occupy a prominent place.

The programme in full is as follows: Tuesday, 10 a. m.—Singing of "Nearer My God to Thee;" invocation by Rev. F. G. H. Stevens; music; address of welcome by Mrs. W. F. Thurston, president of the Santa Monica Woman's Club, with response by Mrs. Lucy S. Blanchard, vice-president at large; "The Woman and the Day," by Mrs. B. C. Davies of Monrovia; "Health and Development, Inspection in the Public Schools," by George L. Leslie; discussion by Rev. F. G. H. Stevens of Santa Monica and Mrs. J. [illegible] of Long Beach.

Tuesday afternoon—Song, "They All Love Jack," by twenty boys from the Los Angeles Orphans' Home; "How I Won My Boys," by Mrs. W. L. Fleet of Los Angeles; symposium, "The Needs and Possibilities in Southern California of Juvenile Courts and Other Forms of Child Saving," with the following speakers: Mrs. L. L. Flower, San Diego country; Mrs. Louise Harvey Clark, Riverside county; Mrs. W. [illegible] Warner, San Bernardino county; Miss Jeanette McFadden, Orange county; Mrs. F. H. Dudley, Ventura county; Mrs. E. C. Tallant, Santa Barbara county; Dr. Dorothea Moore, Los Angeles county.

ORGAN RECITAL.

Tuesday evening, at the First Presbyterian Church, an organ recital by [illegible] Sessions; invocation by Rev. [illegible] F. Wilber of Santa Monica; reading, "Parsifal," by Mrs. Merrill Moore [illegible], with music from the opera, by [illegible] Sessions.

Wednesday morning—Reports of delegates; "Where Women Are Most Needed," by Mrs. William Baurhyte of Los Angeles, with discussion by Mrs. C. L. Grout of Pasadena and Miss Helen Platt of Corona.

Wednesday afternoon—Music; invocation by Rev. J. D. H. Browne; "Foretaste of the N.E.A.," with greetings from Dr. Elmer Ellsworth Brown, United States Commissioner of Education; "Present Problems of Education," by J. D. Francis, principal of the Polytechnic High School of Los Angeles, who will dwell especially on the need of industrial training, of night schools for adults and children over 15 years of age, and of agriculture and manual training in the rural schools; discussion conducted by Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, president of the Chicago Normal School. The sessions will close with the singing of "America" by the assembly.

Among the women's organizations which will send representatives to the parliament are civic associations, settlement associations, church societies of every sect, child-study circles, chapters of the O.E.S., suffrage leagues, humane societies, literary, musical and study clubs and patriotic societies.

Santa Monica representatives in the parliament will be Miss Margaret Fogel, Mrs. S. J. Eggleston, Mrs. Odell and Mrs. Cassie Tullis.

Massage for a Rhinoceros.

[From the New York World:] Speke, a young rhinoceros of the Bronx Park Zoo, was put into the hands of six massage artists yesterday for such treatment as Dr. Blair, the zoo veterinarian, had prescribed to keep his skin healthy. The masseurs went at the brute with scouring soaps, pumice and scrub brushes so coarse that even Speke's rhinoceros hide was penetrated. He set up a bellowing and snorting that started the elephants trumpeting and the rest of the zoo in a chorus that sounded to the monkeys like the last awakening.

The rhino was pacified only when a hose was turned on him and the soap and sand washed out of his hide. An oil rub, which consumed several gallons of linseed, finished the toilet. It made Speke's skin shine like ebony, and the jealous hippo, seeing himself in the mirror of his neighbor, beheld all his ugliness and was forced to shed a tear.

The object of the massage was to supply what Speke misses by being deprived of wallowing in mud and marshes. Without massage and the oil rub his hide would crack open.

The Grateful Lioness.

[In Vino Veritas, in the New York Sun:] After all, John Burroughs' story is the best, and, as I saw it in the Sun, it's true. A lieutenant of an English regiment stationed in Africa was hunting for big game. He was fearless, but for some reason he hesitated to shoot at the great lioness that approached. Nearer and nearer she came, and was limping. The big-hearted soldier took out the thorn that he saw was in her foot and she limped away gratefully. And the Britisher forgot the incident.

Not so with her ladyship. She returned the next night, looked over the roster of the regiment, and ate every officer that ranked the lieutenant, who, of course, by her act of gratitude, was made a colonel.

Houses, Lots and Lands—Review of Building and Development Continued.

ALL PAY WITH PROMPTNESS.

Buyers on Installment Plan Have Ready Money.

Realty Men Report no Contracts Repudiated.

Foreclosures Less, Compared With Last Year.

The strongest feature of the Los Angeles Realty market is the fact that those people who purchased property last summer on the installment plan are all meeting their payments, as the latter fall due, monthly or quarterly, as the contract may be. This fact, that people in all walks of life, from the hardworking laborer to the middle-class investor, are making their payments, is a most reassuring condition, and speaks well for the general prosperity of the city.

The number of foreclosures filed between the dates of January 1, and July 1, 1906, compared with the records for a similar period for 1907, shows a healthy condition. There were thirty-five notices of Action to Foreclosure Mortgages during 1906, in the period designated, while only thirty-two have been filed to date for this year.

There are fewer mortgages going on record for this month, as compared with June 1906, as the following table will show:

COMPARATIVE STATEMENT FOR JUNE.

	1906.	1907.
Deeds	[illegible]	[illegible]
Trust deeds	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mortgages	[illegible]	[illegible]
Releases of mortgages	[illegible]	[illegible]
Marginal releases	344	278

There are fewer mortgages being released this June, than there were for the same month of 1906, by exactly [illegible] documents. There are also a fewer number of mortgages being filed, in fact there were 216 less for June, of this year than for June of last year, there being 1506 for the present month with 1722 for last June. These totals are reached by adding the total number of trust deeds filed to the mortgages, as the former really are mortgages. The fact that there are fewer releases being filed and also that the foreclosures are less than heretofore, points to the conclusion that many of last year's mortgages have been taken up.

No one could speak with more authority about this favorable condition than the firms which have been selling thousands of dollars' worth of property a year on the installment plan. They report that very few contracts have been surrendered, some say they have had a few cases where persons have not met their paymnts, while other agents have the encouraging report to make that to date they have not had a single "fall down." A representative of The Times saw fully a dozen of the heaviest operators in this line, and obtained written statements from each. These statements follow:

Moye W. Stephens, manager of the Stephens Investment Company, made the following; "This office has real estate contracts and mortgages for sales of real estate aggregating a total of $370,000; balance at this time unpaid, about $150,000 from one hundred purchasers. All payments are being punctually and promptly made, except only in two cases, one of $25, overdue sixty days, the other of $500, overdue the same period. In the latter case the extention was asked and granted. All purchasers are satisfied with their purchases, and we receive no complaints whatever. While sales are not so active as in the past, values are well sustained and good feeling prevails."

"Out of more than 2000 contracts, of the kind you name, I have had less than 4 per cent. surrendered," is what M. L. Wicks, a well-known operator says. "My terms have been about 10 per cent. down, with monthly payments of $10. I find this character of contract has been much easier to handle, and that the payments are more promptly made, than are the larger payments. Of the $700,000 worth of property, which I sold on the installment plan in the old San José ranch, only one purchaser, out of the entire number surrendered his contract. This generally was acreage property. Most of my clients are people working on salaries."

"We have never had a fall down" is the way in which Mr. Burck, of the Burck-Gwynn Company, opens his statement. "We have been in the business since February 1904, a little over two years and a half, and have handled about 2000 contracts, placing the number by a conservative estimate. Of these 200 or more have been on both house and lot, while the remainder were sub-division lots. All our payments have been met promptly, except on one or two cases, where the people were sick and then an extension was granted. Our terms have always been from 10 to 25 per cent., of the entire purchase price, down in the case of houses with the balance at the rate of 1 to 2 per cent. per month, as we always figured to have the payments about the same as the same house would rent for. For lots the first payment would be from 10 to 25 per cent. of the price, with payments monthly at as low as 2 per cent. The surprising part of the whole installment business is the fact the large percentage of purchasers, who come in and pay up the whole purchase price, long before they have to, byt the terms of their contract. It is my opinion that the average buyer of Los Angeles real estate hates more to pay interest than to pay up at once. We have had experience with all classes of purchasers as we have had twelve subdivisions, practically encircling the city, and have sold property to workmen and small clerks to the middle classes and even surprisingly rich men. The latter class being attracted by the fact that they can make their own money earn more than the 7 per cent. we charge."

The firm of Strong and Dickenson is among the heaviest operators in this field. The statement issued by Mr. Dickenson is as follows: "We have been selling lots on the installment plan, of $25 to $50 down, and the balance in monthly payments of from $10 to $20, or one-quarter down and the balance in six, twelve and eighteen months, for more than six years, and have not had more than six cases where the persons, purchasing, have failed to complete the terms of the contract."

The Janss Investment Company state that they have sold more than 800 lots on this plan of 10 per cent. down, and payments of $10 a month, and have not had ten contracts repudiated in the three years in which they have been in business. Their clients have mostly been among the working classes, the property handled being located east of the city, on the East First street carline. Most of the purchasers have improved their purchases with homes, and the company report that there is a great loyalty manifested for their homes by this class of people.

Emil Firth says in his statement: "We have handled about 2000 contracts. Our purchasers have been from the working classes up to the small clerks. Our terms are similar to those of other firms dealing on the installment plan, and we do not have above twenty purchasers fail to meet their obligations."

Edwards & Winters Co., while it has not handled as many contracts, has sold within the last two years about 350 lots in Eagle Rock Valley, on the installment plan, and of that number only two actual lapses occurred. "Some have come in for a short extension, but beyond these few, payments have been made promptly, and our collections easily effected."

Leo J. Maguire has handled considerable property within the last two years on the installment plan. "I have sold about 325 subdivision lots on terms of one-quarter down, with the balance in quarterly payments in nine, eighteen and twenty-seven months. Thus far I have not had a single contract cancelled. The second payments, which have been falling due for property in Vermont Avenue Square, are being made promptly. These range in size from $160 to $600 each, and no trouble is evinced by purchasers in making the payment. Building operations also have been begun in a majority of cases, showing a ready supply of cash. My clients have been among the middle and upper classes."

The report sent in by the Southern California Real Estate Investment Company is as follows:

"We take pleasure in reporting that of the four subdivisions we have bought in the past two years, we have sold every lot in two tracts. The first was put on sale in 1905, sale completed April 19, 1906. It was sold on terms of $10 down and $10 per month. Only one purchaser forfeited a lot. The second tract was all sold in 1906, in terms $50 down and $10 per month. There has not been a single forfeiture up to date. The third tract comprised 400 lots, was put on sale January 3, 1906; terms $50 down and $10 per month; up to date we have sold 270 lots, only 16 per cent. have lapsed and on the balance payments are being made promptly. This subdivision, as with the other two tracts we sold, is being improved, purchasers building and arranging to build houses on their lots, and values advancing in proportion, so that we feel confident that all holders of contracts are satisfied with their investments and will pay out. Our last and largest tract is country property, subdivided into 225 five-acre lots, for which we find a great demand. It is true there has been much speculation in lots and subdivisions by buyers who did not have the means to carry out the contracts they made—they were purely speculators—and when they were not able to realize a big profit, quickly forfeited their holdings."

The above reports, received from the heaviest operators in this line, cannot help but be reassuring. A careful study will show that less than 1 per cent. of the entire amount of property purchased on this plan has returned to the sellers through the inability of the purchaser to make his regular payments.

HOTEL FOR NAPLES.

The Napoli Will Be a Counterpart of Hotel Hollywood—At Head of Canal.

Work will be begun next Tuesday on the foundation for the Hotel Napoli, the site for which was purchased at Naples by Miss Mira Hershey last week from the Naples Improvement Company, consisting of three lots located at the end of the grand canal, overlooking the entire stretch of waterways, the bay and the Pacific Ocean outside the embankment. The site cost Miss Hershey $10,000.

The hotel will cost about $50,000, and will conform in style and appearance with the other red-tiled-roofed buildings, for which Naples is now famous. The architects are Dennis and Farwell, who designed the picturesque Hotel Hollywood, for Miss Hershey, and are planning Hotel Napoli on similar lines. An illustration, taken from the architects drawing, appears on this page, and shows a handsome building. It will measure 100 feet front by 150 feet in depth, and will be four stories high. The lower floor will be occupied with the office rotunda, sun parlor and lounging-room, dining-room, billiard-room, grill and kitchen. The next two floors will be used for apartments. Each room will be connected with a bath. There is a large roof garden overhead, roofed with red tiles. There is a large veranda surrounding the building. Frame and plaster, over wire lath will be the material used in the construction.

FIFTY THOUSAND FOR SITE.

Price Paid by Miss Housle for Twenty Acres—Will Build New School.

Fifty thousand dollars is the price reported to have been paid by Miss Florence Housle for a tract of twenty acres at the corner of Huntington Drive and Fremont avenue, Oneonta Park. Henry E. Huntington is the grantor. Miss Housle is the proprietor of Hunting Hall, a school for young ladies, now occupying the old Childs' Homestead on South Main street, between Eleventh and Twelfth streets.

Plans, it is said, are being prepared by a famous European architect for a handsome and artistic group of buildings, which the purchaser plans to erect on the property, and move her school to a better location. There is a truncated hill on the property, almost the only one for several miles around, and this will be utilized as a site for the buildings, as from the top of this hill a matchless view of Pasadena, Los Angeles, and the entire San Gabriel Valley can be obtained. The buildings will be begun within a few months, and will be finished in time for the fall term of 1908. The architect, who has prepared the plans, is said to have made a thorough study of architecture in Spain, and will adapt those particular types in designing the buildings.

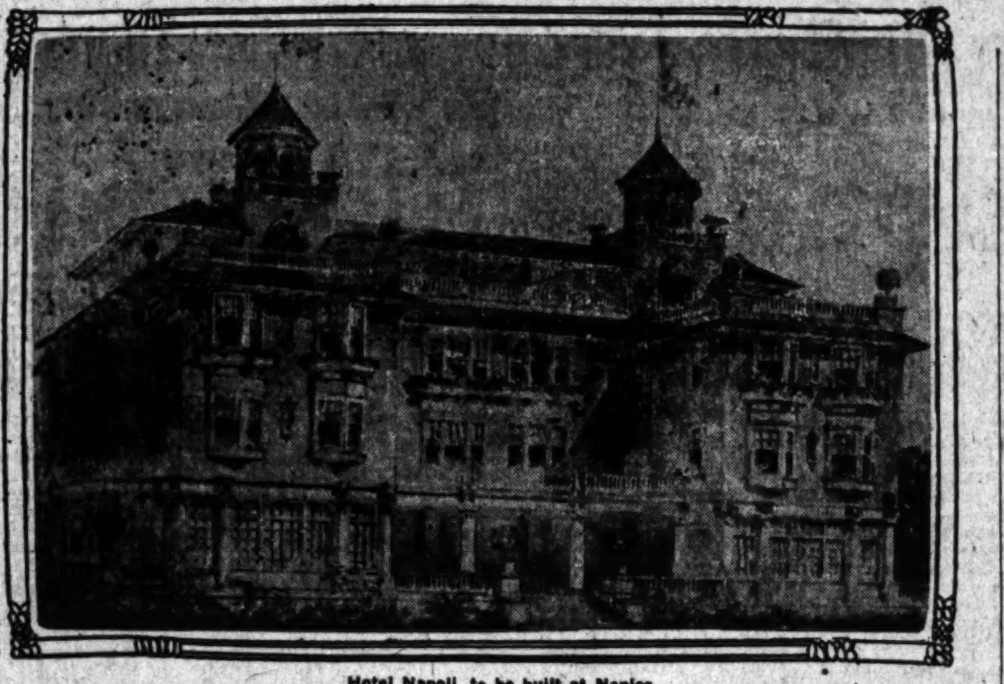
BUYS ORE-REDUCING PLANT.

Property on San Fernando Street Bought for Twenty-six Thousand Dollars.

Samuel G. Marmon has sold to a local investor, through the agency of the Arthur W. Kinney Company, the property at Nos. 1438-46 San Fernando street. The land is 82½x155 feet, extending through to Weyse street. It is occupied by a two-story brick building, used by the Garvin Cyanide Extraction Company as an ore-reducing plant. The reported price is $26,000.

CARS RUN TO RAMONA.

The car service on the recently-completed Covina line will be inaugurated today, and cars will be in operation all along the line. The Emerson Realty Company, which is handling Ramona Acres, through which the car line passes, reports an active demand for the acre tracts. The company reports that all locations in the original filing, north of Garfield avenue have been sold. There remains the new subdivision, to the south of Garfield avenue, in which every lot is a corner lot.



Hotel Napoli, to be built at Naples.

AMONG BUILDERS' AND ARCHITECTS.

MORE THAN MILLION AND HALF FOR MONTH OF JUNE.

Report of Building Department Shows Continued Activity—Three Class A Structures in the List. Details of Contracts Let—New Work Planned, and Permits Issued.

With the building report for the month of June, just ending, reaching above the million-and-a-half mark to $1,515,516, for permits numbering 653, it is quite evident that there is no distinct slackening in the building activity of Los Angeles. Comparisons with the phenomenal record left by last June show a difference of $855,104, and 113 permits issued, that month having a record of $2,371,620 for 766 permits, which was far and away above any other record ever made in Los Angeles.

Among the features of this month's report are two Class A steel structures, one a ten-story, steel building, which the Main Street Company is erecting at the corner of Sixth and Main streets, at a cost of $433,000, and the other a one story addition to the Boston Store Annex, on Hill street, which will cost $25,000. There is also an eight-story reinforced concrete store and loft building for the Forrester people, on Broadway, between Sixth and Seventh streets, which is estimated will cost $95,000. There were permits to the number of 290 issued for Class D, one-story buildings, the total cost of which is $298,087, slightly over $1000 apiece, on the average. The classified report follows:

	No. of permits.	Value.

NEW WORK PLANNED.

The following details of new work, now in the hands of the local architects and designers, is taken from the columns of the Builder and Contractor:

L. S. Moore has prepared plans of a seven-room frame bungalow to be built on Church street, Glendale, for Dr. Harlan T. Kerr. He has also made plans of a five-room bungalow to be built on Friends avenue, Whittier, for D. E. Gooch, assistant cashier of the Whittier National Bank.

The same architect has also made plans of a one-and-one-half-story, six-room bungalow with plastered exterior and stone foundation, to be built on the orange ranch of Mrs. Alfred A. Russ at San Dimas. Each of these dwellings will have hardwood floors and all up-to-date conveniences.

W. J. Saunders is preparing plans for a two-story, reinforced concrete building, 52x120 feet, to be built at Glendora for the Bank of Glendora. The first story will be occupied by the bank and one other store, and the second story will contain an auditorium with stage, etc. The same architect has also drawn plans for a frame church building for the Evangelical Church of Pasadena, to be erected on the corner of Orange Grove and Fair Oaks avenues. It will cost about $3000.

Frank M. Tyler is preparing plans for a two-story, nine-room frame residence to be constructed at Oxford avenue and Sixth street, for Wm. F. Ahrens. It will have artificial stone porch, plate glass windows, paneled walls and other first-class conveniences. He is also drawing plans for a seven-room frame residence to be built on the corner of Twentieth and Cimmaron streets, for Mrs. C. E. Schmitker. It will have cobblestone porch and columns, hardwood floors and beamed ceilings. This house will be heated by electricity.

P. August Westberg is preparing plans for extensive alterations to a three-story frame building at No. 1019 Florida street, for J. C. Girton. It will be converted into an up-to-date apartment building to contain eleven two and three-room suites with bathrooms to each suite. It will be equipped with disappearing beds and other portable furniture. Chatsworth Park sandstone will be used for porches, balconies, buttresses and foundation walls.

Myron Hunt and Elmer Grey are preparing the working drawings and specifications for the first of the new buildings to be erected for the Throop Institute on their new grounds at the southeast corner of Lake avenue and East Colorado street, Pasadena. It will be a one-story frame structure of the California style of architecture, with large open court and colonade. An assembly hall, 50x60 feet, will occupy the central portion of the building: this will be flanked with two wings in which classrooms will be located. It is the intention of the board of directors to have the exterior plastered and the roof covering of clay tiling, provided sufficient funds are to be obtained.

W. H. Mohr has drawn plans for a passenger and freight depot to be built at Rhyolite, Nev., for the Las Vegas and Tonopah Railway Company. It will be 38x128 feet in size and constructed of concrete blocks with plastered exterior. Exposed woodwork will be redwood stained. Provision is made for a large baggage-room, women's and men's waiting-rooms, office and ticket room and quarters on the second floor for employés. An arcade will extend along one side and rear of the structure.

Preston & Seeburn are making plans for alterations to the residence of J. M. Petty, on the corner of Shatto and Valencia streets. An elaborate entrance will be one of the principal improvements.

Edward Quayle has prepared plans of four residences to be built on University Heights, San Diego. They will be built for Edwin Thill, Walter S. Buchanan, H. A. Burbeck and John Tomlison, respectively, and will cost about $2000 each. The same architect has made plans of a two-story frame and stone residence to be built on Valle Vista Terrace, San Diego, for Mrs. Hattie F. Carey. It will cost about $6000, and will be modern in every particular.

The Board of Education has adopted the plans of Henry Lord Gay for th new University Heights school building, San Diego.

WOMAN AND THE HOME.

BY CATHERINE ALLMAN.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

"You know," gurgled an enthusiastic young matron of my acquaintance, "John and I have solved the vexing problem of summer vacations to our [illegible] satisfaction, or, at least, we think so. For the past five years there has been the annual worry attendant on going away for the summer. You know the situation. We were not rich enough to stay at home, and too poor to go away, and it gives my head a[illegible] now just to recall the tragedies of summer vacations, the appalling expense, the hurry and worry of getting summer wardrobes, shattered illusions of ideal summer resorts, and other boarders' inhumanity to the rest of the boarders, and so on through all the list of awful things.

"Of course, you know, John is an exceptionally capable man, with abilities that make me feel sorry for other men, and among some of his numerous talents is a knack for mechanics. The rest was simple. No, silly, of course he didn't build an ideal summer resort, but he did build a launch and we take our vacations in little trips lasting anywhere from a day to two weeks.

"No worry about any summer trousseau, for just fancy an organdy on a two weeks' jaunt on a 25-foot launch! Then we entertain our friends in a nice, informal way, which is a dozen times better than giving lawn parties and week-end horrors. Besides in [illegible] their lasting gratitude, mixed with a small grain of envy, which lends a piquancy to one's enjoyment. 'Of course, you know if you are one of those marceled women and facial massage patrons, it would never do; the wind would blow your hair and the sun bring forth a startling little crop of unmistakable freckles and you would be miserable. You have to have a genius for camping out, and the tact of an angel and pluck of something else [illegible] to persuade your better half that you have the true spirit, but once admitted into the brotherhood, there's nothing like it to sweep away petty cares. Try it."

"But what," I queried of the young matron, "if you have a poor husband [illegible] of the gods in the matters of things mechanical, or, worse yet, if you have none at all?"

"Well, then, the next best thing would be to cultivate the woman who has all those things, and grapple her to you with hooks of steel, or else let your noblest sentiments and impulses perish ignobly at a fashionable summer resort; but don't ask me any more questions like that, for it is all so simple when you know how!"

When will the fashion in handwriting change again? And when it does change will it be for something more legible than the present atrocious English chirography scrawled with the [illegible] stub pen? There was a time, and not so many years ago, when milady wrote with a fine running hand, [illegible] breathed of sentiment and romance, of lovers' lanes and trysting places, and had just the faintest whiff of lavender or orris root. Interesting letters, too, with news and gossip of one's friends; not scintillating with sarcastic wit and comment, but redolent of a quaint humor that left a smile behind. And, those letters were kept, too, in fat little bundles and tied with slowly-fading ribbons to delight the readers of future generations in an art that has fled.

No one writes letters, nowadays; it takes almost too much time to even scratch a careless note with a flippant "hastily yours," for, in these days of progress the telephone is always at one's elbow, time is precious, and besides—we have forgotten how.

Talk about women lacking enterprise. A young woman, simply dressed and of an unassuming personality, made her way into the office of one of the busiest men in town the other day. Don't ask me how, that is her business, and her fell purpose was none other than to sell him an edition de luxe of something or somebody at umpty-umpty dollars. Imagine his rage when she guilelessly led up to the subject; he didn't take the pains to mince words about it either.

"My dear young lady," he said, with considerable warmth, "you don't appreciate how much of my time you are taking up in a fruitless errand. Do you know that my time is worth $30 an hour to me?" And then he sat back in his seat to watch her swoon at the enormity of her offense. Did she faint? Pooh, she whipped out a check book, wrote a check for $15, and handed it to him with business gleaming in her eye.

"I'll take just one-half hour of your time at your own valuation just to give you a chance to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity," etc.

Of course, she sold him the books, for he said that any one, man or woman, having that much audacity and enterprise, ought to be encouraged to go in and win. Don't you think so, too?

As a rule, the women who live in the largest, busiest cities lead the most narrow, cramped-up lives in the world. It fills my soul with keen amusement to meet some of the women who run down to smaller cities to visit friends and relatives who live in the "provinces." They have such a superior manner and just a hint of patronage and an air of showing the natives how that would be irritating were it not so sublimely unconscious of itself.

There is the woman who hails from "lil old Ne' Yawk." In all probability she earns her own livelihood, and, if she is fortunate enough to afford a two-by-four flat, it is the only species of existence she knows. She rushes to and fro on crowded, clanging street cars, with the trained expression of one who lives in a strenuous city and jostles humanity. She knows about everything—oh, dear, yes; but she has no time for quiet appreciation. She smiles in half pity at the women in smaller cities whose life runs along in pleasant grooves with now and then some little dissipation in the "big city" and vaguely wonders what she gets out of existence to make it worth while. She goes to the theater constantly for it is her chief amusement until it loses the charm it holds for the rarer patron and leaves only a mass of blurred impressions. In all probability she can tell you the names of the "six best sellers" and she reads the critic's reviews just to be able to take part in any conversation that might turn to books.

TOPICS OF THE STAGE.

Nat Goodwin, after a strenuous quarter-century over all the roundabout ways of America and Europe, believes he has found Elysium at last. He has a place which he calls "home," and home is his hobby, a real fanaticism which makes the stage forgotten, the pleasures of society a deadly cloy, and even the dear madness of motoring only a secondary pursuit.

Mr. Goodwin's house is the old Fitzgerald property, at the corner of Hart avenue and Ocean Front, Ocean Park. It is called "old," only in a manner of comparison with other things in that mushroom town. Anything there on which the paint is fairly dry is beginning to be venerable.

This place is a beautiful one, and the actor is making it more beautiful. He has his garden, his flowers, his little gymnasium, and he will soon have a garage.

He showed The Times dramatic writer all his comfortable little treasures the other day, with far greater enthusiasm than if he were recounting a footlight triumph.

Down on his knees in the real and carefully imported soil, he played a garden hose directly into the wind, unmindful of a gusty spray that wilted his English coat and wrinkled his immaculate white trousers.

"What is a home without grass and flowers?" ejaculated Mr. Goodwin, punctuating his remark with a gallon of water on a huge red geranium. "What are those smart houses in New York, all alike and all square against the pavement? Bad taste, my boy, bad taste!"

Mr. Goodwin's Ocean Park existence is far from being a paradisial, oriental dream of sybarite laziness.

Instructed by his housekeeper, I turned off the broad ocean promenade onto his private pave shortly after 11 o'clock—a.m. Theatrical routine still binds him in sleeping and rising, and he knows dawn and sunrise only upon hearsay.

But even at that hour he had escaped me. An hour's turn on the sand, and then another trip to the Maison Goodwin.

"Sorry to have kept you waiting," he said a few minutes later, running briskly down the stairs, "but each morning I do a little road work to keep myself in condition, and I try to be regular about it, no matter what happens."

His carriage, his voice and the freshness of his face denoted a degree of real health which observers of Goodwin have not seen in years. The pallor of the theater, usually so marked with him, had disappeared entirely.

And in dress, he was original and elegant. Goodwin has a personal antipathy to collars, and his stocks are a model of material, construction and manipulation.

"Next year," said the actor, "or perhaps I should say 'next season,' I am going to appear in a new play by George Broadhurst. Don't ask me anything about it, for I can't tell you anything. I commissioned him to write a play, and nothing more. When he has finished, I shall go at it, and work it up. My opening will be in Baltimore, and besides the new piece, I shall do repertoire. My leading woman will be Miss Goodrich.

"The following season, which I expect to make my last, I hope to begin in Los Angeles. Heretofore, my season has always ended here. I come in at the fag end of the year, and I think that at such a period I'm a sort of bore, instead of being interesting in any way."

Mr. Goodwin looked lovingly around the big living-room of his delightful house. The climbing bookcases with their hundreds of classic volumes, the six-foot vases of freshly-cut flowers, the sights and sounds of the sea, creeping faint through the heavy windows, the delicate fragrance of fresh salt air and the indefinable atmosphere of peace and quiet spelled an unwearying charm that could not be wrought before scenes, upon a man-made stage.

"But always depend upon one thing," he continued, at length. "This is my home, and to it I will always return. I believe in Los Angeles, and her environs, more than any other city on earth. I am proud to be in the advance guard, for I think this city is destined to become the rendezvous of all America.

"And as for a show town, in the strict business sense of theatrical enterprise, there are few American cities that equal it at the present day."

Mr. Goodwin pulled at his cigarette until the ash stood from it in a gray spiral, as though the thin paper thing had been a heavy Havana cigar. His eyes were far to seaward. He rose and walked to the window, throwing back the heavy, creamy lace that shielded the French panes.

"Isn't this a beautiful view?" he commented, in half soliloquy. "I never get tired watching the ocean. It serves me for conversation, kills moods, even makes a quietus to ambition.

"I'll tell you what I'd like to show you," he went on, turning from the alcove; "I'd like to give you a personally-conducted tour over this place of mine. It's a much more interesting topic than actors and acting; they're very flat subjects."

After the party of two had left the wide, brightly-lighted little dining-room, the actor turned again toward the stairway. A rather vague collection of character studies paneled the rise to the second floor. There were two or three of Goodwin as Shylock—one excellent pastel, and a big, action-full photograph. Another, at the bottom, showed him in "Missouri," a piece of eleven years ago, which, it may be mentioned, he intends to revive.

"My plan for this stair is a sort of chronological succession of my own parts," remarked Mr. Goodwin, indicating with a wave of the now-tiny cigarette stub. "What d'ye think of it?"

The visitor averred that it was wisdom.

A simply furnished, but spacious apartment is Goodwin's sleeping-room. There are evidences of recent carpenter work. A huge but rather purposeless corner closet has been obliterated, and in its stead a cosy, pleasant bay faces the sea. Back of this room, another will be bisected to install the actor's private bath. More windows are going in—there will be light, light everywhere in the finally-rehabilitated house—and a second bay is to be built in the other front apartment, which will be given over to Miss Goodrich and her mother, who will be Mr. Goodwin's guests during the summer.

Again downstairs the householder led the way to his tiny English garden, flourishing at the side of the house, a veritable oasis in the wide stretches of sand.

"Observe the genuine good black dirt in this garden of mine," exclaimed the demonstrator. "I don't know how they brought it here, nor what they paid for it, but I'm precious glad they had it. A house without grass or shrubbery is not a house; it's a cheap hotel.

"Here is my lily bed—pardon this water; I never can pass these flowers without giving them a little attention.

"One of my quiet hopes is to purchase this adjoining place. Then I can enlarge my garden, have more lawn, put a possible addition to the house, build a good garage, and have more room generally.

"This place," said the actor, passing in a few quick strides to the rear of his miniature estate, "is my little gymnasium. I am going to have a good bag, some pulley weights, and other appurtenances. The baths are all in, and the dressing-rooms are in condition.

"I want to keep in good condition, for there's no telling when the nervous strain of professional life may break through one's reserve of physique—provided that reserve has been undermined.

"Poor Mansfield! A nervous wreck, the doctors say, and when I saw him last he appeared in ideal shape. The frightful yarns they tell about that man, and his ferocity on the stage and at rehearsals!

"But then, they have fanciful stories about all of us. Now, a great many good people have a firm conviction that I get on an awful drunk every night. You've heard that one, haven't you?"

The reporter laughed.

"The last exhibit is my new car, if it's arrived—yes, fortunately, it has."

This motor is a mammoth Welch, of eighty horse-power, and rated as the Colossus of the town.

"It has a speed of seventy miles an hour," proudly remarked the owner, adding, with a comical grimace—"but not for N. C. Goodwin."

A Japanese house servant summoned the actor to a simple breakfast. Goodwin ran up the steps with haste that bespoke a real and excellent appetite—a stomachic longing born of perspiration and wind and fresh air, rather than of medical appetizers or a brace of cocktails.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

"A Fair Exchange," comedy-drama new to local theater patrons, will be played by the Belasco company this week.

Lewis S. Stone will make his last summer appearance in this part, and until his return leading parts will be played by Hobart Bosworth. Bosworth's initial appearance will be made a week from Monday night, in Stanislaus Stange's comedy-romance, "Friend Fritz," played in the East by John Mason and Marion Manola.

"The Lily and the Prince" will occupy the attention of the Burbank people today.

This romantic drama has served a starring vehicle for Blanche Hall, and was successfully played by her here last season. After an absence of five weeks, Miss Maude Gilbert will make her reappearance today, playing opposite Miss Hall. Mr. Desmond and practically the entire company will have congenial assignments.

Good scenery and costuming are promised by the management.

Olga Rossi, whose name leads the new Orpheum programme, is said to be a Russian exile, and her husband, Count Rossi, is a political prisoner in Siberia, while her child is held as a government hostage. She is a woman of rare beauty and splendid voice. With her appears M. Paulo, tenor, who has made previous visits here. Her sketch is entitled "During the Performance."

St. Onge brothers offer a new cycling act. Ferry, contortionist, is billed as "the human frog." The Abdallah brothers are three in number. Two are said to be unusual acrobats, while the third is a clown.

The holdovers are Frederick Hawley and his company, in their Mexican sketch. Catherine Hayes and Sabel Johnson in "Baby Days." Arthur Dunn and Marie Glazier, and the bootblack quartette.

"A Celebrated Case" is scarcely a thrilling name for a melodrama, but the piece bearing it is a classic of its kind, and will be presented at the Grand Operahouse this afternoon.

The period of Louis XV, and the management promises that scenery and costuming will be historically correct. The story is an exciting and romantic one, and Joseph DeGrasse will be seen as Jean Renaud, hero of the play.

"The Serenade" will continue at the Auditorium during the coming week. The work of chorus and principals has improved wonderfully in the past week, and this, the final week of the company, should be memorable for artistic performance.

Maud Adams will open her fairy play, "Peter Pan," at the Mason Operahouse, one week from Monday night. Seats will be on sale Wednesday morning.

Dramagraphs.

It is stated that the gross receipts at the Paris Opera last year amounted to more than $600,000 while those at the Opera Comique reached the total of $500,000.

A conscientious opera-goer amused himself the other night, in London, during a performance of "Aida," by noting Mr. Caruso's appearance in front of the curtain. He counted, he says, twenty-seven "calls."

Edna Wallace Hopper will be seen in the role of Sadie Woodis, when "Fifty Miles from Boston" opens at Wallack's theater, New York, in August. At present the Cohan play is being given in Boston, and at the conclusion of the run there Miss Grayce Scott will relinquish the role.

William Gillette, who is now in London, has arranged to write a drama for Charles Frohman, which is to be ready for production in America and England before he resumes acting. Mr. Gillette will return to the United States and will devote six months to the writing of the play.

The first public performance of "The Incubus," an English version of Brieux's comedy "Les Hannetons," will be given by Lawrence Irving at the Coronet Theater in London. The play has already been seen by a select London audience under the auspices of the Stage Society.

Charles Dalmores, Mr. Hammerstein's French tenor, sang in "La Damnation de Faust" at the Strassburg festival last week, under Colonne's direction. He is due soon in Berlin, where he will study Tannhauser, Lohengrin and Tristan in German. He has sung these roles frequently in French but will sing them in German for the first time at the Manhattan Operahouse next season.

On Thursday evening Miss Grace George made her London début in an English version of Sardou's "Divorcons," and she seems to have made an impression upon the London critics that could scarcely have been foreseen. The Morning Post says: "She proved herself one of the most delightful and accomplished comediennes that America has yet sent us. London will certainly want to see her in something else in which the pathos she undoubtedly has may find greater scope."

Mrs. Carter is just bringing to a close the most successful tour in her career. In April, after suffering numerous disappointments in her efforts to find a new play, Mrs. Carter began a tour at Norfolk, Va., with "Zaza" and "Du Barry" as her offerings. She has traveled south to New Orleans, thence to San Francisco and Seattle, and is now playing over the Northern Pacific route. Her net earnings up to June 15 were $55,000, and beyond all doubt, the gross profits at the end of her brief season will approximate $60,000.

Miss Rose Stahl is booked for three solid years in "The Chorus Lady." After her present Chicago engagement she will make a tour of the larger cities of the United States, and next May she will go to London, where Henry B. Harris will present her in one of Charles Frohman's theaters. The following year she will come to Boston for a twenty weeks' engagement, after which she will do what is known as the southern tour. The third year on the road, and the fourth of the play, Miss Stahl will be sent over the Northern Pacific to the Coast, will play the Coast cities, and return over the Southern Pacific by way of Texas and New Orleans.

"The Green Bird," a half-sister to "The White Hen," is the next of the series of musical comedies to be produced by the Shuberts. The piece is by Messrs. Stevens and Bennett of Boston, and was originally produced by the Cadets of that city. The Majestic Theater, Boston, is to be the summer home of the musical play. After an engagement of six weeks it will come to the Casino to replace "Fascinating Flora." Rehearsals of the chorus under the musical direction of DeWitt Coolman will begin in Boston tomorrow. Among the principals are Ada Lewis, Elsa Ryan, Eleanore Kent, Fred Lennox and William Sloane.

William Archer is delivering the impressions gathered during his recent tour of our country, to an expectant London public through the columns of the Tribune, of which paper he is dramatic critic. His series of articles is called "The American Stage," and in them he is discussing one by one the varied phases of our drama as they were brought to his attention in New York, in Boston and elsewhere. His fourth installment deals with what he designates "The Domestic Drama," and although his remarks are pertinent, they are rather cursory and inconclusive. He mentions casually "The Country Fair" and "The Old Homestead," he remarks of David Warfield that "that remarkable actor has made an enduring success" in "The Music Master," although he did not see him, and he devotes the bulk of his comment to "The Three of Us" and to "The Chorus Lady" probably for no other reason than because he did happen to see them during his brief stay in New York. But why he so strangely classifies "The Chorus Lady" as a "domestic drama," he fails to explain.

A letter from Paris announces that George Marion is to become an "independent producer" of stage pieces after his return from his trip abroad in the interests of Henry W. Savage. His first contract will be to stage "The Merry Widow" for Mr. Savage, after which he will accept engagements for new productions only. "The Merry Widow" is the Viennese comic opera "Die Lustige Witwe," now being sung in eighteen Continental cities. In the future much of the work of general stage direction of the Savage shows will be looked after by Madison Corey. Mr. Marion has been associated with Henry W. Savage as general stage director for the past four years. In that time he put on all the new productions with the exception of "Parsifal" and "The Valkyrie." These include "The County Chairman," "The Shogun," "The Prince of Pilsen," "Woodland," "Peggy from Paris," "The Bad Samaritan," "Easy Dawson," "The College Widow," "Common Sense Brackett," "The Galloper," "The Man from Now," "The Student King," "Madam Butterfly" and "A Yankee Tourist."

Bernard Shaw, in his recently republished, "Dramatic Opinions and Essays," says "Stagecraft, after all is very narrowly limited by the physical conditions of stage representation: but when one turns over the pages of 'The Second Mrs. Tanqueray,' and notes the naive machinery of the exposition in the first act, in which two whole actors are wasted on sham parts, and the hero, at his dinner party, is compelled to get up and go ignominiously into the next room to 'write some letters' when something has to be said behind his back; when one follows Cayley Drummle, the confidant to whom both Paula and her husband explain themselves for the benefit of the audience; when one counts the number of doors which Mr. Pinero needs in order to get his characters on and off the stage, and notes how they have finally to be supplemented by the inevitable 'French windows' (two of them,) and when the activity of the postman is taken into consideration, it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that what most of our critics mean by mastery of stagecraft is recklessness in the substitution of dead machinery and lay figures for vital action and real characters."

Ellen Terry's long and honorable services in the art of acting to the English and American public can be credited, in some measure, to Charles Reade, the novelist. Although the fact is not generally known among her hosts of admirers, she once retired from the stage when her career was just dawning, and had no more ambition to pursue her calling. That was in 1867, and she did not return until seven years afterward, in a revival of Charles Reade's "Wandering Heir," taking the part of Phillippa Chester. Mrs. George Cran, in the recently published "Life of Ellen Terry," in John Lane's "Stars of the Stage," has some interesting remarks of this period of retirement. Mrs. Cran writes: "Here there seems to be fresh proof of that curious want of ambition to which Ellen Terry confessed later on. She had played each part as it came her way as well as she knew how, but each part was not to her as a battle won to conquer an empire. She did not see that empire in her dreams. She never had the slightest craving for glory. She renounced her career at the age of 20 without any suspicion that she had anything to renounce. For six years she lived in that country, putting all that energy and vitality which she was afterward to devote to her art into her life. It is said that Charles Reade, when hunting in Hertfordshire, met her by chance in a country lane and told her in his rough yet kindly way that she was a fool to have left the stage. 'Why don't you go back?' 'I don't want to.' 'You will some day.' 'Never.' Then, mindful of certain financial troubles threatening her rural peace, Ellen Terry added: 'At least not until some one gives me £40 a week.' 'Done!' said Charles Reade, 'I will.'

In Walter Hampden, a young American actor, who never has been seen on the stage in his own country, Henry Miller has found a new leading man for Alla Nazimova and incidentally a new star. Hampden has attained a large degree of success in London, and Mr. Miller recently placed him under contract for a term of years. He will begin the saeson as Mme. Nazimova's leading man, replacing Guy Standing and remaining in that position until the production of "The Servant in the House," by Charles Rann Kennedy, is ready. To confer with Mr. Kennedy concerning his play, Mr. Miller is now on his way to London. He is on board the Kronprinz Wilhelm, due in Southampton Tuesday. Of "The Servant in the House," he said before departure that he considered it the strongest play in manuscript he had ever read. It is described as a satirical drama of contemporary English life, in which several bigotries are scathingly attacked. Mr. Miller is preparing for the most active campaign he has ever undertaken. Under his direction Mme. Nazimova will reopen the Bijou Theater, September 2, with "Comtesse Coquette," following this play in about six weeks with Ibsen's "Master Builder." Then will come "The Madstone," by Ridgeley Torrence. Revivals of "Hedda Gabler," and "A Doll's House" will combine to enable her to remain at the Bijou all the season. Mr. Miller and Margaret Anglin will begin their season at Daly's Theater, August 26, with "The Great Divide." A little later he will produce there a new military comedy, with Lawrence D'Orsay and Cecilia Loftus as co-stars. Henry Woodruff will continue "Brown of Harvard," the new order of things theatrical rendering possible a long tour to the Pacific Coast. Up his managerial sleeve Mr. Miller is concealing a surprise. He says that he has in training for legitimate comedy a famous woman star, who heretofore has been identified with musical plays.

AFTER COMMENCEMENT.

Starting on life's battle
In the month of June,
Grayce is in the parlor
Pounding out a tune.

Waging life's great warfare,
Doughtiest of girls,
May is in the hammock
Reading tales of earls.

Fighting life's hot contest
With a heart of oak,
Bill is on the golf field
Practicing a stroke.

Toiling like a Turk,
Ma is in the kitchen
Doing up the work.)

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

Vacation season is on in earnest for the music people. Managers, singers, players and composers alike are resting or quietly preparing for another season.

Mr. Behymer is in Chicago just at present. He sends a long and interesting letter concerning contemporary doings to The Times musical department, in which he says: "The women of the Philharmonic Quintette, on their trip East, experienced a severe wreck, but their plucky work was commented on by all who saw it. Louise Nixon Hill made a great personal hit with her Red Cross performances, although we were compelled to summon a doctor twice for her after it was all over.

"Miss Hill will sing at one of the big Edgewood Park affairs Monday night, and Mrs. Bittman and Mrs. Von Benzon will sing at a Thursday function in St. Louis. Miss Hill is also engaged to sing at the original Chautauqua, at Chautauqua Lake.

"I believe the syndicate this year will send to Los Angeles the best line of people and productions it has ever put out. 'The Man of the Hour,' which is going West, will surely hit our people, for graft and politics, presented with startling reality, are its central themes."

Mr. Berry of the Auditorium is perfecting his plans for a November grand-opera season. After the close of the Californians, Mr. Berry will go to Lake Tahoe for a rest of several weeks.

Perhaps I should make a vacation exception to Lee Johnson, popular songwriter, whose work is known throughout the West.

Mr. Johnson is again in town, and is busily at his creative task. He has songs and ballads of all descriptions on the block, and his ardor for toil seems to rise with the temperature. And he is—not a thin man, to say the least.

It is a delight to hear Johnson play his own compositions. He has achieved a tonal mastery of the American cornet, and from that plebeian, ungrateful instrument he draws a sound that is all golden, gold without even a brass alloy, at once vibrant, expressive, full and gentle.

Moore's Band.

Director Moore, at Eastlake, will offer a good programme this afternoon, which will include Zicher's "Wiener Burger," a selection from Massenet's "Don Caesar de Bazan," Trankler's "Court Festival" polonaise, Mendelssohn's "Athalia" overture, and a number from "Romeo and Juliet."

Operatic Farmers.

It is not on the grand opera stage, but at the agricultural fair at Rodez, among the mountains of Southern France, that Calvé has scored her latest public triumph, says the New York World. As a model farmer at home she now adds a gold medal to the gold dollars she has reaped abroad as a singer. Carmen in her hours of ease laying aside her theatrical cigarette and bolero for the truly rural milk pail and garden rake makes a pleasant picture.

Our opera favorites have a way of returning to the soil. Jean de Reszke, while still giving music lessons in Paris at $10 an hour, is a well-known breeder of race horses on his stock farm in Poland. Merely because Burgstaller is singing the part of Parsifal, the pure fool, at the Metropolitan in this city does not interfere with his supplying the good townspeople of Munich with excellent butter and cheese from his dairy farm in the Bavarian Tyrol. Salignac has a vineyard in Southern France where he produces a table wine much favored by his musical colleagues.

Still, agriculture as an accompaniment to art must be classed as a luxury. No great voices are heard of as being lost to the public for the sake of the delights of rustic labor. More likely it is the voice that keeps the farm running. Where is the honest, horny-handed farmer who abandons his cows and his crops for a vacation before the footlights?

Schumann-Heinck Skeptical.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, who is spending the summer at her beautiful country home on a plateau of the Watchung Mountains overlooking the picturesque Passaic Valley, indicated to Musical America that she was not at all in sympathy with Mme. Nordica's idea of establishing an American Bayreuth.

"There is but one Jerusalem, one Rome, one Mecca—there is but one Bayreuth," said the popular contralto. "You may raze the Bayreuth Operahouse to the ground and ship it, piece by piece, to New York; send over the scenery, the artists and musicians, dig up the very earth itself, but you cannot bring to New York the atmosphere, the environment and the traditions that surround Bayreuth. These are and will remain forever sacred.

"You may build a Jerusalem here with its Holy Sepulcher, but the feet of Christ have never trod in America. Or you may establish here a Mecca and the pilgrim will look at it—and laugh. To attempt to do that is nonsense, and besides would be working against the laws of nature.

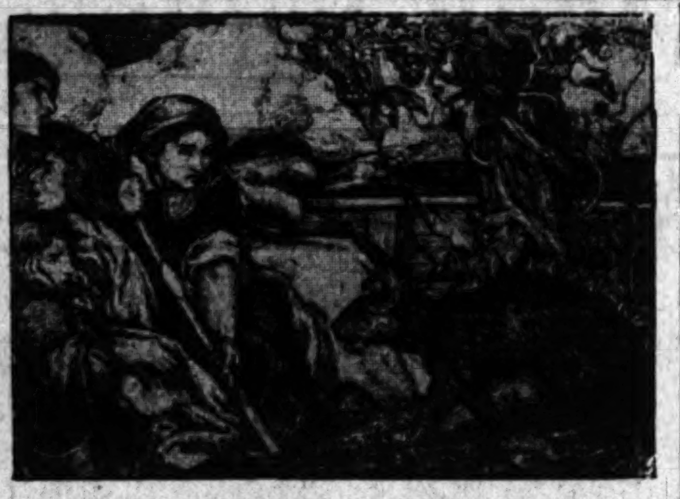
"It is all ridiculous and besides there is no need of it, for we have in this country every facility for the development of music that the world affords. In every little city in the United States there is a surprising interest shown by appreciative musicians in the advancement of music of a higher order. The farmer out on the plains, if he has no operahouse, buys himself a talking machine.

"No, no; it is impossible to establish an American Bayreuth," declared the singer, with much earnestness. "A national conservatory—yes, that would be a feasible undertaking," she added. "Not one great conservatory for the whole country, but several branches for different sections of the country under one management and supported in whole or in part by the national or State government. It will all come in time. As soon as the idea assumes tangible shape the American people, who are the most liberal and generous in the world, will cheerfully consent to pay a greater musical tax than at present.

"My ambition is to establish a beautiful home for superannuated singers and musicians, their widows and their orphans. I would not have this institution regarded as a charity, but more in the nature of a pension—a haven of rest for the men and women who through illness or misfortune are incapacitated from earning a living temporarily or for all time. And I would have foreign artists who come to this country contribute 2½ per cent. of their American dollars to this institution, just as they pay to the musicians' pension fund all over Europe. Voluntary gifts or percentage contributions from artists and musicians would, in my opinion, prove sufficient for all needs.

"This is my ideal, and to this end I shall devote my best efforts."

The opening of the "Rheingold" restaurant in the Bellevue Strasse was an architectural event of the first order for Berlin. It has been built for the firm of Aschinger, who showed good judgment in selecting the architect, Prof. Bruno Schmitz, a genius among German monument-builders, and creator of the monument to Kaiser Wilhelm I, at Rheineck, near Coblenz.



BOOK ILLUSTRATION, BY CLINTON BALMER.

Clinton Balmer, who recently came to Los Angeles from London, and who is now instructor in the School of Art and Design, is an illustrator of great distinction and power. His pen work reminds one of the noble line of Albrecht Durer, of Walter Crane, of Anning Bell—yet it is distinctively his own, full of atmosphere and color. The illustration we give above is one of the nine that appear in Gordon Bottomley's book of poems, "Smaragdus."

Art and Artists.

BY ANTONY E. ANDERSON.

Exhibitions This Week.

Granville Redmond—Steckel's.

Southern California Artists—Blanchard's.

Among the Landscape Painters.

That the growth of art in Southern California is really a healthy sprouting, and not a brief and sporadic efflorescence due to exciting extraneous causes, is amply proved by the eighth annual spring exhibition of paintings, now on the walls of Blanchard's gallery. It is by all odds, when considered from every point of view, the most interesting exhibit of pictures ever held in Los Angeles. It shows that our artists are really becoming painters, and good ones. It shows, too, that most of them have a true understanding and appreciation of the meaning of the art, and that their love for the goddess is expressed in work as well as worship. Technical mediocrity is no longer tolerated among them—they are enamored of perfection, and nothing less.

The newspapers, the generous artists say, have helped them much of late in their steady upward climb. This may be true in a sense, yet the real work has all been done by the painters themselves. The climber must train his own muscles; the "booster" can be of very little assistance when the actual business of climbing begins, though he may perhaps be of some use at the very start. However, the papers may be given the credit of having helped to create an "atmosphere," and bracing air, when one is breathing hard in a difficult ascent, is not to be despised.

Appreciation is as breath to the nostrils of the man or woman of artistic temperament. The papers have certainly tried hard to increase the public quantity of this delectable human necessity. They have seen the need of good and genuine art in a rapidly growing community like ours, and have insisted on the quality, knowing that the painters in our midst were quite capable of supplying it when wanted. And the artists, who are the most susceptible and impressionable of created beings, have responded with a noble alacrity. Between the papers and the public and the painters, art has taken solid root, and beauty will be the inevitable result.

Indeed, beauty is already the result—as witness the showing in Blanchard Hall this week. Many of the pictures might bear, without shame to themselves or their creators, comparison with the best canvases painted in America today. But it must also be confessed that others would find comparison rather odious.

Not one of the painters shows a progress more rapid, and at the same time more solid, than Hanson Puthuff, whose three landscapes are among the most interesting of the exhibition. He has an almost unerring instinct for composition, his color is growing rich, full and harmonious, his handling of paint is that of one to the palette born. He is yet at the very beginning of his career as a landscape painter; his future is full of brilliant possibilities, and probabilities, too, for he is a tireless worker and student of nature.

Mr. Puthuff's "Laguna Cañon" is an exquisite canvas, lovely with the mystery of the sunlight as we see it in California, and painted with absolute sincerity. Sincerity, I may add in passing, is the keynote of almost all the work shown in this exhibition, and sincerity is always art's main reason for being. The paint brush is not a magic wand in the hand of the poseur. "Not from a vain or shallow thought, his awful Jove young Phidias wrought," says Emerson.

The arrangement of lines in Hanson Puthuff's "Summer Fragrance" is so rhythmical that the painted canvas sings almost audibly of the golden season. The harmonies of color are equally entrancing—patches of green, browns and yellows, shot through and bound together with a warp of melting and tender gray. It is beautifully decorative in effect. "Placid Bay," his third canvas, is solid, simple, and as bracingly restful as a strong and steady wind from the sea.

Leonard Lester is a poet always. His canvases, without exception, suggest the dreamy raptures that nature's quieter moods bring to her devotees. Yet Mr. Lester always "dreams true"—there is never a hint of the maudlin or the oversentimental in these charming canvases of his. He could undoubtedly write poetry in words, if he would, but we are glad that he has chosen line and color as his medium of expression. The true poetic gift is rarer than you might suppose, among the painters of pictures. When we find one who has it to a marked degree, let us be thankful with all our might, and let us not forget to do him much honor. He is a bringer of joy.

"A Breeze From the Sea," Mr. Lester's first canvas, is rightly named; one can feel the free, glad movement of the air as it sweeps toward the shore over iridescent waves. The picture is most brilliant and beautiful in its color scheme. This canvas is Californian. His "Golden Eve" is an English scene, dreamy and harmonious, though the impressive lines of its trees make us think of the Elysian fields. "Autumn by the River," another English landscape, is the picture by Mr. Leslie that I like best of all. Its oaks are a royal red, its blue-gray river is like a touch of enchantment, its message breathes solace to the questioning spirit. "Autumn by the River" reminds me, somehow, of the most inspirited canvases by George Inness, both in color and feeling.

It is a matter of regret that M. Eleanor Evans has seen fit to send us only one landscape, for she is a true interpreter of nature's tenderest and most delicious moods. This one canvas, however, "A September Lane," shows Mrs. Evans at her very best. It is an eastern subject. She has caught with rare insight the dreams, the regrets of the most poignantly beautiful month of the year. The grass-grown, loitering road in the foreground, and the old board fence to the left, are exceedingly well drawn. The broken greens and yellows of the color scheme, glimmering beneath the gray veil of September's atmosphere, make a picture of haunting tenderness. It lingers in the memory like a snatch of song heard long ago.

"Fisherman's Paradise," by Joseph Greenbaum, shows us the bay at Avalon under the lovely necromancy of the early morning light. It is very good in feeling and color. The little waves of the bay sparkle and dance to meet the sun. This canvas has much of outdoor freshness and feeling, and is an eloquent witness to the fact that Greenbaum understands and loves the sea. Its sky, however, it seems to me, is not so well painted as the rest—is not so luminous as his sunlit sea and shore.

Helen Coan's "Over the Hill" is a small canvas that is yet big in many ways; it is broadly and simply painted, and is very harmonious in color. It is an interesting sketch—though hardly more than that. Miss Coan's "Spring" has caught the subtly difficult phase of nature with great skill. Its color scheme is full of tender harmonies. Her "Evening," though much more ambitious than her other contributions as to size, is not so successful. It has almost none of the mystery of the night—none of its vibrant morbidezza.

A. C. Conner's "Fishing Boats in a Fog" has been mentioned before in these columns; it is one of this artist's best canvases, and in it Mr. Conner shows how deeply he loves the sea. Another excellent canvas from his brush is "In Green Shade by the Mountain Stream," the flickering light and shade being expressed with sincerity and truth. Mr. Conner shows us a cool and enticing spot, one to linger and rest in—yet we must admit that the brush with which he directed us might have been handled a little less conscientiously. The picture, charming as it is in many ways, is a trifle hard in technique.

William H. Cole's "Bendemeer Stream" has a beautiful sky and a very unsatisfactory foreground, the water of the stream being woolly instead of wet. Elizabeth Borglum's "Champagne Grapes" and "Bouton d'Or" are both well-painted bits of still life, but her larger picture, a landscape, called "The Breaking Up of the Storm," is both cold and crude in color.

J. Bond Francisco's "Cherry Cañon" is one of the strongest and best landscapes from this artist's brush yet seen; William Lees Judson's "A Song in the Morning" is very pleasing in its use of grays; Norah Purcell's "Sunset" is well handled; Martin J. Jackson's "Rippling Lake" is an honest bit of nature that has sparkle.

William Swift Daniell shows three small canvases in oils that are a distinct advance over his other work in this medium, though I must admit he handles water colors with more sureness of touch and more charm of color. David Dunn's contributions, though good, are by no means among his best. Ralph Davidson Miller's "October Evening" and "Sentinel Oaks" are flamboyant and ambitious, but sadly lacking in sincerity.

The three studies of roses from the brush of Frantz A. Bischoff introduce us to an artist who has a genuine feeling for color and who knows how to paint flowers. He does not always mass them well, however, scattering his interest by letting his light fall anywhere and everywhere. This fault is no doubt due to the fact that for many years Mr. Bischoff has been a highly successful painter of keramics. His departure in the hitherto untried field of easel pictures is interesting, and as he is a true artist by temperament, there can be no question of his ultimate success.

The water colors and the etchings of this highly creditable exhibition will receive notice next week.

ART NOTES.

An exhibton of landscapes from the brush of Granville Redmond will open at Steckel's gallery tomorrow, and will continue till the fifteenth of the month.

Helma Heynsen Jahn has begun an interesting full length portrait of R. M. Baumgardt, the scientist and lecturer, which promises to be excellent technically and strong in character.

At the last meeting of the South Pasadena Art Club, which took place on the 19th of June, it was decided to change the club's name to the Rembrandt Art Club. Its membership is increasing rapidly, much interest being taken in the semi-monthly art talks by Prof. Mohler. The club has decided to give an annual exhibition, and will also coöperate with the South Pasadena Improvement League to build a club house and permanent art gallery combined.

Herr Paul Seidel has just published, in Berlin, a remarkable book called "Der Kaiser und Die Kunst" (The Kaiser and Art) which affords a remarkable revelation of His Imperial Majesty's versatility and exactitude for detail. It contains drawings of every kind of subject, including designs for cathedrals and churches, the amended drawings by famous architects being vigorously scored and again corrected by His Majesty. Warlike pictures, however, depicting naval and military scenes, predominate, and it is in these that the Kaiser's genius and dashing style are best shown.

An exhibton of engravings in color is now being held annually at the Georges Petit Galleries, in Paris. The group of painters who have specialized in this genre, and who only a few years ago counted for almost naught, have, thanks to the energy of their devoted president and master, J. F. Raffaelli, grown into a powerful association, and no one in Paris can claim to be interested in contemporary art who fails to give serious attention to a manifestation of such importance as this.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, June 25.—While the nation's latest international guests were passing the White House and Lafayette, recently, en route to be entertained by our Secretary of the Navy and their minister plenipotentiary to Washington, Mercury was flirting with "ninety-nine-in-the-shade," thus dispelling all doubts as to the amicable relations existing between the Sun-god and Mother Earth. Furthermore, it was then and there officially recorded that Capt. Dahl and his fellow-officers, representing the kingdom of the Vikings, received the "warmest welcome" so far extended to the season's visitors.

Owing to the absence of the President, all official entertaining of the foreigners was in the hands of Secretary Metcalf, on behalf of the United States, and Minister Hauge for Norway. The latter's wife, née Miss Todd of Kentucky, came over from Manchester-by-the-Sea, to add to the success of the occasion, with the result that the two official dinner tables vied with each other in attractive details. One table in charge of Mrs. Metcalf, of the Flower State, the other, reflecting the artistic taste of her friend, Mme. Hauge, who comes from a State where beautiful women are reputed to be almost as numerous as the flowers that bloom in California.

The Cabinet suite at the New Willard was leased for the Secretary's guests and the walls, hung in cool green, were draped with various and particular banners, each having its special significance to the seamen. Facing the entrance were the Norwegian colors and the Stars and Stripes, the two banners overdraping the host's flag, a breezy-looking piece of bunting showing a white anchor in a field of blue. Elsewhere about the room were displayed a number of signal flags. The table was cleverly laid in roses, shading from delicate pink to rich crimson, with a low oval mound for a centerpiece, crowned with American Beauty roses and masses of jaqueminots. Radiating from the center decoration were branches of crimson Ramblers, heavy with blossoms and foliage, which reached two smaller mounds of La France roses. Many-branched candelabra of silver, topped with pink shades screened in silver filigree, completed the decorative scheme of one of the prettiest tables seen in Washington this spring.

The palmroom of the New Willard was used for the Hauge dinner, which followed the official visit to Mount Vernon. The table on this occasion, was arranged in the form of a hollow cross inclosing a fountain of running water, surrounded by masses of June blossoms. Carrying out the national colors of Norway, were nosegays of deep blue bachelors buttons. Combined with crimson and white peonies in tall crystal vases were radiating branches of the scarlet Rambler. Scarlet shades screened the light from many candelabra and a single white carnation served as a boutoniere. The menu cards were attractively marked with the royal standard of Norway, which also figured with the American banner in the decoration of the walls.

After the departure of the guests Minister and Madame Hauge returned to Manchester, where they have taken a house for the summer. In the autumn, their new legation, which it is expected will be one of the show places of Washington, will be ready for occupancy, and, with a diningroom thirty-five feet square, it may also be anticipated that it will be the scene of much future hospitality. This new official home will be on Massachusetts avenue, facing Sheridan Circle, that recently developed Mecca for millionaires. Prominent among the recent home builders in this locality are Hennen Jennings, the South African "Diamond King," and Mrs. John Hays Hammond, widow of the civil engineer who made millions in the Transvaal.

The bathrooms of the Hammond residences, both here and in New York, are perhaps the most unique and expensive ever built in America. Certainly they are designed with an eye to elaborate detail that might put the Romans to blush. The floors and wainscoting are of tinted umber marble, while the upper walls are of tiling, showing the Nile in its many moods, with dusky bathers wearing a smile that won't come off. The shell-shaped tub is covered with special enamel, which at first glance looks white, but when filled with water, reflects water lilies, reeds and luxuriant grasses, and is so large that it would occupy the entire living space in the largest room of an average flat.

Speaking of fads recalls the existence of the queerest pet in Washington—the tiny marmoset which Mrs. Ford Thompson brought home with her from abroad this spring. When, as Miss Florence Conrad, Mrs. Thompson made frequent visits here, she was shown much attention, and when she returned as a bride, the friends of her aunt, Mrs. Richard Harlow, vied with each other in extending a welcome. However, opinions differ as to the desirability of even an aristocratic monkey as a "chance acquaintance," and since the first few weeks Mrs. Thompson's odd pet has failed to occupy the center of the stage.

Mrs. Gardiner Hubbard, widow of the founder and first president of the National Geographic Society, is interested in things too practical and helpful to others to be called fads, or even fancies, when one considers her year after year interest in the same branches of art and science. After taking an active part in its classification, she gave her late husband's wonderful collection of rare prints to the Congressional Library, where it is daily viewed by hundreds of art lovers and art students. Without abating interest in pictures, she turned her attention to architecture, with the result that Hubbard Memorial Hall was built for the Geographic Society, to the cause of which her husband was devoted. When the District Commissioners decided to name a public school for Mr. Hubbard, in memory of his deep concern about everything for the benefit of humanity, his widow planned the flower beds surrounding the building, and donated flowers and shrubs from the rare ones collected for her country home, "Twin Oaks." This led to her interest in school gardening, which was outwardly expressed on Thursday when she had as guests for the afternoon the graduating and undergraduate classes of the Washington Normal School. These young ladies, the first to practically study the art of gardening as a part of their teaching equipment at the nation's capital, were given the freedom of the rose garden, the water garden and wistaria-covered porches and requested to thoroughly enjoy the natural beauties of an estate upon which vast sums of money have been spent by lovers of the artistic in nature for nearly a quarter of a century.

Of the court circle, Chief Justice Fuller and the married daughters who preside over his home, alternately, left Washington this week for Sorrento, Me., where they will spend the summer. Mr. Justice and Mrs. Harlan have gone with their family to Murray Bay, Can., where they will be near neighbors of Secretary and Mrs. Taft until the latter start for the Philippines. Mr. Justice and Mrs. Day are in Canton, O., whither they went early when their life-long friend, Mrs. William McKinley, became ill.

The summer flittings of Mr. Justice and Mrs. Oliver Wendell Holmes to Beverly Farms recalls a little story told of the judge's distinguished father, the poet and wit. Years ago, when Manchester, which is only a dozen miles up the coast from Beverly Farms, first began to be called Manchester-by-the-Sea, to distinguish it from the city of the same name in Vermont, now called Manchester-in-the-Mountains, some one living at the former place wrote a note to Mr. Holmes, Sr., inviting him to luncheon. The note was headed "Manchester-by-the-Sea," and Mr. Holmes, being somewhat democratic, thought it smacked of snobbery, so as his own home was near the railroad station, he headed his acceptance, "Beverly-by-the-Depot."

And apropos to the Federal Supreme Court, it may be of more than passing interest to note that three of its nine members are Roosevelt appointees—Associate Justices Holmes, Day and Moody. Three—the Chief Justice and Associate Justice Harlan and Mr. Peckham—may retire within the year, thus giving the President an opportunity for more appointments. Then, it is by no means improbable that other vacancies may occur for one cause or another, before the expiration of the present administration, March 4, 1909, in which case, every member of the bench might be a man after President Roosevelt's own heart, and still the opposite party be recognized according to custom. Again, should the Republican party elect Mr. Roosevelt's choice as his successor, and he be sent to the Senate from the Empire State, as has been suggested, Roosevelt policies will continue in vogue for some years to come.

S. Pelton of Los Angeles, Messrs. Francis L. Butz and C. K. Rose, and Miss Elizabeth Egehoff of San Francisco and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Crawford of Oakland, are among the tourists in Washington this week.

ENGLISH AUTHORS UNDER THE WEATHER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 12.—Doctors are playing the deuce with English literature just now. The latest romancer to be "laid off" by his physician is Maurice Hewlett, whose medical man has ordered him to suspend work on his partly completed novel of modern English life, provisionally entitled "The Half-way House," and who is going away at once for a month or two. The novel consequently cannot be completed until September, although the first draft of it is now practically complete. Meanwhile, Miss Cholmondeley has been forbidden by her physician to do more than write short stories for some months to come. She must not even think for the present about a novel to succeed "Prisoners"—for the dramatic rights of which, by the way, she is getting a good many applications.

May Sinclair is out of town at the moment, recovering strength after a trying illness; Constance Fletcher has been away in Italy all the spring in poor health; Eden Phillpotts has only lately got back strength and spirits after a rather cheerless sojourn in the Riviera; Mrs. Frances Campbell, author of "Dearlove," has been ordered away from London for the early summer, and Mrs. Humphry Ward is reported to be feeling rather used up, and intending to stop work for a time as soon as she finishes the novel about to begin serially in Harper's Magazine. Concerning Mrs. Ward, I can make the interesting announcement that she intends to make a visit to the United States and Canada next spring, and may gather there material for a novel to be written in the following autumn.

It is doubtful if a really more interesting company has been gathered together in London this season than was to be found at the Lyceum Club Monday evening last. The Lyceum, of course, is the international women's club, which was organised by Constance Smedley—whose novel, "Conflict," is being so much talked about at home—and last Monday's dinner was in honor of some of the other young English writers who have definitely "arrived." Chief in interest perhaps was Father Benson, the youngest of the three famous Benson brothers, whose new book, "A Mirror of Shalott," has just made its appearance, but his fellow-guests included some of the most promising young writers of the day. There was H. C. Bailey, for example, whose novel, "Springtime," was so popular last year, and whose new series of Napoleon stories is being published on both sides of the Atlantic, not to mention Miss Macnaughten, the author of "A Lame Dog's Diary," who proved to be a charming little Scotch woman; and Alfred T. Sheppard, who owns to twenty-eight years, and whose newest book is "Running Horse Inn." Add that Netta Syrett, who wrote "The Day's Journey," and whose story, "The Child of Promise," is the book of the hour in London, was in the chair, and that other guests included, besides Miss Smedley, Ella Hepworth Dixon and E. B. Burgin, and you will realize how interesting it was to us who came to hear what these clever young people had to say about their work. Let me add, by the way, that a touch of piquancy was also given by the presence of one of the foremost publishers in the person of John Lane; one of the best reviewers in the person of A. A. Milne of the London Chronicle, not to mention an American who is getting to be known as the most successful literary agent on either side of the Atlantic, but who would be immensely annoyed were his name to be mentioned here.

Is the prospect of speechmaking necessarily fatal to appetite of authors? One has heard it suggested, and I think that every one of the honored guests at the Lyceum dinner declared to me afterward that not only the evening repast, but the entire day had been made terrible to them by the knowledge that they would have to talk on the subject of their work. Perhaps their speeches suffered accordingly; anyhow, I find myself with a much more vivid impression of how these young writers looked than of what they said. Their youth was the striking thing; I doubt if any of them is past thirty, unless perhaps it be Benson. His other names, by the way, are Robert Hugh, and, despite his clerical dress, he does not suggest the priest much more than would his brother, the author of "Dodo." He is slight and sandy-haired, and talks with a quaint little stammer, which at times becomes quite marked. Bailey is dark, clean-shaven and eye-glassed. Sheppard, who made his first big success with "The Red Cravat," looks a mere boy—an exceptionally good-humored one. A missing guest, by the bye, was the author of "The House of Merrilee," Archibald Marshall, who came up from the country to London especially for the dinner, but who got separated from his dress-clothes in transit.

Admirers of Heine are wondering what will be the fate of his statue, which has now come into the possession of the Kaiser, through his purchase of the beautiful estate of the late Empress of Austria, on the island of Corfu. It stands in a marble temple in the grounds, from which, according to rumor, the German Emperor intends to eject it. Admirers of Heine raised the money with which the statue was purchased, but had a hard time finding a resting place for it. It was offered to various German cities, and was everywhere rejected with contumely, on the ground that Heine was a bad German and no patriot. His native country has never been able to forgive the scathing irony and biting wit with which Heine attacked her Philistinism and "blood and iron" political ideals. And the fact that he threw in his intellectual France further intensified the grudge against him.

That the Kaiser shared this was shown by his failure when the statue was going Finally it was accepted by the press of Austria, and given a honor in her beautiful island has been suggested that the inability to appreciate Heine's may have been augmented by the verbal animosity of poets for other. It might be difficult author of the "Song to Aegir" preciate the author of the News of Society—Gossip of Men and Women—Weddings, Parties, Dinners.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK.

The June bride has been with us during the past week. She has stepped to the measures of "Lohengrin" and Mendelssohn, and her flower-like beauty, and her many maids, and her bouquets, and her frocks, and her doings in general have made pleasant gossip for many days to come. Wednesday was a record day for weddings in Los Angeles. The rest of the week was occupied with functions for this graduate and that college hero, with class parties, and smaller affairs in bewildering number.

A society musicale given Monday evening by Mrs. Jones-Simmons was attended by many maids and matrons, bachelors and benedicts in the social swim. Mrs. Philip Wilson gave a luncheon in honor of Mrs. William Ridge of Colorado. Mrs. William J. Varel of Arapahoe street entertained for Mrs. G. Alexander Bobrick, who, with her son and daughter, Arthur and Marie, leave for the East in the next few days.

A number of Los Angeles folk sped to Pomona Tuesday evening to witness the marriage of Miss Mary Armstrong and John Condit Bloeser, which was solemnized in the First Presbyterian Church, with a reception held afterward at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Armstrong of No. 504 West Center street.

Another Tuesday wedding was that of Miss Warine Bradford and George E. Lockwood, which took place at the home of the groom's parents at No. [illegible] Brighton avenue. Mrs. Frank Bowles was at home to the Westlake Five Hundred Club Tuesday afternoon, and Mrs. Horace B. Wing gave a charming little dance at her home on Eden avenue for her daughter, Miss Margaret, and classmates of the Marlborough School, Arend's Orchestra furnishing the music for merry tripping feet.

Wednesday was the day of days for weddings. In the early morning St. Vincent's Church was the scene of a beautiful and solemn nuptial mass, celebrating the marriage of Dr. George Carlos Sabichi and Miss May Myers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Rodman Richards. In the evening a dance was given by Misses Rose and Beatrice Sabichi at their home on Figueroa street, in compliment to their house guest, Miss Helen Gannett of Denver.

Wednesday evening Miss Florence Hopper of No. 441 West Thirty-third street became the bride of Kelley Rees of Brooklyn, N. Y., the marriage being a quaint and picturesque one, held at the bride's home.

Miss Carrie Bogart and Rowe Sanderson were married Wednesday evening at the Bogart residence on Westlake avenue. Other weddings were those of Miss Julia Peschke and William Lamboure; Miss Allibell Hutchinson and Frank M. Alton; Miss Irene Buell and Percy R. Merrihew, at the bride's home in St. Andrew's Place; and Miss Luella Cook and Roger Hatch, at the bride's home, No. 954 West Twenty-third street.

Thursday evening Capt. W. Banning entertained with a barn dance for Miss Katherine Banning, Arend's Orchestra furnishing the music; and Friday and Saturday were filled with a number of smaller affairs.

Grizzly Bear and Poppies.

Thursday evening the Grizzly Bear Club of La Esperanza Parlor, No. 24, N.D.G.W., entertained about sixty friends at the residence of Mrs. J. B. Solomon, No. 676 Coronado street. The spacious drawing-room and entire lower floor were artistically decorated in the color of the order—yellow. This effect was beautifully carried out with the California poppy distinctly in evidence.

The evening was spent in whist playing and music. The whist party was divided in two sections, and Mrs. E. Bussinius, Grand President, N.D.G.W., won one first woman's prize, as did also Miss R. Cohen. L. Schwartz and G. M. Giffen won the two first man's prizes. A lady's booby prize was won by Mrs. Walter Harris and man's booby prize by C. C. Cohn.

After the whist game, Miss M. Nichols of the City of Mexico, and Mrs. E. Marcus contributed delightful vocal solos. Mrs. J. B. Solomon and L. Schwartz rendered recitations, which were enjoyed.

Mrs. J. B. Solomon as hostess contributed as a souvenir of the occasion a silver spoon embellished in poppy design emblematical of the N.D.G.W., suitably engraved. It was to be won by a guessing contest, and C. C. Cohn was the fortunte guesser.

Refreshments were served.

Green-Wright.

News has been received in Los Angeles of the marriage in Colorado Springs, June 22, of J. W. Wright and Miss R. Green. Mr. Wrigh, was formerly connected with The Times, and has many friends in this city, where his mother resides. Miss Green was his business partner before she entered into the new partnership.

In Honor of Naval Militia.

The Naval Militia and officers of the U.S.S. Alert will be welcomed to Venice with an elegantly appointed dinner, given by Abbott Kinney, July 3, on the Ship-Hotel Cabrillo. The guests will comprise representative people of Los Angeles, with Mayor Harper and Gen. Wankowski and of Venice, with the naval militia officers and the officers of the vessel.

The table will be covered with naval blue, and silver stars will dot the expanse, while kelp gondolas filled with sweet peas will be the craft to ply the miniature ocean. The place cards will be tiny mess flags of red. Covers will be laid for sixty. Among the visitors will be: Capt. George W. Bauer, Lieut.-Commanders George E. Kamerer, M. Ray Costerisan, F. B. W. Leland; Lieuts. H. Pierre Smith, T. S. Bartoe, Edward McLaughlin, William Speck, A. A. Mosey, J. A. McGee, D. M. Stewart, C. C. Dennl, O. F. Westerfeld; and Junior Lieuts. F. F. Foley, A. H. Woodbine, F. J. Smith, W. E. Coulin, A. F. Fritz, J. H. Wiley; and Assistant Surgeons C. C. Falk, W. R. Congdon, L. D. Bacigalupi and R. F. Winchester; with Ensigns J. R. Parrish, E. Mosbacher, J. P. Smith, George K. Link, John Jardine, J. D. Cavalletto, I. C. Allen and Louis Ferrari.

To Casa Del Roca.

Millard's Cañon, with its beautiful silvery falls, will be the destination of an automobile party, who will start out next Tuesday morning, and tour to Casa del Roca at the head of the cañon, taking luncheon there, and coming back by the light of the moon. Mrs. Frank Bowles will be the hostess, and the guests will be Mrs. M. O. Morton, Mmes. W. H. Faust, Rose Hagan, George A. Ralphs, Ralph Hagan, F. E. Brown, J. A. Prinson, and Miss Grace Pease, members of the Westlake Five Hundred Club, and the guests outside of the club will include Mrs. Fred W. Gollum, Mrs. Myron Wells, Mrs. J. W. Slater, Mrs. Rob Bowles, Mrs. W. G. Bruin, Mrs. J. M. Kelley, and Mrs. Minster.

MISS LOUISE HARVEY, who appeared at a musicale Friday evening.

A Politician's Romance.

A romantic wedding will take place Tuesday morning, when Theodore Summerland, former president of the Los Angeles City Council, now a member of the State Board of Railroad Commissioners, will be married to Mrs. Estelle Unger, widow of the late City Auditor Unger. The marriage is the outcome of a youthful preference begun when the bride was a dimpled slip of a girl just 12 years of age in a little town in the northern part of the State. The wedding will be a simple one, Rev. J. L. Pitner performing the ceremony.

The bride will be gowned in brown crepe de chine, with Frenchy toque to match. She will be attended by her cousin, Mrs. Bessie Maguire, and Rex Unger, her son, will act as best man. The couple will go north for an extended wedding tour, and after their return will be at home at No. 952 Georgia street. Owing to the prominence of the parties, great interest has been felt in the romance.

In Honor of Misses Hudson.

Misses Bertha and Ethel Phelps entertained with a farewell reception at their home, No. 1848 Winfield street Thursday evening, in honor of Misses Mable and Myrtle Hudson, who leave Monday for Houston, Tex., where they expect to make their home. The living-room was beautifully decorated with white and red carnations, and asparagus ferns, while in the dining-room was a profusion of sweet peas. Novel games were enjoyed throughout the evening, followed by refreshments.

Sprecher-Fruehling Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Blanche Sprecher, daughter of C. S. Sprecher, to George Fruebling took place on Thursday evening in the Grand View Presbyterian Church, Rev. Grant Alvah Fessenden officiating. About 500 guests witnessed the ceremony.

Mrs. Emile Mallaire, pianist, and Mme. Elsa von Grofe-Menasco, 'cellolist, played the wedding march from "Lohengrin," Schubert's "Serenade," and Mendelssohn's "Spring Song;;" and a chorus of six young ladies sang the bridal music from "Lohengrin." They were Mrs. Robert Schropper, Mrs. Frank Bryson, Mrs. Sanger and the Misses Grace Whitesell, Katherine and Anna Young.

The bride wore a gown of white chiffon satin and point lace, with tulle wedding veil, and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. Her sister, Mrs. Walter B. Sheckels, as matron of honor, wore a costume of cream pineapple fiber, over pink taffeta. Little Cecil Sheckels was the flower girl and Master Norman Bennett was ringbearer. James G. Sprecher, brother of the bride, was bridegroom's attendant. The bride was given away by her father.

The church was beautifully adorned with sweet peas, hydrangeas and masses of delicate greenery, and the ceremony took place under a canopy of sweet peas, from which was suspended a wedding bell. After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home, No. 2637 Romeo street, at which there were 300 guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Fruehling will leave next Wednesday on a trip to San Francisco and Chicago, and from there will go to Houston, Tex., to make their home.

Wedding at Noon.

An interesting wedding will take place today at noon when Mrs. Floy Ada Bowes and J. Henry Wood, of the Security Savings Bank are married by the Rev. McKnight, in their own pretty home ready for occupancy at No. 152 Bartol street.

The bride will wear an imported princess robe of silk batiste over white silk, trimmed with baby Irish lace. She will carry bride's roses. Miss Margaret Nicholson, and Miss Margaret Kalisky, the two bridesmaids, will be garbed in white with bouquets of pink carnations, while the maid of honor, Miss Mabel Loop, will wear an Irish lace robe. The decorations in the new home are in pink and white, and the couple will stand under a floral bell of roses during the reading of the service. The library has been decked with American Beauty roses, while pink and white sweet peas are in the dining-room, where a wedding breakfast will be served to fifty guests. Lewis Kalisky will serve as best man.

For Miss Standefer.

Miss Grace Barton of No. 978 El Molino street, entertained with a china shower for Miss Jessie Standefer, last week, where a number of amusing contests afforded merriment. First, there was a contest in writing parodies on well-known songs. Then the hostess read an original story with the nouns left out and the guests supplied the missing parts of speech with telling effect. Those who enjoyed the hospitality of Miss Barton were: Mrs. Sammy Ford Howland, Misses Jessie Standefer, Zaida Kane, Katherine Rowan, Crystal Waters, Emma Standefer, Mary McGaugh, Lela Suggs, Nina Bullock, Pearl Magill, Nellie Lane, Mabel Young, Mary Barton, Dr. R. C. Lane, and Messrs. Orville Howland, Dick Rowan, Arthur Stinton, Stanley Howland, Edgar Duke, Bannine Young, Ed Cooper, Ben Kendrink, Carson Magill, Will Abbott, Al Kendrick, Kendrick Kendrick, Nelson Smith and Thurston Smith.

Armstrong-Bloeser.

Miss Mary L. Armstrong and John Condit Bloesser were married at the First Presbyterian Church in Pomona last Tuesday evening, the wedding being witnessed by a number of friends, a party going by special car from Los Angeles to be present. The church choir sang the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin," and the wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Cresswell.

The bride wore a gown of white messaline silk and lace, with shower bouquet of lilies of the valley, and wreath of lilies fastening the filmy veil. Miss Jeanette Armstrong, the bride's sister, was garbed in pink silk mull and served as maid of honor. The bridesmaids, Misses Helen Martin, Sever, Hawley and Martha Armstrong, wore dainty frocks of white. Ned Currier assisted as best man and the ushers were Messrs. David White, George Graham, Herman Hauser and Louis Hauser. After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Armstrong, No. 504 West Center street.

The spacious grounds were inclosed and the lawn covered with canvas, hundreds of electric lights adding beauty to the scene. The young couple will be at home after August 1 at No. 1733 Rosefelt avenue, Pomona.

Outward Bound.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Rowley of No. 2631 Menlo avenue, accompanied by their daughter, Miss Grace Rowley, will leave Tuesday for the East, and will sail for Europe July 12, taking a Canadian Pacific steamer from Quebec. They will be gone about three months. Mrs. Louise L. Carr and Miss Katherine C. Carr leave Tuesday for San Francisco, going from there to Montreal, where they will take a steamer for Europe. The ladies will be abroad six months. They contemplate visiting England, Ireland and Scotland, and later will tour the continent and points in Africa.

Miss Jennie Walrath of No. 672 Burlington avenue will go East this week.

ECONOMY SALES AT ALL DEPARTMENTS

If price inducements are factors in promoting trade, this coming week's business will set a pace that will make us hustle to sustain throughout the year. Every department in the house will be represented by special offerings in the way of new and seasonable merchandise. It will be a week of bargains you can not afford to overlook. Those who are familiar with the class of goods we carry and with our policy of doing business will readily appreciate—and partake of—these, almost sensational, offerings.

At the new departments—Art Needlework, Rugs and Draperies, Infants' Outfits and Toilet Goods, we will make special price inducements in order that you may become familiar with these new lines. In all the other, the old departments, there will be genuine clearance sale prices to reduce stocks in readiness for the fall season. The reductions we quote are genuine. Hundreds are here which cannot even get mention in the papers. Read on.

visiting in Buffalo and in New York. She will go from there to London, where she will visit her relatives in the West End for six months or a year.

Mrs. Lulu Mayne-Windsor, a member of the faculty of the Fillmore School of Music, and soloist in one of the local churches, accompanied by her sister, Ruth B. Copp and two of her pupils, Miss Flora Shelton and Mrs. Edith Lowe, will leave for Europe, July 18. The party will spend two months traveling on the continent and will settle down in Milan for the winter. They contemplate studying in Paris during next year and going to Bayreuth for the festival in August. Mrs. Windsor will return to Los Angeles the following autumn.

Farewell Dinner.

Wednesday evening, Mrs. Ralph G. Whitlock and Mrs. James Westpheling of No. 1130 West Eighth street, gave a farewell dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Baird and daughter, Miss Baird of Hamilton, Ohio, who have been spending their winters in Southern California for some years past. Miss Baird is very popular among the younger set and will be greatly missed. She is a musician of ability and graduated with high honors from the Los Angeles High School with the class of 1907. Mr. and Mrs. Baird expect their son, Prof. A. C. Baird, and wife, of Pittsburgh, to join them before returning East.

Miss Virgina Grose, in center, and Miss May Scott, above, who will take part in the society vaudeville at the Gamut Club tomorrow evening, and Miss Gladys Armstrong, a Berkeley girl, who is planning the affair.

West Adams Five Hundred.

Mrs. William Bennett entertained last week with a luncheon given to the West Adams Five Hundred Club, at her home, No. 912 Burlington avenue. A congenial coterie of young matrons was gathered about a flower-decked table, graced with a centerpiece of maidenhair ferns and pink sweet peas. The guests who enjoyed Mrs. Bennett's hospitality were: Mmes. Samuel S Shepard, Robert McCormick, M. E Johnson, Henry Henderson, Frank R. Strong, James F. Frame, Frank B. Walsh, Alice Covert, Edward A. Fennessey, George A. Ponder, Hugh L. Jones, Franklin H. Nichols, John C. Cline, William R. Ramsey, J. C. Brown, N. E. Head, Edward A. Lundy, J. B. Grady, Samuel B. McLenegan, Sol Davis and the Misses Dent, Glenn and Harvey, and Mrs. Walter Harvey.

Cupid, an Expressman.

Among the interesting events in social circles was the at tome given by Mrs. Louis Charles Becker, and Miss Nancy Fallis, at the home of the former, No. 4510 Pasadena avenue, Saturday afternoon, in honor of Mrs. Robert M. Allen, a recent bride. The home was prettily decorated with Japanese lanterns. Cut flowers and potted plants were used in profusion. Pendant from the chandeliers in the parlors were long streamers of tissue paper hearts tied to opposite corners of the rooms with large lover's knots of pink and white ribbon. The same color scheme was used in the dining-room where luncheon was served during the afternon. Tiny bags of rice, with fancy place cards, adorned the tables. Lunch was served in buffet style. A feature of the pretty event was the presentation of the presents. Little Charlton Becker, as Cupid, with gauzy wings fluttering, was ushered into the roomful of guests. A well-filled express wagon, which Cupid drew, was loaded with useful presents for the bride. This pretty innovation proved a source of great delight to the company as the gifts were unwrapped and presented.

Those present were: Miss Lilla Vance, Miss Louise Rush, Miss Bertha Rush, Miss Edith Hurst, Mrs. William Goodwin, Mrs. Donald Fallis, Miss Carrie Warden, Miss Mabel Dreisbach, Miss Eleanor Wagner, Miss Josephine Kurry, Miss Opal McClary, Miss Gertrude Hancock, Miss Winifred Sargent, Mrs. Francis Nerwin, Miss Alma White, Miss Emma Gardiner, Miss Vivian Stringfield, Miss Mabel Gunning, Miss Annastasia Powell, Miss Dela Olson, Mrs. Frank Thompson, Mrs. C. R. Hixon, Mrs. William C. Hagadorn, Miss Esther Robertson, Miss Eleanor McIntyre, Miss Edna Dove, Miss Lillian Beatty, Mrs. Edgar Stanley, Mrs. Oliver S. Stand, Mrs. Herbert Warden and Mrs. C. M. Taggert. Miss Mary Killan, Misses Ruth and Nell McIntyre, Misses Ray and Pearl Strong and Miss Myrl Morris.

At "Rosemary."

Last Wednesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Cowan entertained a party of young people at their home, "Rosemary," in Eagle Rock Valley. The evening was spent in dancing, Smead's orchestra furnishing the music. Refreshments were served on the porches. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Axtell, Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Rhodes, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Nahouse, Mr. and Mrs. Bourne, Mr. and Mrs. George Hare, Misses Maude Adams, Tina Reedal, Mary Richardson, Rachel Richardson, Elizabeth Hare, Dora Hamilton, and Anne Hare; Messrs. Charles Cowan, Will Graves, David Breese, Tom Williams, Harry Rhodes, E. H. Scott, and A. W. Harrison.

Married by Father.

A pretty home wedding took place Thursday evening, when Helen Maud Wrenn, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Thomas S. Wrenn, of No. 124 East Twenty-third street, became the bride of Robert Morton Allan. The marriage was witnessed by the relatives and near friends of the bride and groom.

The home was prettily decorated, the parlor in white roses and asparagus plumosa with a dove suspended between the folding doors carrying streamers of white tulle to the chandelier, where hung tiny white wedding bells.

The dining room was dainty in pink tulle, sweet peas and wedding bells.

Preceding the ceremony, Frank D. Knight sang "Sweetheart," followed by "When Song is Sweet," by Miss Edith Hurst,, and the Wedding March from Lohengrin, played by Miss Louise Rush, cousin of the bride. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father.

The bride wore a gown of white messaline silk trimmed in valenciennes lace and carried bride's roses.

The bride and groom are well known members of the J. O. C., and "We Boys'" classes of the First Methodist Church. After a wedding tour through the Southern part of the State they will return and make their home in Los Angeles.

Dance for Colorado Guest.

Wednesday evening a dancing party was given by the Misses Rose and Beatrice Sabichi at their residence on South Figueroa street in compliment to Miss Helen Gannett of Denver, Colo., who will be their house guest for a month or six weeks. About fifty guests enjoyed the affair. De Nubila's orchestda furnished the music.

For the Berkeley Dormitory Fund.

The Berkeley girls in Los Angeles are working morning, noon and night to make a success of the musicale and society vaudeville to be given under their direction at the Gamut Club tomorrow evening, for the benefit of a dormitory fund at Berkeley. Berkeley people in Los Angeles are taking an enthusiastic interest in the plucky project of the California college girls and the tickets are going like "hot cakes."

The first part of the programme will be given by an orchestra composed of Dr. Macleish and Frank Rule, as first violins; Gordon Macleish as second violin; Edward Kuster, 'cello; S. H. Edwards, flute; Miss Jones, clarinet; C. L. Burratti, cornet, and Miss Hunter, pianist. Roland Paul will sing two numbers, and Miss Margaret Goetz will also contribute two selections, Mr. Paul and Miss Goetz singing a duet after their solo parts. The musicale will be completed with a quartette from "Rigoletto," by Mrs. Frank Colby, Miss Goetz, Mr. Paul and Mr. Bowes.

Part second will include a monologue by Alfred Wilkes and nautical song and dances by James and Blanche Franklin. There will be a reading by Miss Hazel Gates, whistling solo by Miss Inez Thomas, and Spanish and fancy dances by Miss Virginia Grose. A sketch "The Happy Pair," will be given by Miss May Scott, and Raymond Freeman, and an athletic number will complete the presentation.

The patronesses for the affair are: Mmes. H. R. Boynton, Roy Jones, Goldsmith, A. G. Wells, H. J. Woollacott, William J. Scholl, Fred Baker, W. D. Babcock, R. L. Horton, Cosmo Morgan and Dr. Dorothea Moore.

Honoring Young Vocalist.

Mrs. E. H. Jarman entertained her friends informally at bridge the past week in compliment to her daughter, Miss Rithcey, who has been pursuing her studies at the New England Conservatory of Music during the past winter. She possesses a remarkable voice, and only 17 years of age, Miss Ritchey's triumphs in eastern concert work have been astonishing and her friends have been anxious to hear her since her year of study in Boston.

A luncheon followed the morning spent at bridge and in the afternoon an informal musicale was held. Roland Paul, Mrs. Henry Balfour, Mrs. John C. Kinnehan, Miss Mabel Tanner, Miss Lois Cook, and Miss Gladys Ritchey contributed to the impromptu performance.

Miss Curry to Wed.

Miss Lillian Curry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Curry, of Hollywood, will be married on July 2, to Robert Earl McMurray, of San Francisco. The wedding will take place in the latter city and will be privately celebrated owing to the recent death of Mrs. Curry's mother, Mrs. M. W. Fernandez. Miss Curry has been a student at the Hollywood High School and has recently returned from a trip abroad where she studied French and music. She is a descendant of one of the most prominent families in the State.

Giebel-Wetenhall.

An interesting wedding took place Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Mary Giebel, No. 217 West Fourteenth street, when her daughter, Miss Millicent May Giebel, became the bride of Robert Charles Wetenhall. Rev. McIntyre officiating. The house was artistically decorated with pepper boughs and hydrangeas. The "Lohengrin" wedding march was played by Miss Lillian Craig and the bridal party took its stand under a great canopy of pink sweet peas and asparagus ferns from which hung a massive wedding bell of white sweet peas. The bride wore a gown of soft white silk batiste and carried a bouquet of white sweet peas and maidenhair ferns tied with airy bows of white tulle. The bride's sister, Miss Charlotte Giebel, acted as maid of honor. She wore a pale blue flowered organdie trimmed in cluny lace, while the brother of the groom, William Wetenhall, served as best man. A wedding feast was served in the dining-room, whose baskets of ferns and potted plants were tastefully arranged. Both families are old residents of Los Angeles. The couple left immediately for San Diego. Mr. and Mrs. Wetenhall will be at home to their friends at No. 1400 Mond street after September 1.

MISS GLADYS RITCHEY, a talented young singer who will spend her vacation in Los Angeles.

Hutchison-Alton Wedding.

Miss Allibell Hutchison, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hutchison, No. 3617 South Flower street, and Frank M. Alton, son of Mrs. and Mrs. John Alton, were married Wednesday at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. J. S. Glass, D.D., officiated. Miss Julia Hutchison, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Tom Froelich acted as best man. Miss Grace Van Alstyne of Ocean Park played "Lohengrin" wedding march as the wedding party entered the parlor. The house was beautifully decorated with asparagus plumosus, white and pink sweet peas, carnations and bride roses. Only relatives of the bride and groom and old friends were present. Mr. and Mrs. Alton will spend some time in San Diego, returning to this city in a week or two.

Class Party.

The graduating class of the Washington-street school held a class party at the home of Florence Mead, No. 2115 Leoti avenue, Tuesday. The rooms were decorated with the class colors, black and gold. Games were played and refreshments served. Those present were: The class teachers, Mrs. Owings, the principal, Mr. Dolland, and class members, Muriel Howe, Edna Hayward, Carolyn Hayward, Agnes Lindemann, Hazel Holloway, Grace Orman, Helen Root, Mildred Hutchison, Adrienne Dyer, Earmer Henry, Arthur Edwards, Lewis Trocksell, Raymond Sweet, Floyd Lock, Thomas McInerney, James Davy, Ward DeWitt, Richard Morgan, Fenton Estess, Eugene Romig, Wilson Gibbs, Hubert Bagwell, Leo Bartell and Edgar Goyette.

Verdi Musicale.

A musicale of decided artistic merit was given Friday evening at Ingraham Hotel under the auspices of the Verdi School of Singing, directed by Signor Pietro Buzzi. Miss Louise Harvey won much applause with her numbers, and she acted as accompanist for several of the performers. Dr. L. Mollica accompanied others of the singers. The programme was made up of Italian operatic selections and included Foure, "The Palms," Sampson; Denza, "Non Torno," Miss Grace Talmantes; Verdi, Saper Vorreste, from the opera "Un Ballo Maschera," Mrs. E. I. Smith; Denza, "If Thou Didst Love Me," Miss Louise Harvey; Lynes, "Once Bloomed a Rose in Avon Town," Miss Bess McPherson; Gounod, "Flower Song" from the "Opera Faust," Mrs. Edith J. Lowe; Verdi, "Ritorna Vincitor" from the "Opera Aida," Miss Bessie Bulpin; Sawyer, "Shine On Oh Stars," Otto Wildey; Verdi, "Fu la Sorte dell Armi," duett from the "Opera Aida," Misses Bulpin and Bess McPherson; Bellini, "Hear Me Norma," duett from the "Opera Norma," Miss Bessie Bulpin, Mrs. Edith J. Lowe; Flotow, "Nocturne," from the "Opera Martha," Miss Bessie Bulpin, Mrs. Edith J. Lowe, Mrs. Otto Wildey, Homer Sampson.

Redondo Wedding.

A simple and charming wedding took place Thursday evening at the residence of Mrs. Luella Buckingham, of Hollywood, who is to be married Wednesday to Robert E. McMurray of San Francisco.

MISS LILLIAN CURRY,

L. J. Adams conducted the beautiful service which conferred the name of Emerson Eubank, Jr., on the son of Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Eubank, who have lately come to Southern California. Musical numbers afforded entertainment during the evening and when refreshments were served a great birthday cake, with seventy-six tapers alight, was borne in by two of the grandchildren, Calvin McAulay and Zeb Terry. Each guest blew out a candle in turn with a wish of continued good fortune for the "birthday lady." Among the invited guests were Mmes. Van Pelt of Oakland, Bryan, Whetstone, Koyer, Adams, Chauvin, Brintnal, Lanham, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Scarborough, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Gates, Mr. and Mrs. Mullins, Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard, Mr. and Mrs. Derby, Capt. and Mrs. Hance, Mr. and Mrs. Akey, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Kurley, Mr. and Mrs. Eubank, Mr. and Mrs. Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Skinner, Prof. and Mrs. Everett Shepardson, Mr. and Mrs. Solland, Mr. and Mrs. W. Adams and the Misses Campbell, Wood, Ruth Wood, Jones of Berkeley, Jones of Pasadena, Eubank, Whetstone and Belle Crowell.

Mrs. McAulay and Mrs. Terry were assisted by the three grandchildren of Mrs. V. S. Terry, Calvin McAulay and Zeb, and Annie Laurie Terry.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

The Misses Emma I. Newsom and Clara V. Littell will leave July 4 for an extended eastern trip. Chicago, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Niagara Falls, Atlantic City and New York will be included in the itinerary.

Mr. and Mrs. David Barry and their two children, and Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Roff left yesterday morning for San Francisco.

Mrs. Selig Cahn (neé Yetta Cohn) is in the city for the summer and will spend several months with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Cohn, of No. 920 West Ninth street. Mrs. Cahn is now living in New Orleans.

In honor of Miss Guiberson's class at the Twenty-eighth-street school, an entertainment was given at the beautiful new bungalow of Mrs. H. A. Senman. The rooms were artistically decorated in the class colors. Music and games furnished the entertainment for the evening, and refreshments were served later.

Mrs Zola Sylverton is in New York City and will spend the summer in the East.

Senator Flint and family will take a cottage at Balboa Beach for July and August.

Dr. Lee Hagadorn has returned from the East. Mrs. Hagadorn has gone to Seattle to visit her parents.

Mrs. Helen Wells, president of the Ohio Congress of Mothers, is in the city, the guest of her brother, W. B. Raymond, of No. 1053 North Figueroa street. Mrs. Wells will be in Southern California until the fall.

Misses Corinne and Lillian Gough will go north for their summer vacation, leaving the middle of July.

Mrs. Max Harris of Ocean Park is located at No. 423 West Twenty-second street, where she will be at home to her friends.

Mrs. M. S. Tyler and family will spend the months of July and August at cottage No. 35, Sunset avenue, Venice.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Shahan, the latter's sister, Miss Maude Oyler, and Miss Kathryn Harris of San Bernardino, will leave Wednesday, Mr. and Mrs. Shahan going South for the summer, while Misses Oyler and Harris will visit New York and other points in the East and Canada.

OUT-OF-TOWN SOCIETY

Pasadena.

THE past week has been unusually gay for mid-summer. One of the largest functions of the year was the garden party, Thursday afternoon, at "Hill Crest," the handsome home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sherman Hoyt on Buena Vista street. Mrs. David B. Van Slyck and Mrs. Hoyt were hostesses upon this occasion and invitations were extended to 400 of Pasadena's society people. The spacious grounds, sloping south into a small natural cañon, were crowded between the hours of 4 and 7 and during the last hour a few men joined their wives. Refreshments were served on the wide verandas, by quaint Japanese maids in native dress and in a rustic tea house maids from the Flowery Kingdom dispensed tea. Those assisting were Mmes. F. Bruce Wetherby, Walter Raymond, Thaddeus Lowe, John W. Hugus, Ernest H. May, Horace Dobbins, Benjamin Page, B. Marshall Wotkyns, Jr., Misses Armstrong, Rowland, Ranney, Clark, Grace Clark, Daggett, Blossom, Ludovici, Alice Ludovici and Gwinn.

Mrs. Walstein Root has been the guest of honor at several smart functions this week. Notable among these was the bridge party given Monday afternoon by Mrs. Lloyd Macy of North Grand avenue, the guests being Mmes. John S. Cravens, John B. Miller, Edward R. Kellam, Charles Russell, Todd Ford, Robert A. Rowan, Henry Maurice Robinson and Charles Crans Perkins.

Thursday afternoon Mrs. Charles Cranz Perkins, at her home on Waverly Drive, entertained with bridge for Mrs. Root. Upon this occasion the guests were Mmes. James H. Wagner, Will Nevin, Charles Russell, Edward R. Kellam, Robert Pitcairn, Robert I. Rogers, S. C. Pierce, W. S. McCay, Robert A. Rowan, William Park, H. M. Robinson, John R. Miller, and John S. Cravens.

Miss Arleena Jacobs of North Marengo avenue was the hostess at a pleasant function, Monday afternoon, complimentary to Miss Laura Spurr of Lexington, Ky., and Mrs. Robert T. McReynolds, who was formerly Miss Frances Coulter of Los Angeles. Those present were Mmes. A. J. McCarthy, John Posey, Jack McCray, C. W. Bonyage, Stella Westfelt, Oscar Trippett, Misses Laux, Spurr, Bartlett and Claypool.

The members of the Monday Afternoon Club were delightfully entertained this week at Hollenbeck Park by Mrs. Arthur H. Conger of Los Angeles. An al fresco luncheon was served. Those participating were Mmes. W. D. Turner, W. W. Leithead, J. J. Bleeker, Benjamin Page, H. I. Stuart, H. G. Bennett, F. R. Harris, Howard Fish, G. A. Gibbs, Misses Carter and Blakeslee.

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Jardine gave a delightful moonlight fete in the picturesque cañon adjoining their home, Tuesday evening. It was complimentary to Mrs. H. Page Warden, who will leave soon for a European trip. Supper was served at twilight. Those enjoying the Jardines' hospitality were Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Macy, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Groenendyke, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wagner, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pitcairn, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Russell, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Cravens, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Pierce, Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Perkins.

Miss Clara Vaughn of South Marengo avenue entertained Tuesday afternoon in honor of Miss Elizabeth Seargent, who leaves this week for Flagstaff, Ariz., where she will spend the summer. The drawing-room was decorated in Shasta daisies and ferns and two little maids in Gretchen costumes and Dutch caps assisted in receiving. Miss Mazie Lynch shared the honors of the afternoon as she is also soon

MRS. LILLIAN CEOLA ARTRUP of Los Angeles and Edward Emile Chiapella, son of Mrs. J. F. Grass, were married Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Grass. It is seldom, even in Sunny California, that there is seen such a display of sweet peas. They were all purple ones, and with them were used butterfly bows of moline and numberless potted palms and ferns. The wide window in the handsome drawing-room was banked with the fragrant blossoms, and before it was placed a canopy of sweet peas with supports of flowers and ribbons of moline. Under this beautiful dome stood the bridal party. The bride was attired in an elaborate costume of white crepe and lace, made with a train. Her matron of honor, Mrs. Ethel Goldman of Los Angeles, wore light blue. Walter F. Haas of Los Angeles was best man. The Episcopal service was read by Rev. William Davies of Pasadena. A wedding supper followed.

After the ceremony, Mr. Grass surprised the assembled guests with the announcement of the engagement of his eldest daughter, Miss Eualie Bertha Grass, to Chester Marion Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Will Lewis of Hollywood.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Evans gave an afternoon and evening reception Thursday at their new home on Ivar street. In the evening the grounds and summer-house were illuminated with colored lanterns.

Unmarried Hollywood young men have organized a Bachelors' Club. Dancing parties are to be given frequently, and if any member marries he is to be fined a dinner for the club. Officers will be elected the night of the Fourth at a banquet to be given at Hotel Hollywood.

The Alumni of the Hollywood Union High School enjoyed their first annual banquet at Hotel Hollywood Friday evening. Miss Louise Blondeau was toastmaster.

THIRTY members of the Alabama Association of Los Angeles were entertained Monday evening by James P. Scott, B. Salmon, G. Brightman and J. Wheatley at the bungalow of Mr. Scott on Glendale avenue. Upon a platform erected on the lawn and elaborately decorated in American flags and palm fronds, sat a number of negro minstrel artists, who, with banjo, guitar and violin music and southern melodies, entertained the guests in true southern style. As the guests alighted from the car, "Dixie" was sung by the negro chorus as a welcome to the guests. Out in the bright moonlight, near a large palm, a bonfire was lighted around which the guests assembled and with long sticks held over the flames weinerwursts, which were browned sufficiently to satisfy the most fastidious epicure. Old-fashioned games were enjoyed on the lawn in the beautiful moonlight, after which each guest was handed the end of a cord which he was requested to follow. After much merry traversing in and out of the shrubbery the end was discovered to which was attached a small envelope which contained the fortune of the possessor of the cord. Refreshments were later served under the spreading branches of a tall pine tree.

Hamilton Wright Mabie

in a recent address said: "No magazine not founded on an idea has ever been or can be successful."

THE SMART SET was founded on an "idea" and from its first issue, March, 1900, has been a phenomenal success. The "idea" was to give to the world each month a volume of high-class fiction. Many imitators have since sprung up prompted by the marvelous popularity of THE SMART SET. The "idea" proposed publishing fiction purely upon its merit as such, and not because it was the product of famed writers. Each contribution should be taken for its excellence without reference to its author. Incidentally there were included novel features in magazine publishing. There were to be no "continued" stories. The founder believed that in this age of rush and hurry, of diversified amusement and recreation, of rapid thought, the old practice of giving a few chapters of a novel in each of several issues was bad. He believed that the great public—men and women, young and old—wanted a magazine full of completed, bright, clean, cheery novelettes and short stories, poems, sketches and jokes, the perusal of whose pages would give rest and delight—be satisfying to the reader.

THE SMART SET has never made a point of heralding noted authors. It has published short stories and novelettes from the most popular and brilliant writers of the day, but this was because the work offered by those writers has been good. Admittedly it has published many of the very brightest and most entertaining stories from authors never before read in any magazine. The work of such writers has found place in its columns because it was clever. A natural result has been that ten times more matter comes to its Editors than goes to any other magazine. New writers understand that they can get a hearing in THE SMART SET editorial rooms and that the hearing will be purely on the merit of their productions. All GREAT writers have once been NEW writers. It is recognized that in the case of many of them their first work has been their best. With the world of new writers sending their best to THE SMART SET, its readers are assured always of something fresh and novel and not the familiar and hackneyed work of writers who by some felicitous effort have produced a fame-maker and then have lived for the rest of their days on that reputation.

The remarkable circulation which THE SMART SET has attained has proved the value of the "idea." If you like the "idea" you will buy it quite as readily at its price of 25 cents as though it were 10 cents. You will prefer it to the cheaper imitations. You may be sure at all times that the "idea," which means brilliancy, clean sentiment, good English literature, intensely interesting and constantly refreshing mental entertainment, will be vigorously and studiously maintained.

LIFE OF PERIL BRIDE ELECTS.

New York Heiress Courting Death by Yaquis.

Accompanies Husband to His Lonely Sonora Mine.

Indians Athirst for Blood of Young Couple.

Following their marriage in St. James' Church, Madison avenue and Seventy-first street, Monday, June 10, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Beardsley Wood left New York for the bridegroom's camp in the mountains of Sonora, Mexico, where he has mining interests.

MR. AND MRS. SIDNEY B. WOOD.

The strangest honeymoon an heiress ever had will be spent in a stone fortress-like mansion which her husband has had built especially for protection of himself and bride from the Yaqui Indians, notorious as the most bloodthirsty of the race.

Mrs. Wood, formerly Miss Emma Lucy Washburn, heiress to a million-dollar estate (part of the Richardson "spite house" fortune) and reared in surroundings of luxury, has voluntarily elected thus to begin her married career.

Hidden away in the mountains of Sonora, distant about ten miles from Baroyeca, once the capital city of Mexico's northernmost State, is situated the camp of "Sid" Wood, as he is known by all who have more than a bowing acquaintance with the man. The Wood mine lies in the bottom of a cañon, only the shaft house and the dump piles marking its location in the midst of the tropical vegetation. The mine is one of the ancient Spaniards' discoveries and was partly developed centuries ago in the time of the conquest.

Through the rank undergrowth of the forest a path has been cleared for a distance of 600 yards to a circular open space 300 feet in diameter, in the middle of which stands a low-roofed slate-topped building of stone, its doors and windows strongly barred. On each side of the cañon tower up a thousand feet in the air the almost perpendicular walls, their barrenness emphasized by the luxuriant growth at the bottom.

At four equi-distant points on the outer rim of the cleared space great stone towers loom up above the treetops. At the base of each an iron door, stoutly reinforced with iron bands, gives entrance to a series of ladders built into the inner wall. At the top a thick walled parapet provides protection for the guard stationed night and day in each of the towers.

In the shadow of the walls of the big house lounge constantly twenty-five Mexican rurales, stationed there permanently by the Mexican government. In a barracks at one side of the clearing as many more of the chronically somnolent soldiers doze away their free time. The guard is continuous throughout the twenty-four hours, and each watch runs through a full half day.

RELENTLESS WARFARE.

For four centuries the Yaqui Indians, whose depredations in recent years have laid waste many Arizona ranches and whose very name in Sonora inspires greater dread than all the other dreaded things of that wild country combined, have waged relentless warfare on the men they hold to be usurpers of their rightful property. The mining wealth of Sonora has ever been the casus belli through all the centuries of never-ending struggle. The Yaquis hold firmly to the belief that before the invading hosts from Spain spread through the country they owned practically all of Sonora, a stretch of mountainous country roughly 300 miles long and half as wide. The Gulf of California and the Gulf of Mexico form the limits of their territory, as they deem it to be. Four mountains, Samowachi, Saparoa, Tetachiva and Baroyeca, are the Yaqui landmarks which form the northern and southern boundary lines.

Death has ever been the penalty paid by any Mexican with the temerity to invade this Yaqui land—if he came alone and failed to guard against ambuscade. The Yaquis' hatred for Mexico and Mexicans is a relic of the days centuries ago when Mexican padres occupied Sonora's mines and by force compelled the Indians to work as slaves in extracting the ore which the Yaquis themselves had uncovered. When, almost two hundred years the Yaquis arose in force and deposed their masters, the Mexican priests, they regained brief possession of the mines. Later Mexican soldiers won back in a series of fights the properties, and the Yaquis once more became little more than slaves.

There is no longer any concerted plan of action on the part of the Yaquis. All their great chiefs are dead. Of the 8000 who less than five years ago kept all the country in a state of terror, only 3000 remain in Sonora. The other 5000 have been captured and deported to the southern part of Mexico, where they are worked with convict laborers.

BEST HATED MAN.

But the Yaquis no longer act in unison. Raids are spasmodic and not well planned. There is no unity of purpose in the Indians' procedure. With one exception the objects of each of the roving bands are individual and without relation to the others. The exception is "Sid" Wood. His life is today sought by every Yaqui in Sonora. To kill the American owner of the new stone house in the cañon near Baroyeca is the one common aim of all the Yaquis.

But to be the most hated man in all the country is to have achieved a distinction which few men, however ready to die, would care to claim. And that is the position "Sid" Wood, bridegroom, occupies in the minds of the 3000 Yaquis in the mountains of Sonora.

It is doubtful that a half dozen of "Sid" Wood's friends realize the true situation. Wood is not given to talking about himself, nor to magnifying dangers he has faced so often and so disastrously—for his enemies.

To one of his friends who had gained an inkling to the danger Wood faces from the time he enters Sonora until he is far beyond its borders the bridegroom replied to a question as follows:

"Why do I go back there and take my bride? I go because I have to. Mrs. Wood goes because she won't let me go alone."

Characteristic of the man was the answer in its brevity. His career, almost from the day he was first old enough to be able to exercise any individuality, has been similarly characteristic.

Williams College accepted Wood as a freshman in the class of 1901. He was then nineteen years old, silent to a point of taciturnity, and apparently imbued with few of the ideals and views common to his classmates. He was elected to membership to the Delta Psi fraternity in his freshman year. Wood preferred long, all night tramps about the hills encircling the little Berkshire town to joining in the pleasures of his classmates. It was common rumor before the end of his freshman year that Wood had built a half dozen lean-tos on top of the hills about the town. He frequently disappeared for two days at a time. No one ever accompanied him on his trips, and none shared the secret of his long jaunts.

LOVER OF ADVENTURE.

Wood invited one of his fraternity brothers, Stanley Washburn (no relation to his bride,) to join him on a trip to British Columbia during the summer of 1898. Together the two boys—neither was 21 years old—worked their way to the headwaters of the Saskatchewan River. Their plan had been to do prospecting, but when they learned no white man had ever braved the little river in a boat, the two boys built a raft and started on the perilous journey. Three times they were wrecked before they finally gave up the attempt. After having covered more than one hundred miles down stream, naming unofficially several mountains which have never since been explored by white men, the two boys left the river, bought a pair of saddle horses from passing Indians and started overland to a Hudson Bay trading post known as the Rocky Mountain House. Here they found the provisions they had cached there three months earlier entirely destroyed by rats. It was the end of a disheartening journey of 400 miles across country, the last fifty of which they had come on foot, both their horses having given out.

Both young men began their sophomore year together—Stanley Washburn, convinced that civilization was best for him thereafter and "Sid" Wood as enthusiastically firm in his love for the wild country. Wood accordingly found it necessary to start alone the following summer when he announced to his most intimate friends that he intended to spend his vacation in Indian Territory.

From Joplin, Mo., where he went to investigate the zinc mines for which the place is noted, Wood started to ride across Indian Territory. It was as he traveled through the lands of the Cherokee nation that he met a man who professed to be a half-breed Yaqui and who developed in Wood the desire to give vent to his surplus energy in a cause and a way wholly to his liking.

IS IMPOSED UPON.

"I learned later," Wood said in telling the story, "that my friend really had no Yaqui blood in his veins at all. He was employed by a newspaper published in St. Louis and circulated generally throughout the United States among the Mexicans hostile to the Diaz régime. His duties were to enlist money and volunteers to help the Yaquis in a great scheme to win back what they think is their own country. Back of this very altruistic-seeming scheme was a plot to carry the warfare into Mexico City itself, overthrow the government and put new men in power.

"Of all this part of the plan, of course, I knew nothing. The revolutionists' agent fired me with tales of the wrongs done the Yaquis and dwelt on the justice of their cause until I was convinced I could do nothing else except give all my services might be worth to help them win their fight.

"My informant told me that the Bronco Yaquis, the 'bad' Indians, who were acting as the ringleaders in the plot, had formed a Yaqui junta, or union, with headquarters in Tucson, Ariz. It was there I was to meet the chief of the Yaquis. But an accident prevented me from making the start that summer. I was breaking horses with several Delaware Indians one day when my bronco reared and fell over backward with me. My hip and leg were so badly crushed I was laid up for three days in Wagoner, in the Cherokee Nation and then was obliged to come back to my home, in Bridgeport, Ct."

INDIANS TEST MIM.

At the end of his junior year, in the summer of 1900, Wood started alone once more for Arizona. The Yaqui leaders, who were awaiting the young collegian, reports of whose daring and readiness to join them had already been much discussed, as much adversely as with credulity, wasted little time in putting Wood through a series of tests which might well have discouraged an older and less enthusiastic man.

"When I reached Tucson," Wood explained, "I was speedily introduced to the old chief, Caheme, who immediately began my education in Yaqui warfare. Caheme, years before a captain in the Mexican army, knew his enemy as no other Indian could have known it. Of superior intelligence and with a cunning I never fathomed in all my association with him. Caheme was the master spirit of the little band of ten thousand he had to call upon, and when it is known that half of this ten thousand were squaws, the overwhelming conceit of this leader must be realized. To begin a campaign as ambitious as Caheme had planned, encouraged by the revolutionary Mexicans, with such a force seemed to me at first suicidal; but I soon learned that the women, who I quickly discovered were frequently the equals of the men in height and strength, were even keener for fight. Not one squaw was without a modern rifle, and all of them could shoot and kill as far as any of the men. Later, in actual skirmishes I found them even more resourceful in the face of defeat. Their ammunition gone and with many of the men skulking back from the thickest of the fight, the women would reverse their guns, and, using them as clubs, literally pound their way through the ranks of the Mexican regulars."

Wood returned to Williams in the fall of 1900, however, to finish his senior year. He had attended recitations less than a month, when a telegram from Chicago informed him that Caheme, accompanied by one of the Mexican revolutionists, was on his way to New York where he must appear. The conference was held in the Hotel Imperial. Wood listened to the old chief's pleas that he leave college and return to Arizona at once. A concerted movement by all the Yaquis had been planned for early November. The ultimate object was the seizure of all Sonora and the annihilation of every Mexican in the State.

CALL TO BE "CHIEF."

Caheme declared he was too old and feeble to lead the expedition successfully and beseeched Wood to return to his people, who were ready to proclaim him chief. But for the first time the college man refused to heed the call of the people whose cause he had championed, and the chief revolutionary leader returned alone to Arizona.

After leaving Williams College in the year 1900, Wood started for California, where he entered the law school of Leland Stanford Univeristy. After studying there for two months he left for Carson City, Nev., in the spring of 1901, where he entered the law office of Samuel Platt, United States Attorney for Nevada, and began reading law.

In 1901 Wood went among the Navajos in Arizona. He says:

"I was with them for six months. I discovered they owned a million sheep on the reservation, and not one of 'em was a real sheep. They had been inbred till there wasn't any wool left on one of them. It didn't seem right to me."

In consequence Wood went on to Washington in the spring of 1903, where he laid the matter of the sheep that weren't "real sheep" before Secretary Taft. The next day Wood started back to the Navajo reservation with an appointment from President Roosevelt as stock agent. The following eighteen months Wood was busy superintending the introduction of new rams into the reservation. At the end of this time the yield of wool per sheep had jumped from less than two pounds to more than seven pounds.

Although he had not returned to them since his dismissal from college, Wood had kept in touch with the Yaquis and had followed their frequent, always successful attacks to regain their foothold in Sonora. Caheme had been shot and killed from ambush a year earlier while he was on his way to make a treaty with the Mexicans.

PLAYS PEACEMAKER.

"It seemed time for me to get on the ground and see just how things stood," Wood explained, "and so I left the Navajos early in 1904 and headed for Tucson. Mompoche was the new chief, and, unlike Caheme, his policy was to make a lasting peace with the Mexicans. Under his leadership the remaining Yaquis had been brought round to favor the idea. When I came among them I was immediately commissioned to meet Gen. Torres, head of the Mexican army in Sonora, and effect a peace if possible.

"Gen. Lorenzo Torres is in charge of fifteen thousand soldiers in Sonora and, under a contract with the government, feeds and clothes them all. On his ranches he works the soldiers beside peon labor. The peons are paid by Torres. The soldiers are paid by the government. Obviously the more soldiers in Sonora the more provisions Torres sells, the more soldiers at work cultivating Torres' crops and fewer peons he need employ. With peace declared between the Mexicans and the Yaquis, Sonora would not need one-third its present military guard. It didn't take me long to discover these very evident facts, and peace began to look unlikely."

Before Wood reported his failure to gain the peace Mompoche sought, and as he was about to start back to Tucson to admit the impossibility of ending the warfare he was approached by an old Yaquai, whose life he had saved four years earlier. The Yaqui, Juan Algardo by name, told Wood of an immensely rich deposit of silver near Baroyeca. Algardo explained that the mine was one of those stolen from his tribe in the sixteenth century and worked by the Mexican padres then. It was now owned by four Mexicans, who knew little of its value and who were not working it.

"It seemed to me more important to investigate this story than to hurry to report my failure to get peace," Wood said. "The Yaquis wanted peace and I realized I might not have a chance to look over mines in Sonora if I waited to tell Mompoch. I hadn't been able to do anything. So I went to the mine."

TROUBLE THREATENS.

Before Wood reached Tucson word of his failure had preceded him. To a few of the leaders it had also become known that Wood had begun negotiations to gain possession of one of the ancient Yaqui mines. Wood's description of the result of this information on the Yaqui's part is graphic. He said:

"Yaquis, like other Indians, do not waste time giving or hearing explanations. I had failed. I had started to get one of their old mines. That was enough. A Yaqui and I after that could only do business behind the butt of a gun. So when I found out Mompoche knew all I had done I turned south again and didn't try to walk into trouble."

It is now eight months since Wood received a title to his mine. Mompoche was killed in a skirmish with the rurales less than ten miles from Wood's camp the very day the title was transferred. At about the same time Wood was awarded a contract by the Southern Pacific Railroad to build seventy miles of track from the Gulf of California to the Yaqui River, from Guaymas to Corcroit. Beginning in December of last year Wood rushed the work through to completion by May 1.

Forty-eight Mexicans were killed by the Yaquis during the construction of the railroad. Thirty-three of the guard of one hundred rurales were also killed in the five months of the road's construction. On one occasion the mule on which Wood was riding was shot dead through the neck by a Yaqui firing from ambush.

Origin of Kipling's Humor.

Rudyard Kipling undoubtedly got his wit from his maternal grandfather, the Rev. George B. Macdonald, a Wesleyan clergyman. In the days when young Macdonald was courting the lady whom he afterward married, the father-in-law-to-be—an aged Methodist with extremely strict notions in regard to the proprieties—was injudicious enough on one occasion to enter the parlor without giving any warning of his approach. The consequence was that he found the sweethearts occupying a single chair. Deeply shocked by this spectacle, the old man solemnly said:

"Mr. Macdonald, when I courted Mrs. Brown she sat on one side of the room and I on the other."

Macdonald's reply was: "That's what I should have done if I had been courting Mrs. Brown." — [Chicago News.

Two Seattle men, Asahel Curtis and W. M. Price, have penetrated the heart of the Olympic Mountains and reached heights there that are believed never before to have been traversed by either white men or Indians. They got within three miles of the mountain, and scaled three hitherto unclimbed peaks, during their expedition.

MEN BECOMING SUBJUGATED.

THREE HUNDRED OCCUPATIONS WOMEN HAVE ENTERED.

Of Ninteen Industries More Than Fifty Thousand Women Are Employed in Each—Some Startling Figures Are Found in the U. S. Census Reports.

The census reports for 1900, when published in detail, will show that women are engaged in more than 300 different occupations as bread winners, and of these there are nineteen in which more than 50,000 women are employed. It is significant of the curious extent to which the women, the weaker vessel, is confined to manual labor, that all the lawyers, doctors, preachers, writers and artists, exclusive of those who teach, will not make a strictly professional combination sufficient to get into the 50,000 class.

This table gives the nineteen occupations with 50,000 women workers, and the percentage of the total of 4,883,630 breadwinners in each class:

Occupations—	Number.	Pct.
Servants and waiters	1,165,561	24.1
Farm laborers	456,405	9.4
Dressmakers	338,144	7.0
Laundresses	328,935	6.8
Teachers	327,206	6.8
Farmers	307,706	6.4
Textile mill hands	231,458	4.8
Housekeepers	146,929	3.0
Saleswomen	142,265	2.9
Seamstresses	138,724	2.9
Nurses	108,691	2.2
Laborers	106,916	2.2
Typewriters	85,086	1.8
Milliners	82,936	1.7
Clerks	81,000	1.7
Book-keepers	72,896	1.5
Tailors	61,571	1.3
Boarding and lodging	59,455	1.2
Musicians and music teachers	52,010	1.1
	4,292,894	88.8

To understand just how the woman who works is progressing it is worth while remembering that among the domestic servants, nurses, laundry workers, dressmakers, milliners, boarding and lodging-house keepers, housekeepers and stewards, and seamstresses, the women far outnumber the men. This is natural, for these are the purely feminine occupations in which the housewife has merely broadened her life in the direction of working for others, and generally for other women.

But there are other occupations where the women have driven the men to the wall. There are two notable instances, the teachers and the typewriters, in which class is included of course the stenographers.

Teaching not so long ago was exclusively a man's work. He imparted instruction and wielded the rod in about equal quantities. Then the women started in to teach the children and the child was taught at its mother's knee. The result is startling. According to the census figures there were in 1900, 327,206 women and only 118,481 men engaged as teachers in schools and colleges. In other words, nearly three-fourths of all the teaching in the United States was done by women. Today the percentage of three women to one man is probably below the average.

Less than two generations ago when Robert R. Hitt, later a distinguished member of Congress, reported the debates between Lincoln and Douglass for the Chicago Tribune, almost every stenographer in the world was a man. Now the census reports show 85,086 women and only 25,794 men as stenographers and typewriters, the women outnumbering the men in the proportion of more than three to one.

In the textile mills the sexes are represented about evenly, but there are four times as many women as men engaged in boxmaking, and in almost every line of industrial work, except those involving the exercise of great strength, the man is complaining of the competition of the woman.

Were it not for the marriages which transfer the woman from the shop to the home there is no telling how complete the industrial subjugation of the man might become in the near future.

BITS OF VERSE.

Lyrics Unsung.

O, believe not those who say,
Song hath had its perfect day!
Tones of infinite sweet change
Tremble past our hearing's range;
Rays beyond the violet
Eyes of ours behold not yet!
Here a gage will I throw down—
We are not the ages' crown;
After us are coming those
To whose senses, shall unclose
Beauty hidden from our sight
In a fold of common light—
Music, shut in Eol's cell,
Sweeter far than Arion's shell!
Touched to soothe the savage sea!

Who will answer this to me,
When I ask if any deem
That the poet's song and dream
Have not reaches unexplored—
Deeps unsounded—heights unsoared?
Nay! To every race and tongue
There are lyrics yet unsung!
For this life of man keeps pace
To a mighty step in space;
And the mists that round us drift
Ever more and more uplift!
O, the Father still creates;
And the child in wonder waits,
Ready new delights to find
Where before the eyes were blind—
Where before the ears were dead!
So, I say, as I have said,
There are lyrics yet unsung—
Unto harps as yet not strung!

A Timely Opportunity to Save on Supplies You Need

For Beach ::: For Mountain ::: For Camp

Have you planned a vacation? Are you going away? Do you need supplies for beach or outing? If you do, you can save money at the Broadway on the very things you want most. Timeliness—that's the underlying principle of all Broadway sales. What you want most, when you want it, and at a price that will save you money. The hat, the suit, the parasol, the fittings for summer cottage, from the grip you take with you to the grocery supplies you'll need while there. We'll be ready for a three days' sale beginning Monday.

New Business Hours

Beginning Saturday, July 6th.

Next Saturday we will begin, as usual, our summer half holidays. Store will close at 12:30 Saturday and every Saturday until September 15th.

Store will be closed all day July 4th. Read the papers on that day for an important announcement.

Help the early closing movement by doing your Saturday shopping as early as possible. We intend to fill the half day brimful of shopping interest to you. Be sure to read Friday evening papers.

good deal of my attention will devoted to the food problem. I to look into the sources from food is gathered and into the as well. Food conditions have improved all along the isthmus the last few months. When gangs of laborers started in, cooking facilities were very rude The cooking was done out of and in many cases over open The next step in the evolution kitchen was the erection of of corrugated iron inclosed on sides and roofed over. Some four club costing $75,000 each, have al- been built and equipped with of the features suggested by us. buildings are very creditable to government and the Y.M.C.A., who direct them. They are built of in a style of architecture com- the locality, with broad veran- and many large windows. The of these buildings, I under- is entirely modern and up to date and is in fact as perfect as could be desired. The streets in the vicinity of the clubs and houses are for the most part drained and good sanitary conditions prevail. I shall make it my work, however, to visit the most remote quarters and go through them very thoroughly. Especially in the housekeeping quarters and in the kitchens of the club houses a woman's judgment in such matters may be valuable.

"I am especially anxious that the workmen and their families should have an opportunity to pass their leisure hours pleasantly. I do not know just what has been done for them, and this will be not the least important line of my investigation. The work is hard and the climate is, of course, very trying, and it is only their due that they should have pleasant places to go to pass their leisure hours. I know that much has been done in the clubs to enable the men, especially the skilled workmen, to help pass the time. The best clubs, while not luxurious and although they do not carry out all of our suggestions, would seem to be satisfactory. These buildings have their reading and writing rooms, their bowling alleys, billiard rooms, card rooms and social halls. Among the suggestions our representatives made were provisions for shower baths and some luxuries that have not yet been introduced.

"There has been some criticism, I believe of the plan of the government to provide athletic fields and the proper equipment for enjoying various outdoor games. Personally I strongly favor such provisions, and I shall do everything in my power to develop this side of accommodations. Much good work has already been accomplished along these lines. In connection with most of the clubhouses are to be found tennis courts, and, I believe, baseball diamonds. The federation in its suggestions made two years ago advised establishing golf links, croquet grounds, rifle ranges and handball courts. To some these may seem fanciful, but the old rule of all work and no play would certainly apply in the tropics even more than in cooler climates.

"The workers for the welfare of the inhabitants of the canal zone have even suggested a race course for ponies and a cinder path suitable for athletic contests. The plans originally drawn and submitted to the government by the civic federation also called for a band stand and a café.

FRESH LITERATURE.

NEW BOOKS REVIEWED.

[BY A TIMES REVIEWER.]

Result of Forty Years.

THE FOLKLORE IN RURAL ECONOMY. By A. S. Yermloff. St. Petersburg, 1906. Four volumes.

This remarkable work represents forty years of study by the organizer of the Ministry, for twelve years the Minister of Agriculture of Russia, the author of several works upon rural economy and a recognized authority on the subject in Russia as well as in Western Europe. It contains a compilation of proverbs and observations of farmers of all nations upon everything concerning farm life, based partly upon the existing bibliography in over a dozen languages from ancient to modern times, but mostly upon personal local researches in various countries and localities. American folklore on the subject, while coming principally from English roots and sources, and necessarily brief because of the comparative youth of our country, is given full consideration.

The first volume gives the sayings and proverbs for every day in the year concerning various signs of nature and meteorological phenomena in relation to crops, and measures which should be adopted by a farmer in consequence of them—it is a wonderful rural economical calendar, the result of experience of many generations. The second volume gives the folklore relating to agriculture and horticulture proper—advises as to field work and rest, the people's philosophy ow the importance and significance of the farmer and of his relation to the State and common welfare. The third volume relates to the folklore concerning wild and domestic animal life and their place in farm life. The last volume gives the folklore as to seasons and weather. There is an appendix to this volume, containing complete bibliography on the subject in all civilized languages.

This work is already translated into German, Der landwirtschaftliche Volkskalender, by F. A. Brockhaus, Leipsig, 1906, and, I understand, is being translated into English, French and Italian. While agriculture of late has become a positive science, based upon theoretical and experimental researches, practical results still depend greatly upon the weather and signs of nature, more so than in any other human occupation, and the folklore on the subject, as the result of wisdom of many centuries of experience, should retain, and in many old countries still retains, its predominating influence among the farmers. They are naturally conservative, and stick closer to sayings and usages of their ancestors than any other class of modern society.

GRACE GALLATIN SETON.

wife of Ernest Thompson Seton, who has accompanied her husband on many of his trips, and written of her experiences in her latest book, "Nimrod's Wife."

Woman in the Wilds.

NIMROD'S WIFE. By Grace Gallatin Seton. Doubleday, Page & Co., New York. (For sale by C. C. Parker.)

Mrs. Seton has accompanied her husband in many trips to the wilds, and this book is the record of several such excursions to nature. It is written from the viewpoint of one in the last stages of conversion from rifle hunting to the new hunting—Mrs. Seton kills perhaps three or four wild animals in the trips that are chronicled, with multiplied excuses for so doing. At last, with the slaughter of a gigantic moose, she turns forever from the rifle.

Strangely enough, the bright particular thing in the book is not connected with hunting or the wild—unless an Indian girl with a primitive heart and a Carlisle mind be so classed. The story of Arabella Horsetail, given a chapter as an incident in a hunting trip, is worth a little book by itself. Arabella is the Indian girl's stodgy "civilized" name. In reality she is Manita, an Absaroka of the Absarokas, and her story is a powerful commentary and a peep behind the seldom lifted curtain of the Indian mind.

The rest of the book is not tense and vivid as the little episode of Arabella. It touches on nature in many moods, getting close to some of them in an intimate way, and away from some others in a display of rhetoric. It is varied in treatment, touching different conditions, different parts of the country, and different people. Every one who loves the open will find in it something of enjoyment.

The story of the success of "The Lady of the Decoration" reads like a bit of fiction. The book was issued in April, 1906, and the sale during the first month was only 800 copies. For six months this collection of real, live letters aroused little notice; but in November the reading public seemed to be awakening to the fact that here was a book distinctly worth while. In December three editions were needed to supply the demand; and since then the sales have gone on increasing steadily, until it is not unusual for the publishers to sell a thousand a day—a recent day's sales reaching 1350 copies. Within thirteen months of issue thirteen printings have been needed.

"Papers of a Pariah," by the Rev. Robert Hugh Benson, are discribed as papers left in Mr. Benson's hands by a man of good education who went on the stage but retired some three years before a comparatively early death, and who during the interim was received into the Roman Catholic church. "Father Benson" is the youngest of the three sons of the late Archbishop of Canterbury, who are causing so much confusion in identity by their activity in the literary world. The Rev. Hugh Benson is assistant priest at the Catholic Church, Cambridge. Edward Frederic Benson, the novelist, author of "Dodo" and "The Angel of Pain," lives in Chelsea; Arthur Christopher Benson, the author of "From a College Widow," etc., is a fellow of Magdalen College, Cambridge. All three sons were educated at Cambridge and are all prolific writers of entirely different schools.

Miss Ellen Velvin, the writer of books about wild animals in captivity, has a large and interesting correspondence. Led by her keen interest in wild animals she spends months studying some peculiarity she has discovered, verifying her conclusions and gathering her facts. Then she writes to the superintendents of zoos and trainers of wild animals all over the world to see if they have discovered similar conditions. She receives letters also from other people interested in the same subject from St. Petersburg to San Francisco asking questions and giving information, all of which she studies and considers. According to her experience all the remarkable tricks done by wild animals are the result of training and are rewarded with some specially desired kind of food. Miss Velvin was born and educated in England, but she lives in New York and is the author of a bibliography of Martin Luther as well as "Tales Told at the Zoo," etc.

Mrs. George Cornwallis West (Lady Randolph Churchill) in her "Social London: Past and Present" comments on the innovation of women's clubs which is becoming a feature of London life. She finds it surprising that, considering the size of them, no scandals have as yet arisen, and quotes an amusing story of a large club in which some breach of propriety had taken place. The offending member was turned out and a stringent rule made to meet the case. Shortly afterward the Dowager Lady X., a member of the club who had come to London for a court, told the hall porter that she expected her hairdresser at 7 o'clock and that he was to be shown up to her bedroom. "Sorry, milady, but it's against the new rules; no man's allowed beyond the first floor." The lady argued and protested and gave the porter a piece of her mind, to which he replied, "Well, it's hall your hown fault and it is 'ow you've brought it on yerselves."

Henry Copley Greene has written an appreciation of George Meredith for the current Atlantic which will be of interest to the students and admirers of the novelist. It is based upon the pocket edition of Meredith which came out last year and which includes delightful books for summer reading, convenient in size, light in weight and, unlike most inexpensive books, printed from the plates of the expensive edition, and are pleasant to read. Unyieldingly as Mr. Meredith guards his legitimate privacy, many facts of significant importance are given by Mr. Greene. Although of Welsh and Irish blood, Mr. Meredith was born in England. A ward in chancery under a guardian with whom he had no warmth of companionship, he was sent to school in Germany, where he laid the foundation of his classic erudition and caught a love for music which lasted all his life. A law student in London at 20, he emerged from London and the law at 21 involved in debts not of his own making. By leader writing for various papers, conducting the Fortnightly Review in the absence of John Morley and other literary drudgery he gained independence. After the death of his first wife he settled in Surrey, married again and went to London each week, counting among his friends, Swinburn, James Thomson, Morley and Lady Duff Gerdon. He read the works of poets and novelists, big and little, English, American, German, Italian, and French. In person he was described by Schwob "as broad shouldered, strongly built, his face clear, fine and dominating, his eyes deep blue . . . and literally drunk with thought."

Study of a Child.

THE SILENT DOOR. By Florence Wilkinson, author of "Kings and Queens," "The Far Country," etc. McClure, Phillips & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

"The Silent Door," being written and published in the form of a novel, has a plot like any other story in a book, though its author does not intrude her scheme of action very often—in fact, she forgets it and neglects it through many delightful chapters. The charm of "The Silent Door"—and it is a charm that is very great, permeating the book from cover to cover—is in its subtle understanding of the soul and heart of an imaginative child. What little Rue Penrith, who lives in the village of Joppa, says and does and thinks—especially what she thinks—is of vastly mort importance than the vexed question of whether her mother, who has strayed from home and is lost in New York, will ever be found again.

No lovelier picture of a child has been penned in many a year than this one of little Rue—a picture that is as truthful as it is attractive, as searching as it is full of color. Miss Wilkinson's art is very leisurely, yet every reader will be tempted to implore her to cover her pages with even slower and more deliberate strokes. Her portrait of Rue Penrith provokes the silent chuckle and the humid eyes. "The Silent Door" is a book to keep and to open at almost any page again and again. We who have once been young may not neglect it.

A Story of Scotland.

THE MASTER OF STAIR. By Marjorie Bowen, author of "The Viper of Milan." McClure, Phillips & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

Miss Bowen's first book, "The Viper of Milan," was a novel full of promise—a promise that has been more than fulfilled in her second one, "The Master of Stair." This is a Scotch story of the time of William of Orange, and deals with the plots and counterplots of the adherents and opponents of King James, as well as with the bloody feuds of the rival Scottish clans. The book is serious, even somber, but it is of absorbing interest, its literary style approaching that of the drama in its fine terseness.

SALT-GLAZED STONEWARE. By Edwin Atlee Barber, A.M., Ph.D. Doubleday, Page & Co., New York. (Price 50 cents.)

These handy little volumes, each complete in itself, contain historical sketches, reviews of processes, accurate descriptions of the various kinds of wares produced in different countries, complete indexes, and all available data that will facilitate the identification of specimens. They are exhaustive and authoritative, being prepared by the curator of the Pennsylvania Museum and School of Industrial Design. The illustrations are many and good. These two are the first of the series. Other volumes in preparation are "Lead Glazed Pottery," and "Artificial Soft Paste Porcelain," to be followed by monographs on ceramics, glassware, metal work, lacquers, enamels, carvings, etc. These "Primers of Art" will prove to be invaluable to the student and collector.

For Press Workers.

WRITING FOR THE PRESS. By Robert Luce. Clipping Bureau Press, Boston. (Prices, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.)

This is a useful compendium of everyday information for those who write or contemplate writing for newspaper, magazine or book publishers. This reviewer finds that even an old-timer may learn much from it. It is exceedingly comprehensive, taking up almost every department of knowledge essential to the writer's craft, from the correct use of words and the art of condensation to the measurement of type and the cost of press work. It is not so dogmatic as many works of its class, but the beginner must needs unlearn some of its instructions—for instance, that it is improper to use the expression, "the accused" as a substantive. Many of the best users of English now employ this substantive and the Standard Dictionary sustains it. Common usage is making many good words every day, while our uncommon President Roosevelt is making his new "spells."

PEOPLE AND THINGS LITERARY.

Leroy Scott, whose new novel, "To Him That Hath," will be among the summer publications, is now in New York preparing material for a Russian publisher. Mr. Scott has recently returned from Russia, where he has been studying social and economic conditions.

William Sage's new romance of love and politics, entitled "By Right Divine," will be published this week. The book derives the name, according to the publishers, from the fact that the central character, Senator Fordyce, has held his State in his own hands for so long that he has almost arrived at the conclusion that he has a divine right to be its ruler.

Dr. J. G. Frazer's volume of studies in Oriental religion, "Adonis, Attis and Osiris," has just had a second printing. It will be remembered that this volume is an exhaustive treatment of one of the subjects touched on in Dr. Frazer's famous work, "The Golden Bough."

Simultaneously with the visit of E. Phillips Oppenheim, the English novelist, to this country comes the announcement of an eighth printing of "A Prince of Sinners," the novel that first won him his great popularity with American readers. Mr. Oppenheim's visit to America was one for both business and pleasure. His wife is the daughter of a manufacturer who lives in the suburbs of Boston.

Robert and Elizabeth Shackleton, having explored the country in their enthusiasm for old furniture, brass and china, and having made delightful homes in some strange places, have written of their experiences and discoveries for the benefit of other enthusiasts. Their book will be called "The Quest of the Colonial," and will be published in the autumn.

"The Artistic Temperament," Jane Wardwell's new story to be published soon, is a novel of society life and artistic genius in which the hero is led on by love of beauty to interesting experiences. The woman in the case is restless, excitable and eager for admiration. He offers to paint her portrait, and she goes to his studio and makes it difficult for him to live up to his moral resolutions.

"Russia and Reform," by Bernard Pares, is a book in process of preparation by one who knows the Russian people, their language and their history. The work follows the development of the empire from the Slavophil tradition of "Czar, Church and People" up to the election of the second Douma. It is written by a careful observer, and one who believes in the future of Russia.

Mrs. Harold Gorst, whose husband is the son of Sir John Gorst, M.P., and a brother of Sir Eldon Gorst, Lord Cromer's successor in Egypt, dedicates her new book "to the average respectable man" because her theory is that women are what men make them. The book is called "The Soul of Milly Gorst," and presents a picture of the well-to-do poor who inhabit such districts as Battersea.

Florence Wilkinson, the author of "The Silent Door," is the daughter of Prof. William Cleaver Wilkinson, the writer of "The Baptist Principle" and "The Epic of Saul." Her early days were spent in a Puritanical home, where discipline was strict and reading consisted largely of volumes of sermons and serious thought. She left her home under parental displeasure and began her work in New York as an author and plawrightt.

"The Psychology of Alcoholism," by George B. Cutter, Ph.D., with an introduction by Prof. George Trumbull Ladd of Yale University, has just been brought out. It is a most important and scientific work on the subject, and the author through his original researches has reached conclusions of the greatest interest and value.

A. M. Kirby, the author of the forthcoming book on "Daffodils," has for the last thirty years been collecting daffodils in his own home garden in New Jersey, paying high prices for rare specimens and making data from his own experience from which to judge the most successful varieties for this climate. One of Mr. Kirby's interesting methods in growing is to protect his flowers from the sun by tiny umbrellas, especially made for the purpose of tobacco cloth.

Among the early summer publications will be a book on the water lily family called "Water Gardens," by Henry S. Connard and Henry Hus. Mr. Connard is the author of the monograph on the water lily family published by the Carnegie Institute. Mr. Hus is connected with the Shaw Gardens of St. Louis, and has gained much of his material through association with James Gurney. Mr. Gurney was at one time in charge of the gardens of the Duke of Devonshire at his old country place, Chatsworth. It was there that Mr. Gurney brought to its first flower the water lily of the Amazon, the Victoria Regia.

One of the new books of last week is "The Gates of Kamt," by the Baroness Orczy, author of "The Scarlet Pimpernel." The story describes the efforts of an Egyptologist to prove that the ancient race of Egyptians, the builders of the pyramids and the great temples, did not die out or lose their identity by being absorbed in the races that later inhabited Egypt. In the interior of the Libyan desert, hundreds of miles from any caravan track, he discovers a country where this ancient race of Egypt lives exactly as it did 4000 years ago.

"About this time, as the old almanacs might announce, expect disturbances of the English language," says a writer on "School-boy English" in The Outlook. Three instructors in English at Harvard have prepared a classified list of the linguistic disorders that manifest themselves during this period, he informs us. Among the amusing examples may be quoted the following bit of grotesque English which only a sub-freshman could turn out: "Antonio is direct, a little harsh and yet his friendship for Bassanio and Bassanio's love for him are characters that no one who has read the play cannot help from recommending it with the highest praise."

The MacMillan Company has in press a work on "The Psychology and Pedagogy of Reading," by Prof. Edmund B. Huey of the Western University of Pennsylvania. The book will present in a form intelligible to the general reader and teacher, all the most important data concerning reading. The author has made a careful study of the problems of reading, both in the laboratory and in the school room and library. While the work will doubtless be largely used as a text-book, the author has aimed to make it a book full of information for all readers.

A certain Frau Kremer sent by the Saxon Court to remove the little daughter of the King's divorced wife, the Countess Montignoso, has compiled all she could learn about the runaway princess who should now be Queen of Saxony in a book which will be published soon in Dresden. Frau Kremer describes the exiled Countess as hysterical and whimsical and confident that could she meet the King alone she "would win him back." The little Princess Monica Pia is described as an incorrigible child who has to be "tickled to sleep" and who has "a strange passion for the smell of benzine." Altogether the book promises to be one of those racy chronicles of people in high life that many persons enjoy reading.

The Muck-Rake of the Grocery Store.

"The muck-raker of the grocery story—the novelist who will tell the hungry public the horrors of the open box—has not arrived," writes the editor in the June Woman's Home Companion.

"So far we have heard only of corporate plunder. What we need is a humbler genius who will stoop to small things, who will show us that in the ill-kept grocery store are the breeding places of those germs of the air that are more deadly than the beasts of the jungle.

"'Our own Page cannot do justice to an exposé of the uncleanly grocers—the 'germ trust' we might call them. There are few things, however, that every woman who reads these words can do to make conditions radically better.

"Don't buy out of the open box or the half-filled barrel.

"Refuse to accept without thorough investigation any goods of brands that are unknown to you.

"Always give the preference to goods that are in the original package—these, in almost every case, have been prepared and packed under thorough inspection.

"Where there are two grocers in your neighborhood or town, patronize the man that keeps the cleanest store and gives you the goods you know about and want.

"From time to time I shall have more to say about why these courses of action are the wise ones, why they must inevitably produce the same salutary effect on this vital every-day business, as we have seen result from the more spectacular crusades of men like President Roosevelt and Governors Hughes and Folk. For the time being I simply give you these maxims: Think about them; talk them over with your friends; see if they do not, after all, simply apply the standards of your own housekeeping common sense to the treatment of things you eat before they enter your own house.

"And remember on thing—an unimpeachable kitchen floor and a sweet-smelling ice chest do not prove you a good housekeeper, if your grocery store isn't what it should be."

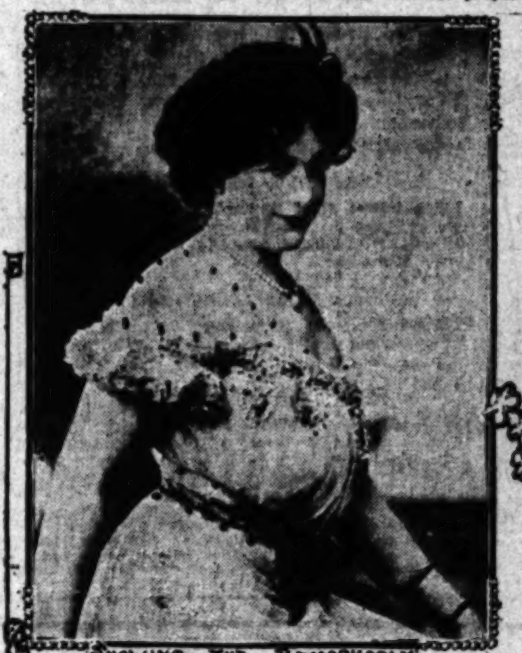
Magic Polishing Cloths.

So-called "magic" polishing cloths are being sold at 25 cents each. The recipe for making them is as follows: Take 1 gal. gasoline, 2 lbs. of whiting, and ½ oz. oleic acid. Mix all together and shake up well. Soak pieces of woolen cloths in this mixture, wring them out and hang up to dry. It will be found that this will place a fine gloss on any polished surface or silverware, etc., and no matter how soiled the cloths become, they will not dirty the hands or lose their polishing efficiency.—[Popular Mechanics.

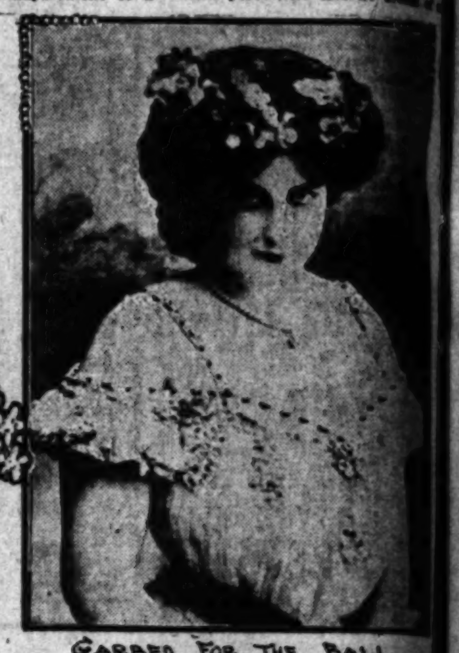
HE MAKES HIS LIVING BY DUPLICATING FEMALE BEAUT

A MAN who makes his living in skirts, but remains a fine manly fellow of marked athletic talents is now astonishing stageland in the principal cities of Europe.

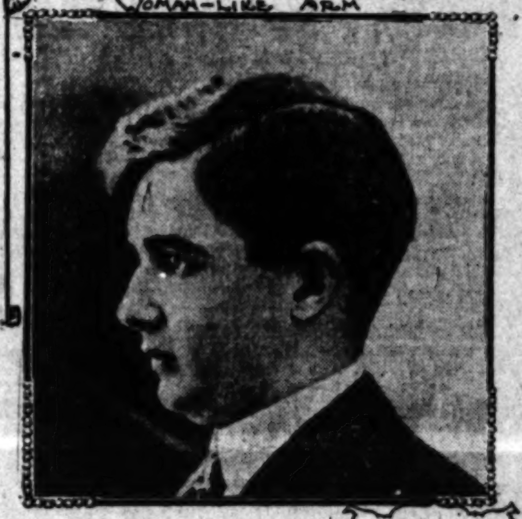
He can make up to look like any actress, not even the beauty of Maxine Elliott being too much for him to duplicate. He can dance better than most of the premier danuseses, and has a knowledge of dramatic art that aids materially in his impersonations. In many cities those who have seen his performances have found it difficult to believe that it was really a man, and not a woman who was pirouetting before the footlights.



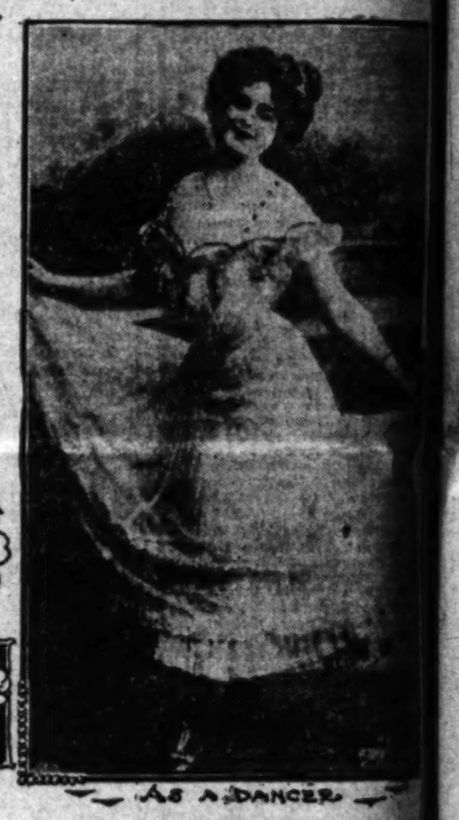
SHOWING THE REMARKABLY WOMAN-LIKE ARM



GARBED FOR THE BALL



JULIAN ELTINGE IN PRIVATE LIFE



AS A DANCER

The United States already knows this wonderful impersonator, whose skill is so great that he has raised imitation of woman almost to an art. He signs himself:

"Julian Dalton Eltinge, Harvard, 1902," and any one who doubts that when at Cambridge he was an athlete of some pretensions can get all the proof he wants by stirring up a little row with him.

Two or three stage hands, mistaking the feminine figure all made up for the performance as the kind of easy mark that could readily be guyed, had a rude awakening in the shape of beatings, the signs of which lingered long.

Mr. Eltinge is just a trifle sensitive and insists that because he makes his living by imitating the opposite sex, he none the less still retains all his own strength and manliness the instant he puts aside the skirts and wig.

Mr. Eltinge is the son of wealth, his father being a mine owner. When first he went on the stage in amateur performances he had no thought that eventually he was to earn some four hundred dollars a week by this kind of work.

As a member of the Hasty Pudding Club, which is Harvard's dramatic organization, he attained some slight fame as an impersonator of female characters, though the work he did then was purely in the nature of burlesque, and he had not yet attempted to make himself appear like a really beautiful woman.

Yearly the Boston Cadets give an amateur performance that is one of the social events of the season. Eltinge, just out of college, studying in an architect's office, was invited to assist.

Miss Lillian Russell, who was assisting in coaching the performance, suggested that with the right kind of make-up, Eltinge would make an ideal heroine for the drama, which was known as "Miss Simplicity."

Other members of the cast laughed at the idea, for Eltinge weighs one hundred and seventy-four pounds, and is of such athletic physique that it was hard to picture him looking the part of a sweet girlish young maiden, who must have a liberal allowance of pulchritude or make the play ridiculous.

Mr. Eltinge, after a little bantering, said he was willing to try, and went through the ordeal of forcing his No. 7 foot into a No. 4 lady's boot, and pulling his 30-inch waist into a 22-inch pair of corsets. Then he put on a fetching wig, practiced a most winsome smile, and donned hosiery so carefully faked that the swish of the French skirt disclosed a dainty ankle that none would ever have picked for that of a man.

A difficulty was encountered when it came to talking, for in place of the light, high voice that a woman has, Mr. Eltinge is a baritone. When he let out his notes they sounded so ridiculous coming from a daintily-skirted female that the show nearly broke up in laughter.

Then a happy thought suggested that instead of trying to speak in a soprano voice, he master contralto. This was readily accomplished, and now though his voice is heavy, it could readily be mistaken for the rich tones of some especially deep contralto.

At Harvard, Eltinge has learned to dance, so there was no trouble about that.

Eltinge was the hit of the show, and the work was so much talked about that soon theatrical managers were bidding for his services, and when the figure went to the $500 mark, it was more than he could stand, and the architect turned actor.

This launched Eltinge as a professional, and his progress has been rapid. He succeeded well in this country, but Europe thought his act even more remarkable, and in London, Paris and Berlin he has been able to command almost any price he wanted.

Particularly was the make-up in imitation of Maxine Elliott a success, for the beautiful wife of Nat Goodwin is known all over the Old World, not only from having appeared everywhere, but from the wide circulation given her photographs.

The resemblance he gets to the actress is wonderful, and his photograph in profile can hardly be told from that of Miss Elliott.

Eltinge resents being called a female impersonator. He says he is an actor, just as much so as a performer who imitates old men in his make-ups.

He is a careful student of woman's fashions, and by careful experimenting finds out just what he can do, and what is impossible.

One of his favorite guises is that of a ball gown. He has good shoulders, and with the proper adjustment of a long wig down his back, and a high pompadour over the forehead, he can look for all the world like a social queen about to display her beauty at some big function.

One of his dancing costumes is in imitation of a well-known painting, "The Shepherdess." This includes a gown liberally spangled with flowers, and it is said that while donning this rig the actor indulges in curses of a kind so loud and long as seldom to be heard coming from the inside of skirts.

It is not alone in make-up and voice that Eltinge can give the illusion of womanhood. He has turned his attention with microscopic care to every typically feminine action. He can sit down like a woman, get up from a chair like one, talk in the graceful manner of a lady of refinement, he understands the arts of flirtation, and can take the most bewitching poses.

It is not especially agreeable work. He says so himself, for in the midst of all his acting he is profoundly uncomfortable from the tight slippers and the imprisoned waist, not to mention the trouble of walking with the encumbrance of skirts and the strain of striving to avoid all angular or masculine movements.

According to Eltinge there is no form of dramatic work that makes such a demand on a performer, and only the liberality of the applause that nightly greets his act, and the generosity of the salary keeps him to the task.

By way of seeking relief, his first act when he comes off the stage is to light a thick, black cigar, and this he smokes even before he has taken off his feminine garb. It is a funny spectacle to see this stunning figure in Nile green decollete and rigged in a gown that would be good enough for a queen's reception, puffing away at a cigar, and cursing heartily over the discomfort of the stays.

Eltinge has been so successful in deceiving audiences that once in a while, usually on a wager, h attempts to deceive persons range. On one occasion he w stage manager and asked for in the chorus. He was perfect up as the typical first row had no difficulty in getting Not until he had made his and signed a contract did he his identity. The signed contr the proof on which he cashed hi

In the finer work of Eltinge's is not a suggestion of burlesq farce. It is his aim to look like a cultured and refined and it is only to emphasize dience the skill of his act that part of it he drops the disguise appears in his own manly

This performer has no dream of ciety, no thought of follow rser of Harry Lehr. He is and will stay one, he says.

FAIR MARGARET CASTELL

BY H. RIDER HAGGARD. FOR READERS of the SUNDAY TIMES.

"You sent for me, Marquis," said Margaret, presently, "and, being your prisoner, I have come because I must. What is your pleasure with me?"

"Dona Margaret," he answered, gravely, "can you not guess? Well, I will tell you, lest you should guess wrong. First, it is to ask your forgiveness, as I have done before, for the many crimes to which my love, my true love, for you has driven me. This time yesterday I knew well that I could expect none. Today I dare to hope that it may be otherwise."

"Why so, Marquis?"

"Last evening you looked into a certain garden and saw two people walking there—yonder is one of them," and he nodded toward Inez. "Shall I go on?"

"No," she answered, in a low voice, and passing her hands before her face. "Only tell me who and what is that woman?" and in her turn she looked toward Inez.

"Is it necessary?" he asked. "Well, if you wish to know, she is a Spaniard of good blood, who, with her sister, was taken captive by the Moors. A certain priest, who took an interest in the sister, brought her to my notice, and I bought her from them, so, as her parents were dead, and she had nowhere else to go, she elected to stay in my house. You must not judge these things too harshly; they are common here. Also, she has been very useful to me, being clever, for through her I have intelligence of many things. Of late, however, she has grown tired of this life, and wishes to earn her freedom, which I have promised her in return for certain services, and to leave Granada."

"Was the nursing of my betrothed one of those services, Marquis?"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"As you will, señora. Certainly I forgive her this indiscretion, if at least she has shown you the truth about that man, for whose sake you have endured so much. Margaret, now that you know him for what he is, say, do you still cling to him?"

She rose and walked a few steps down the arcade, then came back and asked:

"Are you any better than this fallen man?"

"I think so, Margaret, for since I knew you I am a risen man; all my old self is left behind me; I am a new creature, and my sins have been for you, not against you. Hear me, I beseech you. I stole you away, it is true, but I have done you no other harm, and will do you none. For your sake, also, I have spared your father when I had but to make a sign to remove him from my path. I suffered him to escape from the prison where he was confined, and I know the place where he thinks himself hidden today among the Jews of Granada. Also, I nursed Peter Brome back to life, when at any hour I could have let him die, lest afterward I might have it on my conscience that, but for my love for you, he might, perhaps, still be living. Well, you have seen him as he is, and what say you now? Will you still reject me? Look on me," and he drew up his tall and stately shape, "and tell me, am I such a man as a woman should be ashamed to own as husband? Remember, too, that I have much to give you in this land of Spain, whereof you shall become one of the greatest ladies, or, perhaps, in the future," he added, significantly, "even more. War draws near, Margaret; this city and all its rich territories will fall into the hands of Spain, and afterward I shall be their Governor, almost their King."

"And if I refuse?" asked Margaret.

"Then," he answered sternly, "you bide here, and that false lover of yours bides here, and your father bides here to take the chance of war as Christian captives with a thousand others who languish in the dungeons of the Alhambra, while, my mission ended, I go hence to play my part in battle against my peers, as one of the first captains of their Most Catholic Majesties. Yet it is not to your fears that I would appeal, but to your heart, for I seek your love and your dear companionship through life, and, if I can help it, desire to work you and yours no harm."

"You desire to work them no harm. Then, if I were to fall in with your humor, would you let them go in safety, my father and the Señor Brome and my cousin Betty, whom, if you were as honest as you pretend to be, you should ask to bide with you as your wife, and not myself."

"The last I cannot do," he answered, flushing. "God knows I meant her no hurt, and only used her to keep near to you and win news of you, thinking her, to tell the truth, somewhat other than she is."

"Are no women honest in Spain, then, my Lord Marquis?"

"A few, a very few, Doña Margaret. But I erred about Betty, whom I took for a simple serving girl, and to whom, if need be, I am ready to make all amends."

"Except that which is due to a woman you have asked to be your wife, and who in our country could claim the fulfillment of your promise, or declare you shamed. But you have not answered. Would they go free?"

"As free as air—especially the Señora Betty," he added with a little smile, "for to speak truth, there is something in that woman's eyes which frightens me at times. I think that she has a long memory. Within an hour of our marriage you shall look down from your window and see them depart under escort, every one, to go whither they will."

"Nay," answered Margaret, "it is not enough. I should need to see them go before, and then, if I consented, not till the sun had set would I pay the price of their ransom."

"Then do you consent?" he asked eagerly.

"My lord Marquis, it would seem that I must. My betrothed has played me false. For a month or more I have been a prisoner in your palace, which I understand has no good name, and, if I refuse, you tell me that all of us will be cast into yonder dungeons to be sold as slaves or die as prisoners of the Moors. My lord Marquis, fate and you leave me but little choice. On this day week I will marry you, but blame me not if you find me other than you think, as you have found my cousin whom you befooled. Till then, also, I pray you that you will leave me untroubled. If you have arrangements to make or commands to send, the woman Inez yonder will serve as messenger, for of her I know the worst."

"I will obey you in all things, Dona Margaret," he answered humbly. "Do you desire to see your father or——" and he paused.

"Neither of them," she answered. "I will write to them and send my letters by this Inez. Why should I see them," she added passionately, "who have done with the old days when I was free and happy, and am about to become the wife of the most noble Marquis of Morella, that honorable grandee of Spain, who tricked a poor girl by a false promise of marriage, and used her blind and loving folly to trap and steal me from my home? My lord, till this day week I bid you farewell," and, walking from the arcade to the fountain, she called aloud to Betty to accompany her to their rooms.

The week for which Margaret had bargained had gone by. All was prepared. Inez had shown to Morella the letters that his bride-to-be wrote to her father and to Peter Brome; also the answers, imploring and passionate, to the same. But there were other letters and other answers which she had not shown. It was afternoon. swift horses were ready in the courtyard, and with them an escort, while, disguised as Moors, Castell and Peter waited under guard in a chamber close at hand. Betty, dressed in the robes of a Moorish woman, stood before Morella, to whom Inez had led her.

"I come to tell you," she said, "that at sundown, three hours after we have passed beneath her window, my cousin and mistress will wait to be made your wife, but if you try to disturb her before than she will be no wife of yours, or any man's."

"I obey," answered Morella: "and Señora Betty, I pray your pardon, and that you will accept this gift from me in token of your forgiveness." And with a low bow he handed to her a beautiful necklace of pearls.

"I take them," said Betty, with a bitter laugh, "as they may serve to buy me a passage back to England. But forgive you I do not, Marquis of Morella, and I warn you that there is a score between us which I may live to settle. You seem to have won, but God in Heaven takes note of the wickedness of men, and in this way or in that He always pays His debts. Now I go to bid farewell to my cousin, Margaret, but to you I do not bid farewell, for I think that we shall meet again," and with a sob she let fall her veil, which she had lifted above her lips to speak, and departed with Inez, to whom she whispered as they went: "He will not linger for any more goodbys with Betty Dene."

They entered Margaret's room and locked the door behind them. She was seated on a low divan wrapped in a loose robe, and by her side, glistening with silver and gems, lay her bridal veil and garment.

"Be swift," said Inez to Betty, who stripped off her Moorish dress and the long, flowing veil that was wrapped about her head, whereon it was seen that her hair had changed greatly in color, from yellow to dark chestnut indeed, while her eyes, ringed round with pigments, and made lustrous by drugs dropped into them, looked no longer blue, but black like Margaret's. Yes, and wonder of wonders, on the right side of the chin and on the back of the left hand were moles, or beauty-spots, just as Margaret had borne there from her birth! In short, their stature, being much the same, though Betty was more thickly built, except in the strongest light it would not have been easy to distinguish them apart, even unveiled, for at all such arts of the altering of the looks of women, Inez was an adept, and she had done her best.

Now Margaret clothed herself in the white robes and the thick head-dress that hid her face, all except a little crack left for the eyes to peep through, whilst Betty, with the help of Inez, arrayed herself in the wondrous wedding robe beset with jewels that was Morella's bridal gift, and hid her dyed tresses beneath the pearl-sewn veil. Within ten minutes all was finished, even to the dagger that Betty had tied about her beneath her robe, and the two transformed women stood staring at each other.

"It is time to go," said Inez.

Then Margaret broke out:

"I do not like this business; I never did. When he discovers all, that man's rage will be terrible, and he will kill her. I repent that I have consented to the plot."

"It is too late to repent, now, Senora," said Inez.

"Cannot Betty be got away also?" asked Margaret desperately.

"It is just possible," answered Inez; "thus before the marriage, according to our old custom here, I hand the cups of wine to the bridegroom and the bride. That for the marquis will be drugged, since he must not see too clear tonight. Well, I might brew it stronger so that within half an hour he would not know whether he were married or single, and then, perhaps, she might escape with me and come to join you. But it is very risky, and, of course, if we were discovered—the stitch would be out of the wineskin, and the cellar floor might be stained!"

Now Betty interrupted:

"Keep your stiches whole, cousin; if any skins are to be pricked it can't be helped, and at least you won't have to wipe up the mess. I am not going to run away from the man, more likely he will run away from me. I look well in this fine dress of yours, and I mean to wear it out. Now begone—begone, before some of them come to seek me. Don't you grieve for me; I'll lie in the bed that I have made, and if the worst comes to the worst, I have money in my pocket—or its worth—and we will meet again in England. Come, give my love and duty to Master Peter and your father, and if I should see them no more, bid them think kindly of Betty Dene, who was such a plague to them."

Then, taking Margaret in her strong arms, she kissed her again and again, and fairly thrust her from the room.

But when they were gone, poor Betty sat down and cried a little, till she remembered that hot tears might melt the paint upon her face, and, drying them, went to the window and watched.

A while later, from her lofty window-place, she saw six Moorish horsemen riding along the white road to the embattled gate. After them came two men and a woman, all splendidly mounted, also dressed as Moors, and then six other horsemen. They passed the gate which was opened for them and began to mount the slope beyond. At the crest of it the woman halted and, turning, waved a handkerchief. Betty answered the signal, and in another minute they had vanished, and she was alone.

Never did she spend a more weary afternoon. Two hours later, still watching at her window, she saw the Moorish escort return, and knew that all was well, and that by now, Margaret, her lover, and her father were safely started on their journey. So she had not risked her life in vain.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE HOLY HERMANDAD.

Down the long passages, through the great, fretted halls, across the cool, marble courts, flitted Inez and Margaret. It was like a dream. They went through a room where women, idling or working at tapestries, looked at them curiously. Margaret heard one of them say to another:

"Why does the Dona Margaret's cousin leave her?" And the answer: "Because she is in love with the Marquis himself, and cannot bear to stay."

"What a fool!" said the first woman. "She is good-looking, and would only have to wait a few weeks."

They passed an open door, that of Morella's own chambers. Within it he stood and watched them go by. When they were opposite to him some doubt or idea seemed to strike his mind, for he looked at them keenly, stepped forward, then, thinking better of it, or perhaps remembering Betty's bitter tongue, halted and turned aside. That danger had gone by!

At length, none hindering them, they reached the yard where the escort and the horses waited. Here, standing under an archway were Castell and Peter. Castell greeted Margaret with a nod, but Peter, who had not seen her close since months before he rode away to Dedham, stared at her with all his eyes, and began to draw near to her, designing to find out, as he was sure he could do if he touched her, whether indeed this were Margaret, or only Betty, after all. Guessing what was in his mind, and that he might reveal everything, Inez, who held a long pin in her hand, with which she was fastening her veil that had come loose, pretended to knock again him, and ran the point deep into his arm, muttering, "Fool!" as she did so, whereupon he sprang back with an oath, the guard smiled, and she began to pray his pardon.

Castell helped Margaret on to her horse, then mounted his own, as did Peter, still rubbing his arm, but not daring to look toward Margaret, whose hand Inez shook familiarly in farewell as though she were her equal, addressing here the while in terms of endearment, such as Spanish women use to each other. An officer of Morella's household came and counted them, saying:

"Two men and a woman. That is right, though I cannot see the woman's face."

For a moment he seemed to be about to order her to unveil, but Inez called to him that it was not decent before all these Moors, whereon he nodded and ordered the captain to proseed.

They rode through the arch of the castle along the roadway, through the great gale of the wall also, where the guard questioned their escort, stared at them, and, after receiving a present from Castell, let them go, telling them they were lucky Christians to get alive out of Granada, which indeed they were.

At the brow of the rise Margaret turned and waved her handkerchief toward that high window which she knew so well. Another handkerchief was waved in answer, and, thinking of the lonely Betty watching them there while she awaited the issue of her desperate venture, Margaret went on, weeping beneath her veil. For an hour they rode forward, speaking no word to each other, till at length they came to the crossroads, one of which ran to Malaga, and the other toward Seville.

Here their escort halted, saying that their orders were to leave them at this point, and asking which road they intended to take. Castell answered that to Malaga, whereon the captain answered that they were wise, as they were less likely to meet bands of marauding thieves who called themselves Christian soldiers and cut the throats of or robbed all travelers who fell into their hands. Then Castell offered him a present, which he accepted gravely, as though he did him a great favor, and, after bows and salutations, they departed.

As soon as the Moors were gone the three rode a little way toward Malaga. Then, when there was nobody in sight, they turned across country and gained the Seville road. At last they were alone and, halting beneath the walls of a house that had been burned in some Christian raid, they spoke together for the first time, and oh! what a moment that was for all of them!

Peter pushed his horse alongside that of Margaret, crying:

"Speak, beloved. Is it truly you?"

But Margaret, taking no heed of him, leaned over and, throwing her arms around her father's neck, kissed him again and again through her veil, blessing God that they had lived to meet again in safety. Peter tried to kiss her also; but she caused her horse to move so that he nearly fell from his saddle.

"Have a care, Peter," she said to him, "or your love of kissing will lead you into more trouble." Whereon, guessing of what she spoke, he colored furiously and began to explain at great length.

"Cease," she said—"cease. I know all that story, for I saw you," then, relenting, with some brief, sweet words of greeting and gratitude, gave him her hand, which he kissed often enough.

"Come," said Castell, "we must push on, who have twenty miles to cover before we reach that inn where Israel has arranged that we should sleep tonight. We will talk as we go." And talk they did, as well as the roughness of the road and the speed at which they must travel would allow.

Riding as hard as they were able, at length they came to the venta, or rough hostelry, just as the darkness closed in. At the sight of it they thanked God aloud, for this place was across the Moorish border, and now they had little to fear from Granada. The host, a half-breed Spaniard and a Christian, expected them, hving received a message from Israel, with whom he had dealings, and gave them two rooms, rude enough, but sufficient, and good food and wine, also stabling and barley for their horses, bidding them sleep well and have no fear, as he and his people would watch and warn them of any danger.

Yet it was late before they slept, who had so much to say to each other—especially Peter and Margaret—and were so happy at their escape, if only for a little while. Yet across their joy, like the sound of a funeral bell at a merry feast, came the thought of Betty and that fateful marriage in which ere now she must have played her part. Indeed, at last Margaret knelt down and offered up prayers to heaven that the saints might protect her cousin in the great peril which she had incurred for them, nor was Peter ashamed to join her in that prayer. Then they embraced—especially Peter and Margaret—and laid them down, Castell and his daughter in one room, and Peter in the other, and slept as best they could.

Half an hour before dawn Peter was up seeing to the horses, while the others breakfasted and packed the food that the landlord had made ready for their journey. Then he also swallowed some meat and wine, and at the first break of day, having discharged their reckoning and taken a letter from their host to those of other inns upon the road, they pressed on toward Seville, very thankful to find that as yet there were no signs of their being pursued.

All that day, with short pauses to rest themselves and their horses, they rode on without accident, for the most part over a fertile plain watered by several rivers which they crossed at fords or bridges. As night fell they reached the old town of Oxuna, which for may hours they had seen set upon its hill before them, and, notwithstanding their Moorish dress, made their way almost unobserved in the darkness to that inn to which they had been recommended. Here, although he stared at their garments, on finding that they had plenty of money, the landlord received them well enough, and again they were fortunate in securing rooms to themselves. It had been their purpose to buy Spanish clothes in this town, but, as it happened, it was a feast day, and at night every shop in the place was closed, so they could get none. Now, as they greatly desired to reach Seville by the following nightfall, hoping under cover of the darknes to find and come aboard their ship, the Margaret, which they knew lay safely in the river, and had been advised by messenger of their intended journey, it was necessary for them to leave Oxuna before the dawn. So, unfortunately enough as it proved, it was impossible for them to put off their Moorish robes and clothe themselves as Christians.

They had hoped, too, that here at Oxuna Inez might overtake them, as she had promised to do if she could, and give them tidings of what had happened since they left Granada. But no Inez came. So, comforting themselves with the thought that however hard she rode it would be difficult for her to reach them, who had some hours start, they left Oxuna in the darkness, before anyone was astir.

Having crossed some miles of plain, they passed up through olive groves into hills where cork trees grew, and here stopped to eat and let the horses feed. Just as they were starting on again, Peter, looking around, saw mounted men, a dozen or more of them, of very wild aspect, cantering through the trees evidently with the object of cutting them off.

"Thieves," he said shortly. "Ride for it."

So they began to gallop, and their horses, although somewhat jaded, being very swift, passed in front of these men before they could regain the road. The band shouted to them to surrender, and, as they did not stop, loosed a few arrows and pursued them, while they galloped down the hillside on to a plain which separated them from more hills also clothed with cork-trees. This plain was about three miles wide and boggy in places. Still they kept well ahead of the brigands, as they took them to be, hoping they would give up the pursuit or lose sight of them amongst the trees. As they entered these, however, to their dismay they saw, drawn up in front of them and right across the road, another band of rough-looking men, perhaps twelve in all.

"Trap!" said Peter. "We must ride through them—it is our only chance," at the same time spurring his horse to the front and drawing his sword.

Choosing the spot where their line was weakest he dashed through it easily enough, but next second heard a cry from Margaret, and pulled his horse round to see that her mare had fallen, and that she and Castell were in the hands of the thieves. Indeed, already rough men had hold of her, and one of them was trying to tear the veil from her face. With a shout of rage Peter charged at them, and struck so fierce a blow that his sword cut through the fellow's helmet into his skull, so that he fell down, dying or dead, Margaret's veil still in his hand.

Then they rushed at him, five or six of them, and, although he wounded another man, dragged him from his horse, and, as he lay upon his back, sprang at him to finish him before he could rise. Already their knives and swords were over him, and he was making his farewells to life, when he heard a voice command them to desist and bind his arms. This was quickly done, and he was suffered to rise from the ground to see before him, not Morella, as he half expected, but a man clad in fine armour beneath his rough cloak, evidently an officer of rank.

"What kind of a Moor are you?" he asked, "who dare to kill the soldiers of the Holy Hermandad in the heart of the King's country?" and he pointed to the dead man.

"I am not a Moor," answered Peter in his rough Spanish. "I am a Christian escaped from Granada, and I cut down that man because he was trying to insult my betrothed, as you would have done, Señor. I did not know that he was a soldier of the Hermandad; I thought him a common thief of the hills."

This speech, or as much as he could understand of it, seemed to please the officer, but before he could answer Castel said:

"Sir officer, the señor is an Englishman, and does not speak your language well——"

"He uses his sword well, anyhow," interrupted the captain, glancing at the dead soldier's cloven helm and head."

"Yes, sir, he is of your trade and, as the scar upon his face shows, has fought in many wars. Sir, what he tells you is true. We are Christian captives escaped from Granada and flying to Seville with my daughter, to whom I pray you to do no harm, to ask for the protection of their gracious majesties, and to find a passage back to England."

"You do not look like an Englishman," answered the captain; "you look like a Marano."

"Sir, I cannot help my looks. I am a merchant of London, Castell by name. It is one well known in Seville and throughout this land, where I have large dealings, as, if I can but see him, your King himself will acknowledge. Be not deceived in our dress, which we had put on in order to escape from Granada, but, I beseech you, let us go on to Seville."

"Señor Castell," answered the officer, "I am the Capt. Arrano of Puebla, and, since you would not stop when we called to you, and have killed one of my best soldiers, to Seville you must certainly go, but with me, not by yourselves. You are my prisoners, but have no fear. No violence shall be done to you or the lady, who must take your trials for your deeds before the King's court, and there tell your story, true or false."

So, having been disarmed of their swords, they were allowed to remount their horses and taken on toward Seville as prisoners.

"At least," said Margaret to Peter, "we have nothing more to fear from highwaymen, and have escaped these soldiers' swords unhurt."

"Yes," answered Peter with a groan, "but I hoped that tonight we should have slept upon the Margaret while she slipped down the river toward the open sea, and not in a Spanish jail. Now, as fate will have it, for the second time, I have killed a man on your behalf, and all the business will begin again. Truly our luck is bad!"

"I think it might be worse, and I cannot blame you for that deed," answered Margaret, remembering the rough hands of the dead soldier, whom some of his comrades had stopped behind to bury.

During all the remainder of that long day they rode on through the burning heat, across the rich, cultivated plain, towards the great city of Seville, whereof the Giralda, which once had been the minaret of a Moorish mosque, towered hundreds of feet into the air before them. At length, towards evening, they entered the eastern suburbs of the vast city and, passing through them and a great gate beyond, began to thread its tortuous streets.

"Whither go we, Capt. Arrano?" asked Castell presently.

"To the person of the Holy Hermandad to await your trial for the slaying of one of its soldiers," answered the officer.

"I pray that we get there soon then," said Peter, looking at Margaret, who, overcome with fatigue, swayed upon her saddle like a flower in the wind.

"So do I," muttered Castell, glancing around at the dark faces of the people, who, having discovered that they had killed a Spanish soldier, and taking them to be Moors, were marching alongside of them in great numbers, staring sullenly, or cursing them for infidels. Indeed, once when they passed a square, a priest in the mob cried out: "Kill them!" whereon a number of rough fellows made a rush to pull them off their horses, and were with difficulty beaten back by the soldiers.

Foiled in this attempt, they began to pelt them with garbage, so that soon their white robes were stained and filthy. One fellow, too, threw a stone, which struck Margaret on the wrist, causing her to cry out and drop her rein. This was too much for Peter, who, spurring his horse alongside of him, before the soldiers could interfere, hit him such a buffet in the face that the man rolled on the ground. Now Castell thought that they would certainly be killed, but to his surprise the mob only laughed, and shouted such things as "Well hit, Moor;" "That infidel has a strong arm," and so forth.

Nor was the officer angry, for when the man rose, a knife in his hand, he drew his sword and struck him down with the flat of it, saying to Peter:

"Do not sully your hand with such street swine, señor."

Then he turned, and commanded his men to charge the crowd ahead of them.

So they got through these people and, after many twists and turns down side streets to avoid the main avenues, came to a great and gloomy building and into a courtyard through barred gates that were opened at their approach and shut after them. Here they were ordered to dismount and their horses led away, while the officer, Arrano, entered into conversation with the governor of the prison, a man with stern but not unkindly face, who surveyed them with much curiosity. Presently he approached and asked them if they could pay for good rooms, as if not he must put them in the common cells.

Castell answered: "Yes," and, by way of earnest of it, produced five pieces of gold, and giving them to the Capt. Arrano, begged him to distribute them among his soldiers as a thank-offering for their protection of them through the streets. Also, he said loudly enough for every one to hear, that he would be willing to compensate the relatives of the man whom Peter had killed by accident—an announcement that evidently impressed his comrades very favorably. Indeed one of them said he would bear this message to his widow, and, on behalf of the rest, thanked him for his gift. Then having bade farewell to the officer, who told them that they would meet again before the judges, they were led through various passages of the prison to two rooms, one small and one of a fair size with heavily barred windows, given water to wash in, and told that food would be brought to them.

In due course it came, carried by jailers, meat, eggs and wine, and glad enough were they to see it. While they ate also the Governor appeared with a notary, and, having waited till their meal was finished, began to question them.

"Our story is long," said Castell, "but with your leave I will tell it you, only, I pray you, suffer my daughter, the Doña Margaret, to go to rest, for she is quite outworn, and if you will you can question her tomorrow."

The Governor assenting, Margaret threw off her veil to embrace her father, thus showing her beauty for the first time, whereat the Governor and the notary stared amazed. Then having given Peter her hand to kiss, and curtseying to the Governor and the notary, she went to her bed in the next room, which opened out of that in which they were.

When she had gone, Castell told his story of how his daughter had been kidnaped by the Marquis of Morella, a name that caused the Governor to open his eyes very wide, and brought from London to Granada, whither they, her father and betrothed, had followed her, and escaped. But of Betty and all the business of the changed bride he said nothing. Also knowing that these must come out in any case, he told them his name and business, and those of his partners and correspondents in Seville, the firm of Bernaldez, which was one that the Governor knew well enough, and prayed that the head of that firm, the Señor Carlos Bernaldez, might be communicated with and allowed to visit them on the next morning. Lastly, he explained that they were no thieves or adventurers, but English subjects in misfortune, and again hinted that they were both able and willing to pay for any kindness or consideration shown to them, all of which sayings the Governor took note.

Also he said that he would communicate with his superiors, and, if no objection was made, send a messenger to ask the Señor Bernaldez to attend at the prison on the following day. Then at length he and the notary departed, and, the jailers having cleared away the food and locked the door, Castell and Peter lay down on the beds that they had made ready for them, thankful enough to find themselves at Seville, even though it were in a prison, where indeed they slept very well that night.

On the following morning they woke much refreshed, and after they had breakfasted, the Governor appeared, and with him none other than the Señor Carlos Bernaldez, Castell's secret correspondent and Spanish partner, whom he had last seen, some years before in England, a stout man with a quiet, clever face, not over given to words.

Greeting them with a deference that was not lost upon the Governor, he asked whether he had leave to speak with them alone. The Governor assented and went, saying he would return within an hour. As soon as the door was closed behind him, Bernaldez said:

"This is a strange place to meet you in, John Castell, yet I am not altogether surprised, since some of your messages reached me through our friends the Jews; also your ship, the Margaret, lies refitted in the river, and to avoid suspicion I have been lading her slowly with a cargo for England, though how you will come aboard that ship is more than I can say. But we have no time to waste. Tell me all your story, keeping nothing back."

So they told him everything as quickly as they could, while he listened silently. When they had done, he said, addressing Peter:

"It is a thousand pities, young sir, that you could not keep your hands off that soldier, for now the trouble that was nearly done with has begun anew, and in a worse shape. The Marquis de Morella is a very powerful man in this kingdom, as you may know from the fact that he was sent to London by their Majesties to negotiate a treaty with your English King Henry as to the Jews and their treatment, should any of them escape thither after they have been expelled from Spain. For nothing less is in the wind, and I would have you know that their Majesties hate the Jews, and especially the Maranos, whom already they burn by dozens here in Seville," and he glanced meaningly at Castell.

"I am very sorry," said Peter; "but the fellow handled her roughly, and I was maddened at the sight and could not help myself. This is the second time that I have come into trouble from the same cause. Also, I thought that he was but a bandit."

"Love is a bad diplomatist," replied Bernaldez, with a little smile, "and who can count last year's clouds? What is done, is done. Now I will try to arrange that the three of you shall be brought straight before their Majesties when they sit to hear cases on the day after tomorrow. With the Queen you will have a better chance than at the hands of any alcalde. She has a heart, if only one can get at it—that is, except where Jews and Moranos are concerned," and again he glanced at Castell. "Meanwhile, there is money in plenty, and in Spain we ride to heaven on gold angels," he added, alluding to that coin and the national corruption.

Before they could say more, the Governor returned, saying that the Señor Bernaldez's time was up, and asking if they had finished talking.

"Not altogether," said Margaret. "Noble Governor, is it permitted that the Señor Bernaldez should send me some Christian clothes to wear, for I would not appear before your judges in this heathen garb, nor, I think, would my father or the Señor Brome?"

The Governor laughed, and said he thought that might be arranged, and even allowed them five minutes, while they talked of what these clothes should be. Then he departed with Bernaldez, leaving them alone.

It was not until he had gone, however, that they remembered that they had forgotten to ask him whether he had heard anything of the woman Inez, who had been furnished with his address, but, as he had said nothing of her, they felt sure that she could not have arrived in Seville, and once more were much afraid as to what might have happened after they left Granada.

That night, to their grief and alarm, a new trouble fell on them. Just as they finished their supper the Governor appeared and said that, by order of the court before which they must be tried, the Señor Brome, who was accused of murder, must be separated from them. So, in spite of all they could say or do, Peter was led away to a separate cell, leaving Margaret weeping.

CHAPTER XIX.

BETTY PAYS HER DEBTS.

Betty Dene was not a woman afflicted with fears or apprehensions. Born of good parents, but in poverty, for six and twenty years she had fought her own way in a rough world and made the best of circumstances. Healthy, full-blooded, tough, affectionate, romantic, but honest in her way, she was well fitted to meet the ups and downs of life, to keep her head above the waters of a turbulent age, and to pay back as much as she received from man or woman.

Yet those long hours that she passed alone in the high turret chamber, waiting till they summoned her to play the part of a false bride, were the worst that she had ever spent. She knew what her position was, in a sense, shameful, and like to end in tragedy, and, now that she faced it in cold blood, began to wonder why she had chosen so to do. She had fallen in love with this Spaniard almost at first sight, though it is true that this had happened to her before with other men. Then he had played his part with her, till, quite deceived, she gave all her heart to him in good earnest, believing in her infatuation that, notwithstanding the difference of their place and rank, he desired to make her his wife for her own sake.

Afterwards came that bitter day of disillusion when she learned, as Inez had said to Castell, that she was but a stalking heifer used for the taking of the white swan her cousin and mistress, that day when she had been beguiled by the letter which was still hid in her garments, and for her pains heard herself called a fool to her face. In her heart she had sworn to be avenged upon Morella then, and now the hour had come in which to fulfill her oath and pay him back trick for cruel trick.

Did she still love the man? She could not say. He was pleasing to her as he had always been, and when that is so women forgive much. This was certain, however—love was not her guide tonight. Was it vengeance then that led her on? Perhaps; at least she longed to be able to say to him: "See, what craft lies hid even in the bosom of an outwitted fool."

Yet she would not have done it for vengeance sake alone, or rather she would have paid herself in some other fashion. No, her real reason was that she must discharge the debt due to Margaret and Peter, and to Castell, who had sheltered her for years. She it was who had brought them into all this woe, and it seemed but just that she should bring them out again, even at the cost of her own life and womanly dignity. Or, perchance, all three of these powers drove her on, love for the man if it still lingered—the desire to be avenged upon him, and the desire to snatch his prey from out his maw. At least she had set the game, and she would play it out to its end, however awful that might be.

The sun sank, the darkness closed about her, and she wondered whether ever again she would see the dawn. Her brave heart quailed a little, and she gripped the dagger hilt beneath her splendid, borrowed robe, thinking to herself that perhaps it might be wiser to drive it into her own breast, and not wait until a balked madman did that office for her. Yet not so, for it is always time to die when one must.

(To be continued next Sunday.)

THE EMPTY CHAIR.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

I was strolling along a side street in Paris, and stopped to look at some paintings in a dealer's window.

Some were landscapes, others portraits, all above mediocrity, some noticeably good. I lingered for some time, looking from one to another, and was about to turn away, when a hand within the shop moved the position or one or two of the canvasses and placed another, not before among them, where an excellent light fell upon it.

It was a woman's head, a woman still young, though not in her first youth, with a delicate, irregularly-featured face, surrounded by a mass of pale brown hair and with eyes that looked directly into mine. So intent and appealing was the look, and so strikingly beautiful the eyes, that I was arrested and fascinated. That it was portrait there could be no doubt; there were certain peculiarities of feature and expression that could not be imaginary. A slight smile, in no way akin to mirth, but rather expressing a faintly contemptuous sadness, played about the sweet, thin lips; the forehead was pale with a shadow about the temples, where the blue veins showed too plainly, indicating a stress of thought or care; the cheeks a trifle thin, with a touch of wild rose red—but the eyes—I am by nature neither fanciful nor sentimental, but I simply could not break the spell which they exerted upon me.

Who was she? Twice I touched the handle of the door and was about to ask the question, and then the very force of my curiosity held me back. It was not until I became aware that I was attracting the attention of the passers-by, that, after one more look, I walked rapidly away.

It was a day in late autumn; the great chestnut trees in the Tuilleries gardens were dropping their crisp, brown leaves upon the still air; frost-nipped flowers drooped beside the path. The sky was cloudless, but dim, with a faint veil of mist and the pale sunlight touched all things with the ineffable sadness of the fading year.

I strolled to and fro for an hour or more, feeling strangely in unison with the place, so full of melancholy memories. I recalled seeing in my early youth the stately palace, the historic pile, scene of the glory and disaster of the rulers of France, which had finally been itself swept away by the turbulent, passionate people of the gay and bloody city. And still, as I loitered here and there, I saw the pictured face that had so strangely affected me. Again and again I met the wonderful eyes with their intent and pleading gaze, and saw the faintly-mocking smile and the delicately tinted face framed in its pale brown hair.

I had run over from London for a few days' rest and change from a too engrossing profession. Like many another who had formed no early ties, and in whom the intellectual rather than the material predominates, I was drifting into a solitary life of routine, from which it was becoming an effort to break away. I had been recommended to an excellent pension in a quiet street off one of the main thoroughfares, and had secured quarters there that morning. The dinner hour was 7 o'clock, and upon entering the dining-room, I found the guests already seated at the long dining table. My seat had been reserved for me, and I found my neighbors to rightt and left, and indeed the guests generally, apparently people of refinement. They seemed to be for the most part French. A low murmur of conversation was going on. At the head of the table was seated the proprietress and hostess of the pension, a well-bred, agreeable woman. After a few moments I became aware that an expression of regret or distress was present in the faces and manner of the guests. I caught words indicating a shocked surprise or genuine sorrow, and glancing down the table I perceived a vacant chair, over the back of which a little scarf of black crepe had been tied.

The proprietress, noting doubtless my questioning look, turned politely to me.

"Monsieur will have remarked that our guests are depressed this evening," she said, "and I must explain why this depression has taken hold of our usually very agreeable reunions. Monsieur is a stranger, and therefore cannot know that we have lost one who was truly the center of our little society, a beautiful and brilliant creature, Mlle. La Valliere, a gifted artist, monsieur, who most assuredly would have attained a high rank among the best of our time. She lived in my house for several years, and I may truly say I loved her as a daughter. Unhappily, monsier, through the small malice or envy of those who try to stifle rising genius, the recognition she merited had been denied her again and again, and this, and, it may be, other griefs, preyed upon her. Under the veil of charming vivacity she hid the cruel disappointment that broke her heart. Ah! it could have been only a breaking heart that at last made life too heavy a burden to be borne!"

While madame was speaking a feeling of intense pity took possession of me. The sincerity of the grief expressed awoke an answering feeling in my own heart; in fact, I was moved to an extent that was incomprehensible to myself. Alas! it was too common a story, and one which, unless one personally knew the victim of such despair, was too apt to awake only a passing emotion.

But while madame was speaking those few words with such evident distress, I felt a sudden contraction of the heart, as though the person spoken of had been intimately known to myself. I had been looking fixedly at the speaker, but even as I faltered a word of sympathy, my eyes turned to the chair which I now knew must have been occupied by the unhappy young lady of whom I had heard.

I looked—and with a choking cry I started to my feet. The chair was no longer empty. A slender figure clad in white was seated in it; the fact was turned directly toward me, a face delicately fair and framed in pale-brown tresses, the smile that had haunted me all day upon the lips—the eyes with their passionate pleading, the eyes of the picture.

A thrill of gladness and terror swept over me. I was conscious of a confusion of voices and hands stretched toward me, and then I fainted.

Some Matters of Especial Interest to the Women.

Domestic Science.

For some forms of bladder and kidney trouble cherries are almost a cure, while their tonic properties are thoroughly well known. Introduced from Asia into Italy by Lucullus about 70 B. C.; into England by the Romans 120 years later, and early propagated in our own country by graftings or seedlings from the wild cherry, which abounds in the Middle States, and in Kentucky and Ohio, the cherry has made friends for itself all down the line. Of cherries it may be said they always look well; so much so that poets delight in calling upon them to symbolise various features of feminine loveliness; the artist dotes in reproducing them on canvas; the milliner in wreathing them about her latest "confections" in woman's headgear, and last of all bacteria—malevolent ones at that—have selected their polished skins as a most entrancing place of residence. Twelve millions of these pestiferous creations, according to a learned German chemist, inhabit the skins of a half-pound of cherries, and an account of the experiments in regard to their infection has been transmitted to our State Department. Dr. Ehrlich urges that cherries and all other fruits be peeled or washed before eating.

While robins and small boys seem to survive and grow fat in consuming enormous quantities of the luscious fruit, even without a bath, it is well to remember that cherries should be fully matured and sweet before they are eaten by any one whose stomach is at all weak. Their special type of acidity quickly disorders both stomach and bowels when underripe. If "cooked in a pie" or otherwise they may be eaten with impunity.

CHERRY SOUP.

This is a popular Swedish and German dish, most refreshing on a hot day. Crush a quart of cherries, add to them the juice of two lemons, two level tablespoonfuls tapioca or sago and sugar to taste. Simmer in a quart of water for half an hour, then rub through a puree sieve. Reheat, add a pinch of salt, then cool, and place on the ice before serving. Save a few fine cherries to put in the iced soup at the last. This quantity will make nearly two quarts of soup.

CHERRY PIE.

While your cherries make far and away the best pie, the sweet cherries are not to be despised. They are usually pitted, though many people like the flavor imparted by the stones. This is, therefore, a matter of opinion. A deep tin should be used for cherry pie, the deeper the better. Many housekeepers complain that their cherry pies run over in the oven, and much of the juice is lost. To prevent this waste of nectar, a strip of cotton cloth may be wet and pressed about the rim after the pie is all ready to go in the oven, or a paper funnel may be inserted in the opening in the center of the top crust, to allow for the escape of steam, thus relieving the crust from pressure. When the under crust is spread on the plate, sprinkle lightly with flour or brush over with white of egg. This last the Germans always do in making fruit pies. Pack full of the cherries sweetened to taste, dredge a little flour over the top, then put on the upper crust and seal.

CHERRY DUMPLINGS.

These made like apple dumplings and served with a sauce made of the juice of the fruit are delicious.

An old-time method is to make a thick batter using two cupfuls of flour, two eggs, two teaspoonfuls butter, one tablespoonful sugar, two teaspoonfuls baking powder sifted with the flour, one cupful water and one cupful stoned cherries. Drop the mixture by the tablespoonfuls into boiling salted water (and put a few at a time as the water must not stop boiling.) Cover closely and cook twelve minutes without uncovering. Take from the water and serve at once on hot plates. To make the sauce, cream together a cupful powdered sugar and a tablespoonful butter. Add gradually one beaten egg and a half cupful cherry juice, beating constantly.

CHERRY BUTTER PUDDING.

Beat to a cream a half cupful butter and three tablespoonfuls of sugar. Then add little by little, stirring constantly, four beaten eggs, a quart of flour that has been sifted with three teaspoonfuls baking powder and a half teaspoonful salt. Add a pint of milk, and lastly a quart of pitted cherries. Boil two hours in a buttered mould, not allowing the water to stop a moment from its boiling. Serve with hard sauce, or cherry sauce.

CHERRY ROLY POLY.

Sift together tow cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a half teaspoonful of salt. Work into the mixture a tablespoonful of butter, and when it feels "mealy," moisten with milk to a dough that can be formed. Turn onto a floured board and shape and pat with the hands into a long, narrow strip. Over this pour enough stoned cherries to cover the surface, leaving an inch uncovered at each edge. Sprinkle with sugar, press down into the dough and dredge with flour. Roll the paste into aw roll, and after pinching the edges together, wrap in a floured cloth. Steam for an hour and serve with cherry sauce.

CHERRY TAPIOCA.

This calls for a pound and a half of sour cherries, one cup of pearl tapioca, and sugar to sweeten. Wash the tapioca in several waters, cover with cold water and soak over night, put on the fire with one pint boiling water and simmer slowly until the tapioca is perfectly clear. Stone the cherries, stir into the boiling tapioca and sweeten to taste. Take from the fire, turn into the dish in which it is to be served, and set to cool. Serve cold with cream. This will make enough for eight persons.

CHERRY VINEGAR.

When cherries are ripe don't forget to put up some cherry vinegar. Mash slightly two quarts of cherries and pour over them one quart of vinegar. Put in an earthen bowl, cover, and set in a cool place for two days. Strain through a muslin bag, and to each pint of liquid add three-fourths of a pound of sugar. Place over the fire and boil fifteen minutes, then bottle and seal.

CHERRY JAM.

Stone the cherries and allow, after weighing, an equal quantity of sugar. Place in a porcelain-lined preserving kettle and let stand in a cold place over night. In the morning cook until the jam jellies on the spoon, then turn into pots.

CHERRY CATSUP.

To each pound stoned cherries allow a pound of sugar. Boil together until the cherries are soft; then strain. To each quart of this liquor allow a teaspoonful each of mace, pepper, ginger, cinnamon and a half teaspoonful of cloves. Boil with the syrup and strain; then add to the crushed fruit that has been pressed through a puree sieve. Boil until thick; reduce with strong vinegar, and bottle.

GREEN CURRANT JAM.

Currants are late this year, as well as cherries, but green currants will soon be in condition for jam and pies. To make jam, pick the currants from the stem, put in a preserving kettle and set in a larger kettle of boiling water, or over a gentle fire, to dry out superfluous juice. Add three-quarters of a pound of sugar for each pound of fruit; boil quickly for thirty minutes, or less if it shows signs of jelling. Stir and skim often. Turn into jars and cover when cold.

GREEN CURRANT PIE.

Stew and mash a pint of rather green currants; sweeten abundantly; add a sprinkling of flour or a rolled cracker and bake with two crusts. Dust generously with powdered sugar.

CONFECTION OF CURRANTS.

A well-known southern authority on the cookery of fruits commends this as a delightful confection with desserts. Pick the currants just before they are ripe. Steam them and stew without crushing in a little sugar. Spread on plates, dredged thickly with sugar and dry in the sun. Currants prepared in this way may also be soaked over night then stewed for sauce.

STRAWBERRY ECLAIRS.

Cream puffs and eclairs filled with the fresh strawberries crushed and sweetened instead of the usual cream filling are among the delights of the season. To make the eclairs, put into a granite-ware saucepan one cup milk, two rounded tablespoonfuls butter and a tablespoonful sugar. Set over the fire. When this mixture boils up, stir in a cup sifted flour (heaped) and cook [illegible] two minutes, beating all the time with a wooden spoon. By this time it should be smooth and velvety. Take off the stove and cool. When cool, beat in f[illegible] eggs, one at a time. Beat vigorously for at least twenty minutes. Test by putting a bit of the paste in the ovn. If it puffs up in the form of a hollow ball, it is beaten enough. If not, beat a little longer. Have ready a tapering tin tube with the lesser opening about three-quarters of an inch in diameter. Insert this in a small end of a cotton pastry bag and put the paste in the bag. Now press out on buttered tins, having each eclair about three inches in length. Keep them well apart. Bake about twenty-five minutes in a moderate oven. Take out and while still warm, coat with a strawberry icing made by adding to a cupful confectioner's sugar enough strawberry juice to make a fine icing. A few drops of lemon juice may also be added. When cold cut open on the side and fill with the berries crushed and sweetened.

STRAWBERRY JAM.

Mash ripe strawberries and cook in their own juice until reduced very considerably. Then add sugar, heated in the oven, allowing three-quarters of a pound to each pound of the fruit, and cook steadily until of the required consistency. If too sweet, add a little pie plant, lemon juice or gooseberries. Pack in jars and seal.

THE VIRTUE OF CHARITY.

BY W. D. COWLEY.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

Charity is one of those amiable qualities of the human breast that imparts pleasure to its possessor, and to those who receive it. It is of a modest and retiring nature. Charity, like the dew from heaven, falls gently on the drooping flower in the stillness of night. It flows from a good heart, and looks beyond the skies for approval and reward. It never opens, but seeks to heal the wounds inflicted by misfortune; it never harrows up, but strives to calm the troubled mind. Were this heaven-born, soul-cheering principle the mainspring of human action, the all-pervading motive power that impelled mankind in their onward course to eternity, the polar star to guide them through this world of sin and woe, the ills that flesh is heir to would be softened in its melting sunbeams; a new and blissful era would dawn auspiciously upon our race, and Satan would become a bankrupt for want of business. Wars would cease; jealousy and revenge would hide their diminished heads; falsehood and slander would be unknown; sectarian walls in matters of religion would crumble in dust; the household of faith would become, what it should be, one united, harmonious family. Pure and undefiled religion would then be honored; primitive Christianity would stand by faith, divested of the inventions of man, in all the majesty of its native loveliness. Could an angel bear a balm of such charity into our hearts, then would earth become a heaven and hell a fable.

Is any man fallen into disgrace? Charity holds down its head, is abashed and out of countenance, partaking of his shame. Is any man disappointed of his hopes or endeavors? Charity cries out alas, as if it were itself defeated. Is any man afflicted with pain or sickness? Charity looks sadly; it sighs and groans, it faints and languishes with him. Is any man pinched with hard want? Charity, if it cannot succor, will condole. Does ill news arrive? Charity hears it with an unwilling ear and a sad heart, although not particularly concerned in it.

It is the foundation and cap-stone of the climax of all the Christian graces; without it our religion is like a body without a soul; our friendships shadows of a shadow; our alms, the offerings of pride, or, what is more detestable, the offerings of hypocrisy.

We can conceive of nothing more attractive than the heart when filled with the spirit of sweet charity.

Certainly nothing so embellishes human nature as this virtue. The principle underlies the whole theory of Christianity, and in no other person do we find it more happily exemplified than in the life of our Saviour, who, while on earth, went about doing good.

The Rose the Fad of Fashion.

The War of the Roses has broken out again. Lovely woman has assumed the rose as the sword and buckler for her summer conquest.

The girl who aims always for the original touch in her hats and gowns will like one of the new ways of arranging wild roses on a quaint little poke hat. The imported hat, which showed this new trimming idea, was a rough corn-colored straw. Its scarcity of trimming was one of its features. The shape was a very fetching poke. Soft pink ribbons were looped about it, back and front, with the loops intertwined. Where the hat drooped over the ear at the left side, the loops of ribbon held a bunch of exquisite pink roses and soft green foliage. The flowers had the effect of just falling off the hat and being caught in place by the ribbon loops. Certainly this little imported model introduced a very new and very charming effect.—[Grace Margaret Gould, in June Woman's Home Companion.

WOMAN AND THE HOME.

BY CATHERINE ALLMAN.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

"Honesty may be the best policy, all right, but there are a lot of women that don't seem to know that adage and appear to prosper in their ignorance," remarked a detective recently. "The 'lost and found' column could tell many a story if one could read between the lines, but here is one incident that sufficiently illustrates how warped some women's notions of personal honesty are.

"Some time ago a woman, a society woman, by the way, lost a valuable amethyst brooch on one of her shopping tours, and, of course, inserted an ad for its recovery.

"Generally it's a waste of time, printer's ink, and space to advertise for lost jewelry or money, but this pin was a beauty, and she offered $25 reward for its return. She also placed the matter in the hands of a detective agency, and I was detailed to wear my brains into a frazzle hunting for a needle in a haystack.

"I went up to her house to consult with her and advise her that a detective's services were practically useless on such a case, when she told me with less joy than one would have expected to see that she had recovered the pin the evening before. She said a young woman had found it and restored it and that the matter was a closed incident. Something in her constrained manner made me ask to see the pin. She hesitated a minute, just long enough for me to see a fleeting look of terror in her eyes, and finally said she would be glad to show it to me, but that she thought it had been placed in her deposit vaults. She went to look, though, and to my surprise, returned with it in her hand. I looked at the brooch a minute and handed it back without a word, the lady gazing out of the window all the while.

"Of course, there was nothing to be said, or done; I was a private detective and it wasn't my business to figure out why my fair employer had played a dishonest trick in claiming a pin which in a moment's close examination I had seen did not tally with the minute description which she had given me. In our business we are used to such human failings, so I pocketed my fat fee and ran along about my own affairs.

"I could, of course, see the woman's point of view in a way. She had lost a valuable pin, and some 'poor but honest' girl had turned up with one, which though inferior in size and value, was almost the exact replica of her lost treasure. She figured out to herself that the $25 reward would repay the girl all right, and that the pin in question would help some, even if she didn't get back her own ornament. I can almost hear her make this mental reservation. If any one advertised for an article answering to the one in her possession she would cheerfully render up the same. Crooked logic, no doubt, but such a mind runs in crooked channels, and any way the pin she had paid the reward for didn't begin to represent the value of the one she had lost, so there was a sop to her conscientious scruples.

"There's a sequel, of course, and maybe you've guessed it, but I never would have done so. It runs this way. It seems that the girl who had returned the wrong pin and received the reward, had really found the original lost brooch. Woman-like, she was fascinated by its unusual beauty and value, she hesitated—and then played the game this way. She had in her possession a brooch given her by one of her admirers when the rage for the amethyst pins set round with pearls first set in. Her pin didn't begin to compare in value with the one found, and there was a trifle difference in size, but otherwise they were exact replicas. She saw the possibilities of the remarkable resemblance, and, putting the matter of personal honesty up to the other woman, took her chance like any other gambler and got away with it; and, by the way, she wasn't a poor girl, who 'needed the money,' either. The two women move on about the same social plane, and I shouldn't wonder if they didn't meet out at dinners now and then, wearing each other's brooches, but it's a safe bet that the first woman will never squeal."

An esthetic temperament is an awful thing when is creeps beyond a certain stage. I sometimes fear that it's going to break up the happy home of a young bride of my acquaintance, but there doesn't seem to be any cure for it, and I am filled with weepy forebodings.

Her tiny flat is really a dream of delight, with all the artistic shades and tints and blendings and atmosphere of culture (Boston pronunciation) that one could well wish for. Her kitchen, though, is her hobby, strange freak of nature as that may seem, for she says she yearns to snatch "her chemical laboratory of domestic science" (that's what her better half calls it) from the mere utilitarian purposes for which it is designed. All the woodwork is stained a Flemish oak, the glass doors to the cupboard and the kitchen window are daintily hung with sheer Swiss curtains, the floor is covered with an inlaid design of linoleum, which her husband says costs $3 a square inch. Of course, all the kitchen implements fall in with the color scheme and are of a fetching shade of Dutch blue. She makes grievous moan because flats don't have Dutch fireplaces in the kitchens, but time has softened that grief somewhat, and she consoles herself with a palm. Yes, I have said it—a palm. Her husband said he didn't mind her little kitchen garden box of bright parsley; he even willingly laid himself a martyr on the altar of estheticism and went broke on some copper kettles and an antique Dutch blue breakfast set, but the patient man has set a limit. He says the first time he sets foot in his once happy home and beholds a teakettle or dishpan or gas range with an artistic bow of pink ribbon on it he is going a-w-a-y.

It may be of fleeting consolation to the woman who loves to adorn her fair self to learn that some of the world's greatest men have been exceedingly vain of their personal attire, their peculiarities in dress even amounting to foppery in some instances. How many of his contemporaries have smiled at Chatham scrupulously crowned in his best wig if intending to address Parliament; at Horace Walpole, in his proud cravat of Gibbons carvings; at Sir Walter Raleigh, who loaded his shoes so heavily with jewels that he could scarcely walk; at Petrarch, who pinched his feet until he crippled them; at the rings which covered the philosophic fingers of Aristotle; at the bare throat of Lord Byron; the scarlet and gold coat worn with childish ostentation by Voltaire, and even at Caesar, who exercised such prudent care when he scratched his head so as not to disturb the locks arranged with anxious thought over the imperial bald spot. Even the great Napoleon is said to have been inordinately proud of his hands, which historians tell us were beautifully formed.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

How to Sew Hooks and Eyes on Sheer Material—Darning Bedspreads. Dainty Tea Apron.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

Nothing bothers the maker of fine, dainty waists more than sewing on the hooks and eyes. It seems almost impossible to prevent the stitches from showing or to keep the hem from gaping open.

To prevent this take a strip of narrow cotton tape and stitch through the center, to the waist on each edge of the waist where it closes, making this stitching also form the stitching of the hem. Sew the top and the bottom of the hooks and the proper end of the eyes to the free edges of the tape. This holds the fastenings secure, prevents any pull on the material, looks neat and prevents the hem from gaping open. Buttons can also be sewed on a tape in the same way and it will be found that they will not tear away from the goods if put on in this way.

USE THE SEWING MACHINE.

It is a difficult task to darn a bedspread or a table cloth by hand so that the repairing will be strong and at the same time neat. A better plan is to use the sewing machine. To repair a break in a bed-spread take a piece of strong muslin and cut about a half-inch larger than the hole to be repaired. Turn half an inch under all around and stitch down on the machine. Lengthen the stitch on your machine. Stitch vertically over the hole, making the rows of stitching as close together as possible until the hole is filled. In doing this do not lift the needle but raise the foot and shift your article in making turn for rows of stitching. When filled vertically, cross the vertical stitching horizontally the same as in darning, remembering not to raise the needle but shifting material in making turns. The finest table cloth can be repaired beautifully in the same way, the only difference being that linen instead of muslin is used under the hole and the edges, instead of being turned under, are frayed away as close as possible to the stitching.

APRON FROM OLD SLEEVES.

You can make the daintiest possible tea apron from the sleeves of your fine shirt waists. Perhaps you have some waists which are perfectly good, but the sleeves of which are out of fashion. Take these sleeves, open them at the seam, turn them upside down, join by a band of insertion through the middle, gather the upper part on to a band, round the bottom and trim with a ruffle of lace or lawn up the sides and around the bottom. There you have a dainty and useful little serving or fancy-work apron and you can purchase new material for your sleeves with a clear conscience. T. W. F.

FOR THE SICK ROOM.

Suggestions for the Comfort of Patients in Bed or Convalescing.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

There is no problem more difficult of solution than how to make a long stay in bed or a convalescing period comfortable for the patient. Aches and a tired feeling increase the suffering of the sick one who is obliged to lie in one position for any length of time and the same bugbears torment the patient who is able to sit up for awhile.

Pillows, pillows, pillows, a score or more of them, is the solution. Not full sized heavy feather pillows but small light wool, down, hair or even balm cushions are the comforts which ease the patient's tired muscles.

They should be in sizes ranging from 10 to 18 inches in length and from 8 to 12 inches wide, or they can be made square. The larger ones are splendid if made of hair and tufted like a mattress.

These little comfort cushions can be slipped under the neck, at the small of the back, under the knees or heels and placed where a tired arm can rest comfortably upon them. This for the patient in bed.

When sitting up they can be tucked in all the hollows and are especially useful in preventing that awful ache where the bend of the knees rests against the chair.

They also fit nicely in the hollows of the regular bed pillows when the patient sits up in bed and they are convenient for the nurse to rest her elbow or neck upon if she has to support the patient for any length of time. A good round dozen of these cushions will not be too many and they will be found an invaluable aid to both nurse and patient.

QUICK MENDING.

A hot water bag will oftimes suddenly spring a leak when most needed; the same with the pipe of a syringe. A piece of adhesive plaster placed over the break will stop the leak immediately and will stay in place for quite a while. It can easily be renewed and proves a most satisfactory first aid to an injured rubber article.

HOW TO VISIT A PATIENT.

Open the sick room door quietly and enter at once. Seat yourself in front of the patient where her eyes can rest easily upon you. This is an important thing to remember, as many a patient has been made tired and nervous by being obliged to strain her eyes to look at a visitor.

Select a chair that does not rock, and sit quietly. Never comment upon the patient's appearance, unless it is to say a cheerful word. Never bring any little dainty direct to the sick room. Let the nurse attend to that. A patient may be too ill to eat what you bring, or she may be forbidden that especial thing, or, again, it may be something that she does not like. Leave your dainty downstairs and save possible embarrassment. Flowers should be put in a vase before taken up, and they should be put where the patient can see them, not given to her to hold.

When leaving, get up quietly, say your good-by at once, and leave. It makes a sick person nervous to have any one about who hesitates over anything; it seems to call for an effort on her part. Never talk outside the door of a sick room, neither is it well to detain whoever is in charge in long conversation downstairs.

FOR THE NURSE.

Have the sick room well aired. Never allow spoons or plates that have been used, or any half-eaten dainty to remain in the sick room. Always pour the medicine from the side of the bottle away from the label; then, if a drop is spilled, it can easily be removed with a damp cloth. A sticky label is an abomination to physician and patient. Be sure that there are no draperies or pictures which annoy the patient. It is not well to have solid colors or brilliant hues on mantle shelf or dressing table. When a patient is nervous and cannot sleep, repose will be attained sometimes by changing the position of the bed. Anticipate the patient's wishes, and attend immediately to all requests.

LUNCH SALAD.

There are numberless ways to use up left overs in hot dishes but no way of re-serving remnants is more appetizing than in a tasty salad. Chop enough of any kind of cold meat or fowl to measure one cup and mix it with one cup of cold boiled potatoes cut into cubes. Season with salt and pepper, one-half teaspoon of onion juice, one tablespoon of minced parsley. Make a mound on a large round plate or shallow dish and cover it with a cooked cream dressing. Arrange hard boiled egg slices, small pickles cut in slices, olives and nutmeats as illustrated and a handsome salad will result.

For the dressing cook together one and one-half level tablespoons of mustard and two tablespoons of vinegar. Stir in the yolks of four eggs and one-half cup of scalded cream. Add one-quarter cup of butter and season with a level teaspoon of salt, two level teaspoons of sugar, three drops of onion juice and a saltspoon of cayenne. Strain and cool and it is ready to use. This dressing should be rather thin when it is hot and if it seems too thick add a little more cream while cooking. It will thicken as it cools. Cook the eggs at least twenty minutes and drop into cold water before shelling.

RED MARBLE CAKE.

Marble cake is an old favorite and adds variety to the contents of the cake plate; it also sells well at fairs. Bake the cake in a square or round pan, ice it, then cut in slices which display its spots to better advantage than cubes or triangles. The colored part may be red, or brown with chocolate or a mingling of both with the white.

To make a red and white cake beat the yolks of three eggs and add to one-half cup of buttered cream with one and one-half cups of sugar, add one-half cup of milk alternately with two cups of flour sifted with three level teaspoons of baking powder, and last fold in the stiffly beaten white of three eggs.

For the red part beat the yolk of one egg, add to one-quarter cup of butter and one-half cup of red sugar creamed together then two tablespoons of milk, one cup of flour sifted with two level teaspoons of baking powder and one-quarter teaspoon of rose flavoring. Drop spoonfuls alternately of the red and white batter into the buttered pan until it is two-thirds full. Butter the pan well and then dredge with flour and shake out all that will not adhere to the butter. This will make it impossible for the cake to stick unless it is burned. Bake in a moderate oven.

TRIFLES THAT MAKE ONE CHIC.

A FRENCHWOMAN'S ART OF BEING PRETTY.

She is Careless About Nothing and Consults Her Mirrors Much—Without Rouge, She Reddens Her Cheeks—Every Detail of Her Gown a Matter for Study.

[New York Sun:] A pretty woman in Paris has been telling an American woman how to be chic. The American woman comes from the West and has more money than style and the French woman is famed for her beauty.

"Tell me why you are so beautiful," said the western woman.

"It isn't that I am so pretty, but because I am so chic," admitted the French woman frankly. "I don't know how to express it in English. But in French we regard the quality as something absolutely essential to success. Unless you are chic you can do nothing.

"The chic French woman knows how to pour a cup of tea prettily, but the woman who is not chic fails to produce effect. A servant girl might as well pour and pass the tea cups as far as beauty is concerned.

"I never wear a trotting dress, for I consider it death to all style. The woman who wears a skirt so short as to show her feet and even her boot tops makes a fatal mistake. She spoils her chances. She cannot even be graceful, let alone chic.

"I am careful to wear skirts ankle length for walking. This means just one inch from the ground. But I never wear shorter ones. And I am particular also never to wear a mannish coat. I like to look womanish, not mannish.

"I am chic when I am at home because of my hands. Very few women know how to have chic hands.

"Mine are positively attractive. I say it without undue pride and without any puffing of spirit. My hands are chic and I know how to keep them so.

"In London I have noticed many ladies with big, mannish hands. They were well kept, but they were not bewitching. They were too capable looking, too old, too experienced.

"My hands are chic with a babyish chicness that makes a man want to catch hold of them and kiss them. That is one of the secrets of a chic pair of hands, namely, that they look babyish.

"To keep my hands chic I wear gloves from morning until night and always from night until morning. After I have had my chocolate in the morning I slip on a pair of thin tan colored or white gloves and I wear them for reading, for sewing and for any of the ordinary little household tasks. In summer time I don white silk gloves which keep the hands white and moist.

"My hands are tinted in the palms with just the tiniest bit of rouge. I know it isn't good form, but it is so very attractive and I use so little that no one knows that I have any on at all.

"I slap my palms together and rub them until they glow like roses. This makes my hands look young. The nails are polished until they shine like pink coral.

"I think one reason why I am chic is that I consult my mirror so often. In my dressing-room there are several mirrors.

"There is an oval mirror of the Louis XIV period and I have some odd mirrors with many candlesticks of the Empire days. When dressing in costume I consult these mirrors, according to my style of dress, and it seems somehow as though I were assisted by the image I behold. I can really get hints from myself in the mirror.

"I don't believe in lacing, but who ever saw a French woman with a flat waist? I make my waist round and sometimes it is really necessary to compress the ribs a little. But it can be done so as not to injure the digestion.

"I have a marvelous corset, which laces in front, by which I manage to correct faults of figure; and I have one of the ordinary kind that laces in the back for certain back effects. You can do marvels if you have plenty of nice corsets.

"Perhaps I am to wear a princess dress. The color is gray and each tiny defect of figure will show. Therefore, I wear a tight-fitting corset, snug on the hips, high in the bust, long in front and laced in back.

"Then in order that I may be chic, my maid arranges a marvelous corsage of red flowers upon my bust and she tucks their duplicates in the side of my hat. She is quite careful that my cheeks are colored—by the new reddening process which takes not one drop of rouge—and she suggests [illegible] dress my spaniel in scarlet.

"The new way of coloring the [illegible] is interesting to the woman who [illegible] color but who does not approve of [illegible]ing to a box to get it. I have the [illegible]dest cheeks in Paris, but there is [illegible] a suggestion of artificiality in [illegible] redness. It is all a matter of [illegible]ment.

"Felice, my maid, took lessons of a flesh specialist until she became [illegible]fect at tinting the skin. This special[illegible] taught her that the skin is [illegible] that the rougher it is treated the [illegible] it becomes.

"If I dared to do so I would [illegible] Felice scrape my cheeks every [illegible] with a razor. I know that my [illegible] would soon be fine and smooth [illegible] this treatment. But, not daring [illegible] this, I let her do the next best [illegible]

"I give her a very coarse towel [illegible] I let her go over my face with it, rubbing it briskly until the blood comes [illegible] the surface. Then with a very [illegible] massage of skin food I have a [illegible] of glowing cheeks.

"I don't believe in being chic at the expense of refinement. It is the [illegible] in Paris now to put a tiny bit [illegible] rouge in your nostrils to make [illegible] pink, and to touch the lobes of [illegible] ears with rouge. But this I do not [illegible] I think it bad taste.

"Neither do I wear the [illegible] petticoats which are so much [illegible] style.

"I have a friend who wears [illegible] coat of brilliant red satin [illegible] with a frou frou of crimson ruffles and chiffon. There are [illegible] lace and there are masses of [illegible]broidery. This petticoat is worn [illegible] a red umbrella and a red hat [illegible] I think it poor taste, but at the [illegible] time it is very chic.

"I am chic, too, because I can [illegible] arms. This is queer, is it not? [illegible] if you watch a Frenchwoman you [illegible] understand wherein lies the [illegible] of this particular feature.

"An American woman can sel[illegible]dom raise her arms, an English[illegible] never—when she is gowned [illegible] Frenchwoman always can.

"Watch a well dressed French[illegible] and you will see what I mean. [illegible]rately gowned as she is, she can [illegible] her arms right from the [illegible] Langtry, who has long studied [illegible] art in dress, is able not only [illegible] her arms from the shoulders [illegible] swing them so that her finger[illegible] will touch the floor.

"The Frenchwoman wears her [illegible] so long and so low that there is [illegible] any trouble about moving the [illegible] of the shoulders. It is a great [illegible] to be able to move the shoulders [illegible]

"Of course, the dressing of the [illegible] around the face is very important from the standpoint of chicness. I [illegible] my hair and pull it down in [illegible] here, there and everywhere, [illegible] care, however, to preserve the [illegible] my face.

"I wash my hair and I wave [illegible] I take care to keep my temples [illegible] draped with curls. It makes a [illegible] difference in a woman's looks.

"My boots are always very [illegible] I never wear a dull boot, and [illegible] look little, simply because I [illegible] to keep the vamps low. I never [illegible] myself to wear a long vamped [illegible] is fatal to the good looks of the [illegible]

"Once upon a time there [illegible] a famous artist: 'I am painting [illegible]ture of the Queen of Holland, [illegible] 'and I am desirous of study[illegible] Frenchwoman at short range [illegible] that I may impart such touches [illegible] are needed to my work. I wish [illegible] the picture that slightly [illegible] which one finds in the Gains[illegible] pictures and in the Romneys [illegible] in the Rembrandts.'

"'Learn,' said I, 'how to [illegible] the details of dress. That [illegible] the Frenchwoman excels. She [illegible] her gown quickly enough, but [illegible] her hours to adjust the small[illegible]ings, and finishings of the [illegible]'

"The artist listened while [illegible]plained various matters to [illegible] way of looking chic, and [illegible] I am told that Wilhelmina [illegible] portrait more than all the [illegible] had ever been painted of her.

"The Frenchwoman has a great [illegible]ness for concealing the man[illegible] method of putting on her gown [illegible] English woman likes to button [illegible] frankly down the front; the [illegible]can woman likes the gown [illegible] fastenings in the back; the [illegible] woman hides her fastenings [illegible] numerous bows and furbelows. [illegible] Frenchwoman has a way of [illegible] her gown so that you cannot [illegible] she got into it. It is her chic [illegible]

"Then the Frenchwoman has [illegible] ways that are most attractive [illegible] walks daintily; she holds her [illegible] jauntily; she manages her [illegible] gracefully, and she wears her [illegible] the correct angle. The French[illegible] is a mass of billowy skirts around [illegible] feet and she is redolent of [illegible]fume; she doesn't believe in [illegible]less.

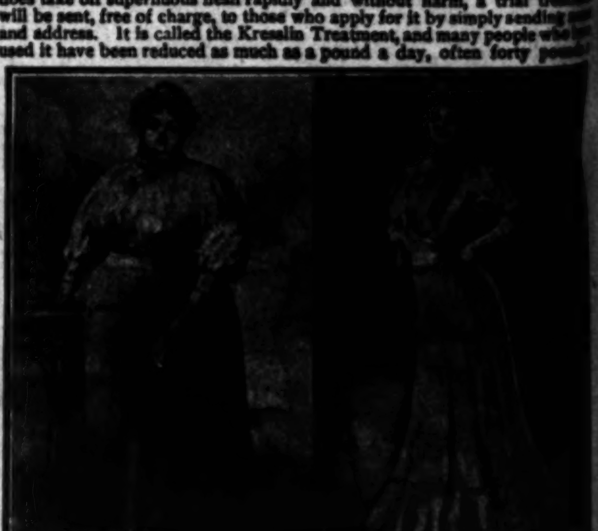
"The chic Frenchwoman is [illegible]lar about her hat. She goes [illegible] dozen times to have it tried on [illegible] when it is completed it fits [illegible] She is careless about nothing [illegible] that is probably one reason why [illegible] so chic."

MAKES FAT VANISH

Obesity Quickly and Safely Cured. No Charge to Try the NEW KRESSLIN TREATMENT.

JUST SEND YOUR ADDRESS AND A SUPPLY WILL BE SENT YOU FREE—DO IT TO-DAY.

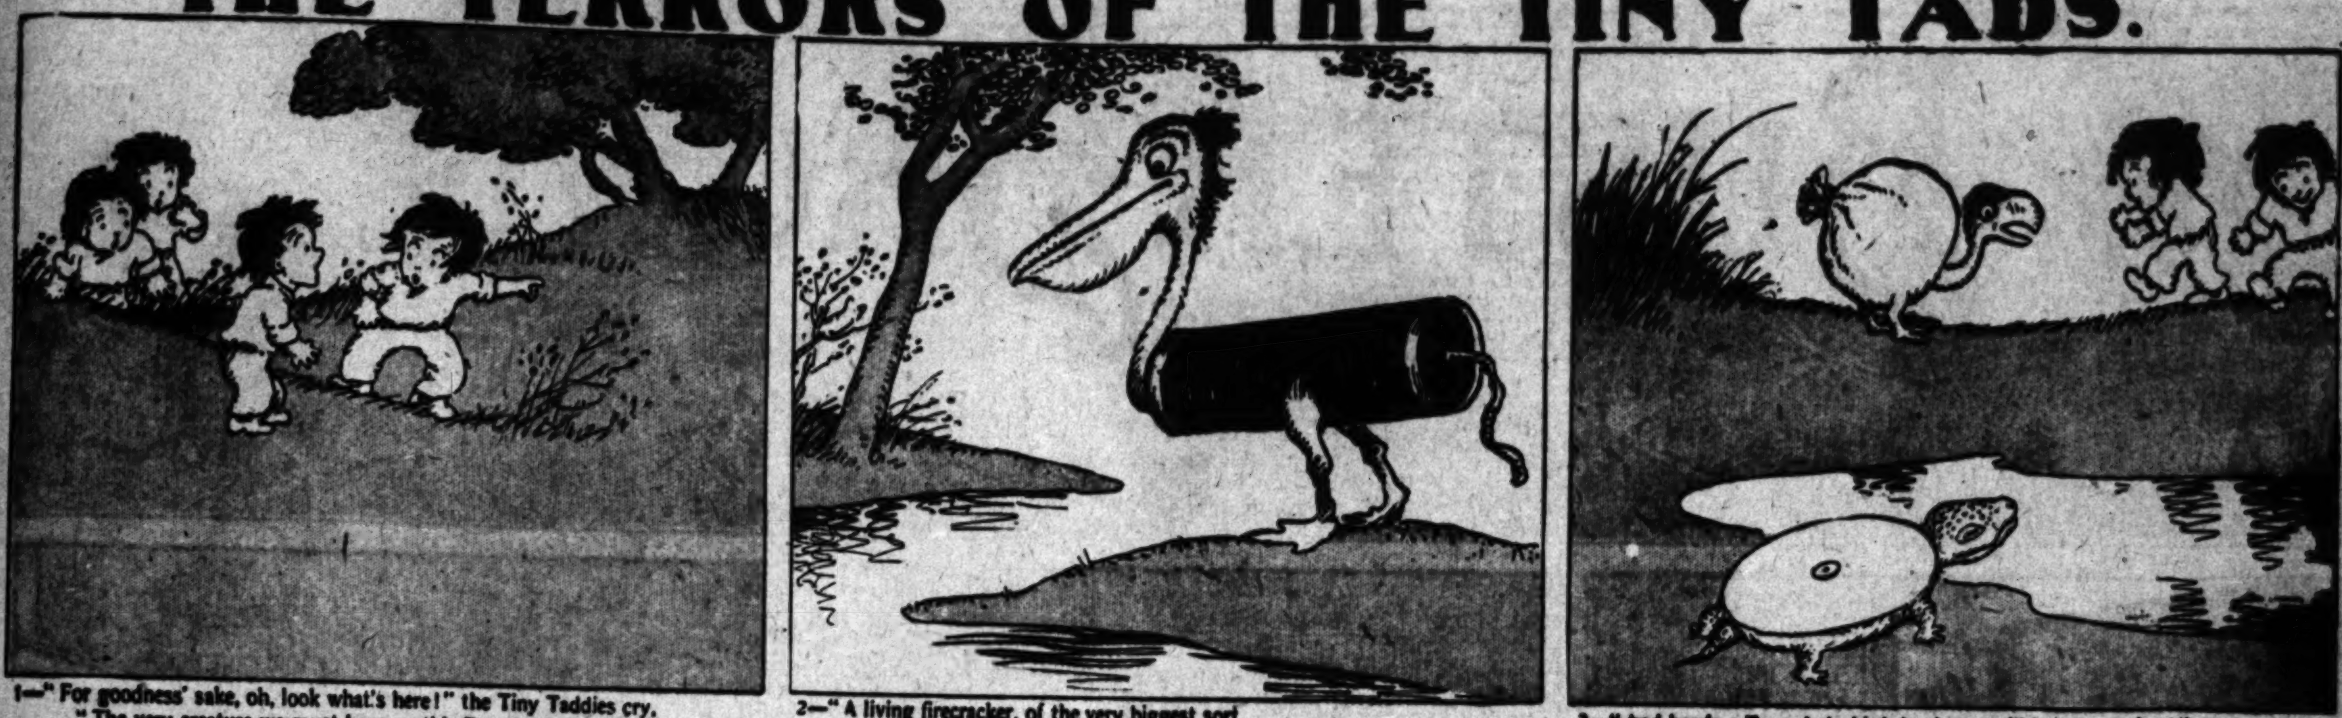
Fat people need no longer despair, for there is a home remedy to be had that will quickly and safely reduce their weight, and in order to prove that it does take off superfluous flesh rapidly and without harm, a trial treatment will be sent, free of charge, to those who apply for it by simply sending name and address. It is called the Kresslin Treatment, and many people who have used it have been reduced as much as a pound a day, often forty pounds [illegible]



This represents the effect the Kresslin Treatment has had in hundreds of cases.

[illegible] month when large quantities of fat were to be taken off. No person is so fat but what it will have the desired effect, and no matter where the excess fat is located—stomach, bust, hips, cheeks, neck—it will quickly vanish without exercising, dieting or in any way interfering with your customary habits. Rheumatism, Asthma, Kidney and Heart Troubles leave as fat is reduced. It does it in an absolutely harmless way, for there is not an atom in the treatment that is not beneficial to all the organs. So send name and address to the Dr. Bromley Co., Dept. 1254 41 West 25th St., New York City, and you will receive a large trial treatment free, together with an illustrated book on the subject and letters of indorsement from those who have taken the treatment at home and reduced themselves to normal. All this will be sent without one cent to pay in any shape or form. Let them hear from you promptly.

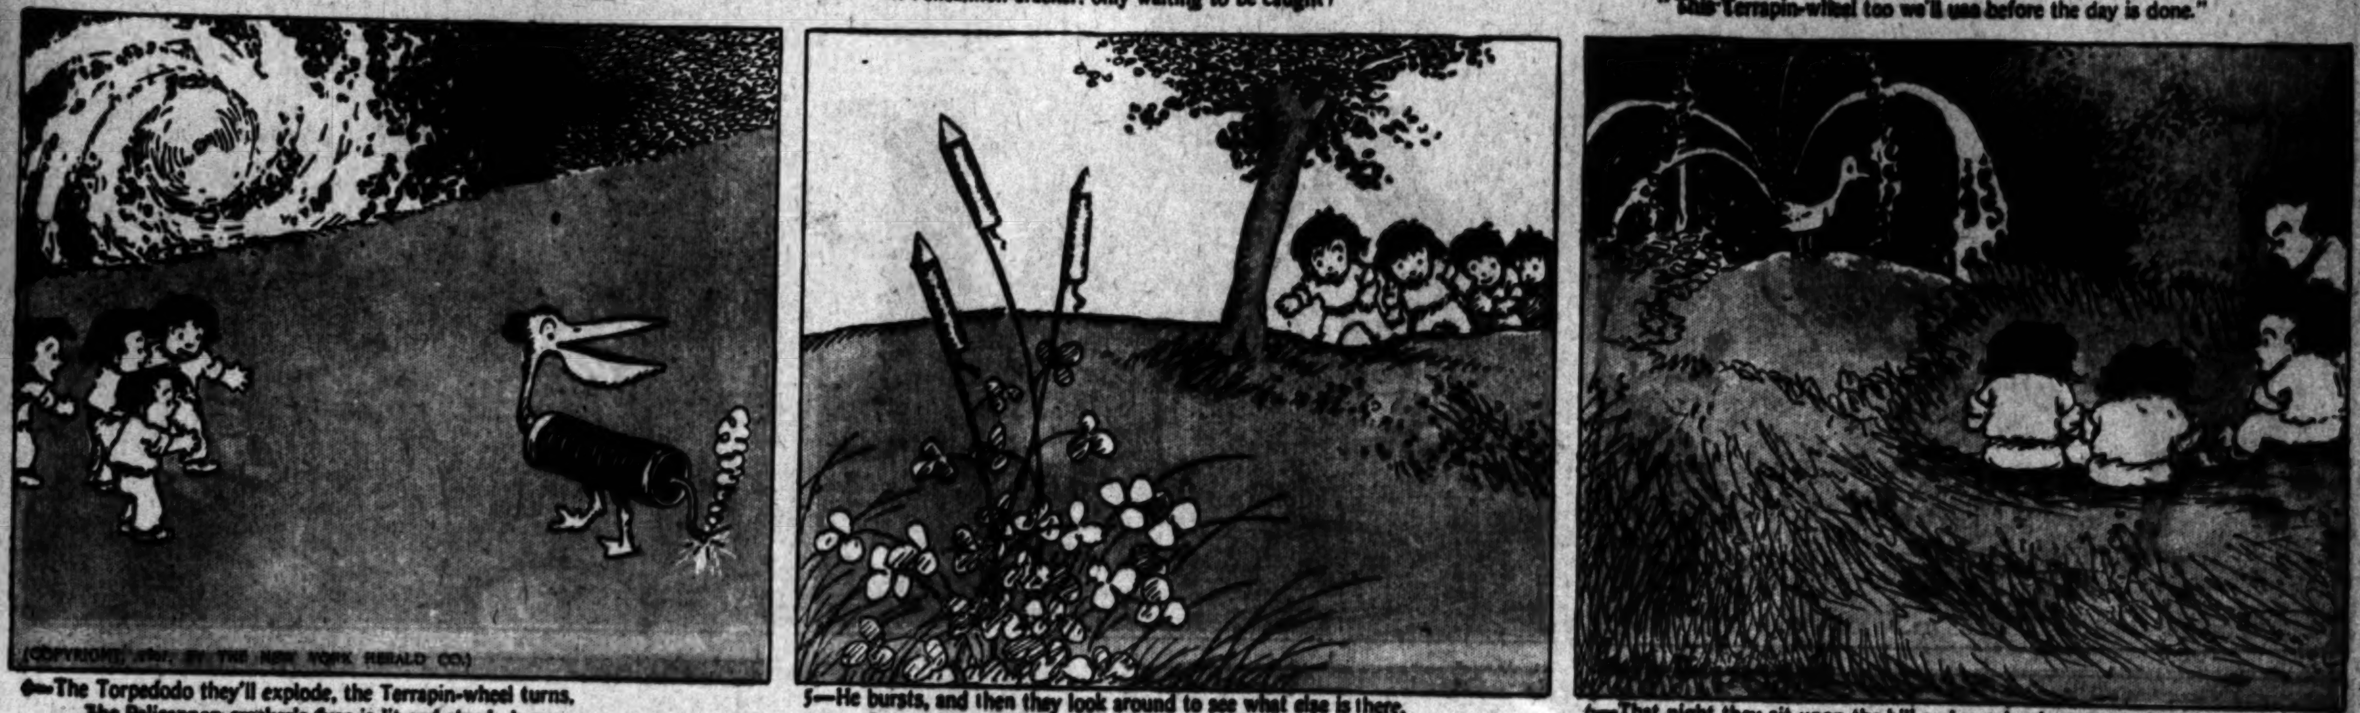
THE TERRORS OF THE TINY TADS.



1—"For goodness' sake, oh, look what's here!" the Tiny Taddies cry.
"The very creature we must have on this Fourth of July."

2—"A living firecracker, of the very biggest sort,
"A Pelicannon-cracker, only waiting to be caught!"

3—"And here's a Torpedodo-bird, by Jove, we'll have some fun!"
"This Terrapin-wheel too we'll use before the day is done."



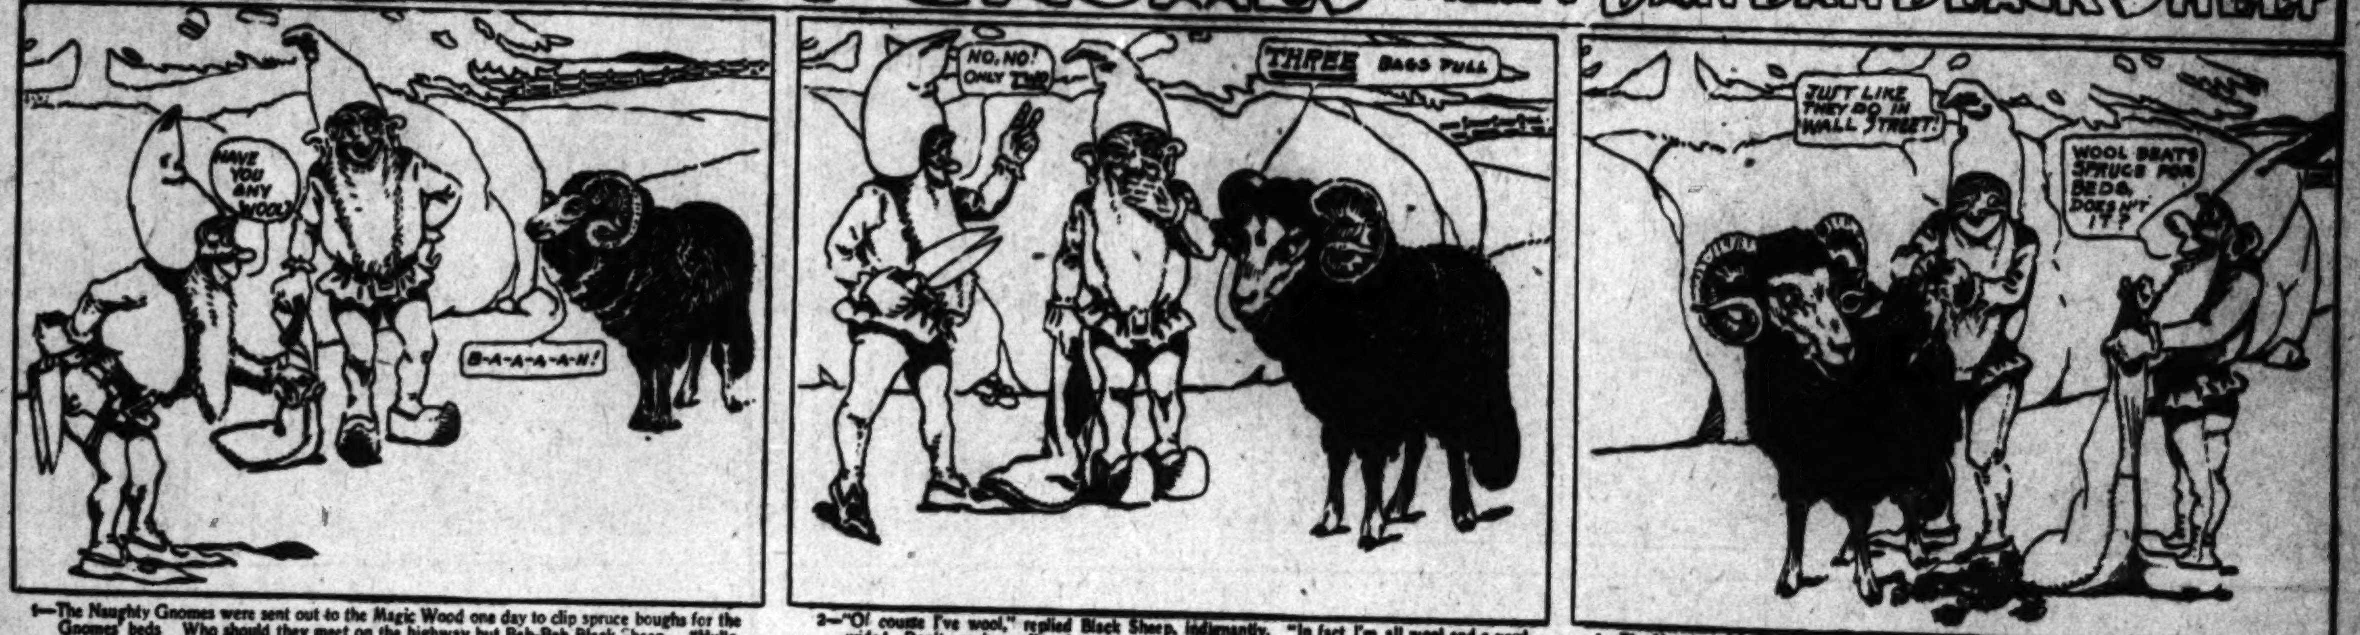
(COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY THE NEW YORK HERALD CO.)

4—The Torpedodo they'll explode, the Terrapin-wheel turns,
The Pelicannon-cracker's fuse is lit and slowly burns.

5—He bursts, and then they look around to see what else is there,
Some lovely Shamrockets they pick and shoot into the air.

6—That night they sit upon the hill and watch what seems absurd,
It is the flaming tail of a Fourth-of-Julyre-bird.

THE NAUGHTY GNOMES MEET BAH-BAH-BLACK-SHEEP



HAVE YOU ANY WOOL?
B-A-A-A-A-H!
NO, NO! ONLY TWO THREE BAGS FULL
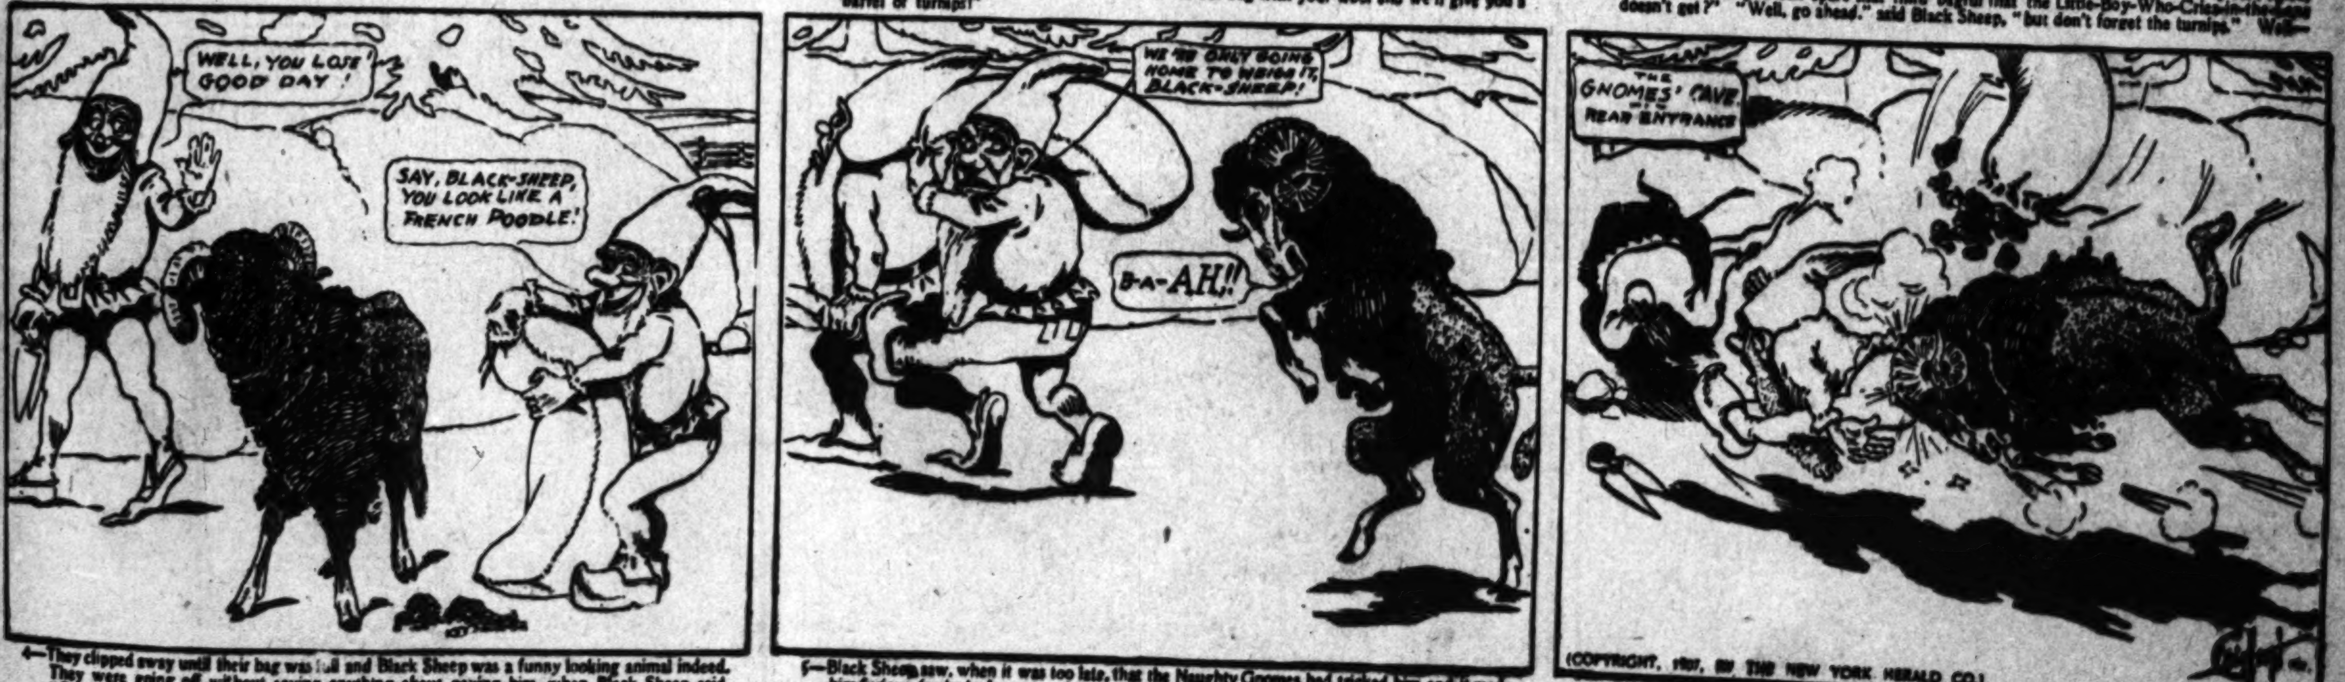
JUST LIKE THEY DO IN WALL STREET!
WOOL BEATS SPRUCE FOR BEDS, DOESN'T IT?

1—The Naughty Gnomes were sent out to the Magic Wood one day to clip spruce boughs for the Gnomes' beds. Who should they meet on the highway but Bah-Bah Black Sheep. "Hullo, Black Sheep!" cried Gogo, who knew all the Mother Goose people. "Have you any wool?"

2—"Of course I've wool," replied Black Sheep, indignantly. "In fact I'm all wool and a yard wide! Don't you know I've three bags full? One for my master and one for my dame, but none for the little boy who cries in the lane!" "We don't believe you have more than two bags full," said the Gnomes. "You let us fill our bag with your wool and we'll give you a barrel of turnips!"

3—The Naughty Gnomes hadn't any turnips to pay for the wool, but they thought they would get it anyway, as it would be much softer for their beds than spruce. So they said again, "Do you think you can spare that third bagful that the Little-Boy-Who-Cries-in-the-Lane doesn't get?" "Well, go ahead," said Black Sheep, "but don't forget the turnips." Well—



WELL, YOU LOSE GOOD DAY!
SAY, BLACK-SHEEP, YOU LOOK LIKE A FRENCH POODLE!
WE'RE ONLY GOING HOME TO WEIGH IT, BLACK-SHEEP!
B-A-AH!!
THE GNOMES' CAVE WITH REAR ENTRANCE
(COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY THE NEW YORK HERALD CO.)

4—They clipped away until their bag was full and Black Sheep was a funny looking animal indeed. They were going off without saying anything about paying him, when Black Sheep said, "See here, when do I get that barrel of turnips?" "You hadn't three bags full of wool on your hide," said Gogo; "so you lose the game, see?" Of course—

5—Black Sheep saw, when it was too late, that the Naughty Gnomes had tricked him and it made him furious, for he had a very quick temper. He reared up on his hind legs and gave an angry bleat. The Gnomes got scared when they saw how fierce he was acting and made a run for their cave; but—

6—Black Sheep bounded after them, snorting with rage. Gogo, who was ahead, just managed to slip in the back door of their cave, but Lop-Ear, who was carrying the wool, was too late. Black Sheep caught him and gave him a horrible bump, knocking his bag of wool sky high. When they were finally safe in the cave they peeked out to see if Black Sheep would go away, but he didn't. He stayed around watching for them, so they were afraid to venture out for a whole week.

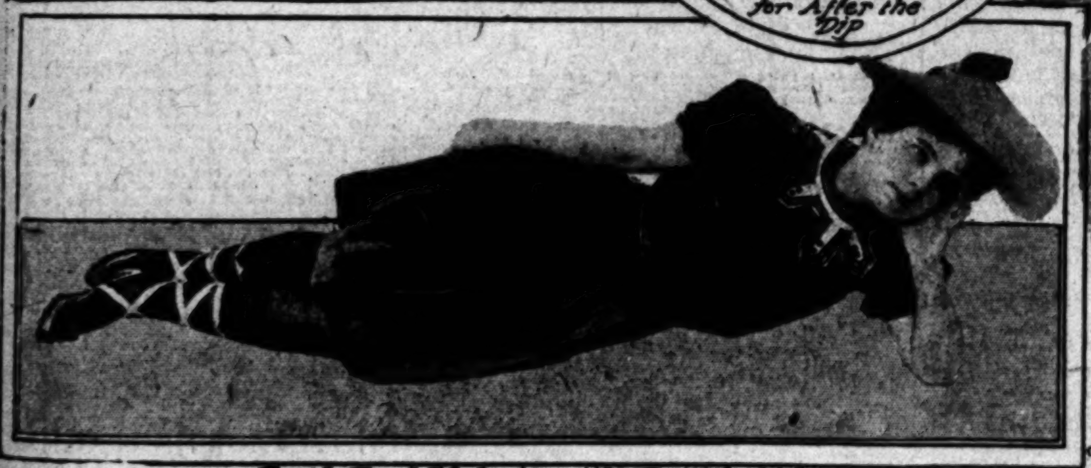
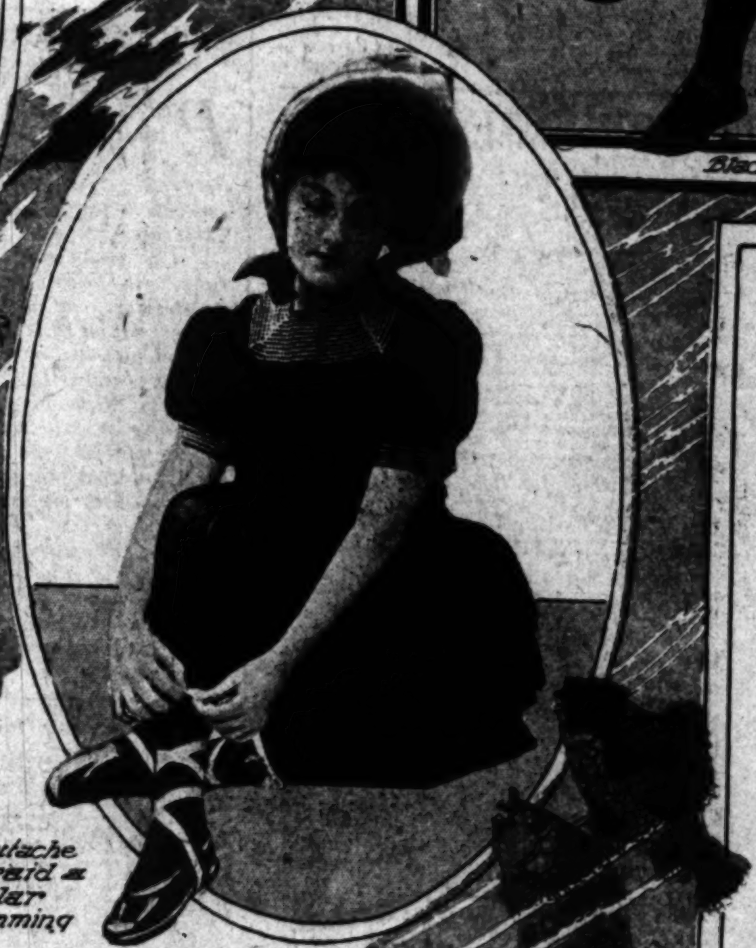
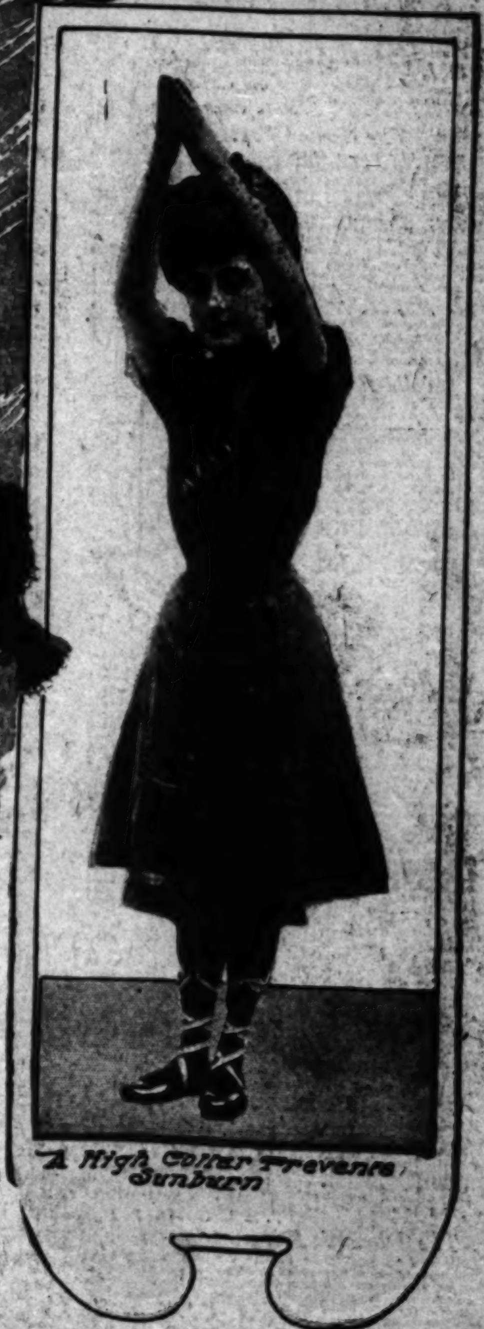
A Bathing Cloak for After the Dip



Dark Red Mohair with Braided Yoke



Soutache Braid a Popular Trimming



A High Collar Prevents Sunburn

WITH the bathing season once more at hand, women in all parts of the country are interesting themselves in costumes for their daily dip in the ocean, mountain lake or river. Perhaps in taking last year's bathing suit from its camphorized hybernating quarters, what we thought would do nicely another season is found to be decidedly worse for wear, in color and cut, and a new suit is imperative; or, perhaps, this summer may be our first opportunity to indulge in bathing, or hitherto we have been content with rented or bought suits. Whatever the cause, the interest in appropriate bathing costumes is widespread.

After all, it is an important subject, for a woman may look her best or her worst in the water, which depends largely on what she wears, and, incidentally, how she puts it on. Trimness is imperative; there must be no sagging bands or missed connections between skirt and blouse, or collar and shield.

There is a wide choice this year in the materials and cut of bathing suits; the color-range, however, is more limited. While the silk suit is undoubtedly first choice, if one can afford it (for looks, if not for health), there are probably five times as many mohairs, fine serges and other woolen goods worn. Among silks, taffeta, despite its cutting propensity, is the chief favorite, but twilled surah, waterproof China silks, satins of the rhadame, liberty, duchess, and even the cotton-back weaves, also heavy rajahs, burlingham and pongees are seen. Mohairs of every kind have undoubtedly taken precedence of the flannels and serges that were inevitable a few years ago; fine panama cloths are often used, however, and even such stuffs as challis or cashmeres.

A good quality is essential in choosing a bathing suit. It pays in the end to get a material that is "fast" of color, and is sufficiently firm not to pull out of shape. Sagging and rustiness are all too noticeable on most bathing beaches.

If the suit is made by a home seamstress, the expense is comparatively slight. According to the style selected, from seven to ten yards of double-width material are necessary and from fourteen to twenty yards of silk. An economical cutter has been known to get a taffeta suit from twelve yards. Extras in the way of trimmings are entirely a matter of choice. Some of the very smartest suits have nothing but stitched bands of the material or some contrasting color to relieve their plainness. Embroidered emblems, braiding more or less elaborate and trimmings of some contrasting stuffs are much used. There is a growing fondness for a combination of striped or checked bands, collar and cuffs on a plain goods, or vice versa.

In cut there is equal variety. Probably more pleated skirts are seen this year than usual, but circular and gored styles are also good. A five or seven gored model, tastefully trimmed with bands or stitching, is very satisfactory. The closing is usually in the left front seam. Pleated skirts must be stitched into trimness over the hips, though they should have a good flare below. The regulation length is just to cover the knees. Blouses are preferably tucked or stitched into pleats, but the plain gathered blouse, with sailor collar or yoke, is quite as much worn. Sleeves are usually short puffs, held into a band, even when necks are finished with a high standing collar, a style which is increasing in popularity. The sailor collar is usually worn without a shield, and the Dutch or French neck, cut either square or round, should never by any chance approach decollete effects.

Skirts and blouses may be made in one, with a stitched belt and the bloomers attached to a fitted corset waist underneath; or, the blouse and bloomers are joined, the fulness being regulated by a drawstring at the waist, and the skirt is buttoned on through a band that serves as a belt. Bloomers darted over the hips are much less clumsy.

Black stockings are most often seen; though with certain colors, like brown, they match the suit. Hats are rarely used by the swimmer, as the bandannas are much more becoming. The flapping sun hat tied under the chin is occasionally quite picturesque.

A bathing suit should always be conservative in coloring. One may feel perfectly safe in selecting black or blue that it will look well and be inconspicuous. Certain browns stand exposure very well and London smoke, brightened with just a touch of color, is stylish, also a very dark red. Freak suits in loud or garish shades are very poor taste. As already stated, there is a growing fondness for stripes and checks, but they should be quiet in tone and small in size.

Good suggestions as to bathing suits can be had from the models shown today. The dark blue brillantine worn by the young girl just fastening her sandals is simply cut, with a gored skirt and plain blouse, which is given greater fulness by side pleats on the shoulder. White soutache braid makes a pretty trimming around the French neck and sleeves.

Becoming, besides being sensible, for the woman who dislikes a sunburned neck, is the high collar of the mulberry colored mohair suit, worn by the diver. The skirt is circular, with a box pleat and two side pleats in front, and the blouse has a box pleat and two side pleats stitched to the waist, with three other pleats stitched to the bust line. The silk tie is in violet taffeta, a tone or two lighter than the mohair, and the purple tones are repeated in the bandanna.

Heavy mohair, which gives excellent service, may be made effective by using braided serge or taffeta collars and trimmings. The brown bathing suit shown has a broad sailor collar in white taffeta, braided with several widths of brown silk braid. The gored skirt is pleated all around, and the hat is tied down by a brown and yellow bandanna into a becoming angle.

A white rubber bathing cape is useful for the after dip, even when covering so good-looking a suit as the black taffeta with its simple braided design in black soutache on neck, sleeves and belt. The gored skirt has two side pleats at each seam, and the blouse has two similar pleats on each shoulder and a tiny line of blue panne velvet to outline the neck. A black handkerchief, with stripes and rings in light blue, is tied over the rubber bathing cap.

The swimmer will prefer the pretty stitched yoke of white grosgrain, worn with the tucked red mohair suit, to a loose collar, which has an annoying habit of floating. The fancy waved red braid and buttons of the pointed yoke and belt is a simple decoration that can be easily copied.

Black taffeta makes such smart bathing suits that little trimming is necessary. The suit on the lower figure has thread tucks on both skirt and blouse, its only trimming being a belt and shaped yoke stitched to the blouse and trimmed with many rows of black braid. The red silk handkerchief hair covering gives the only touch of color.

The other suit is laid in half-inch tucks an inch apart. A deep stitched yoke extends well down on the tucked bell sleeves to give the long-shouldered effect. It is outlined with a black and white braid, with a little hand embroidery in the center of each diamond.

A one-piece suit in princess effect of "London smoke" mohair is another model. The skirt is circular, and the fulness of the blouse is held on the shoulders by two loose deep pleats. The stitched pointed tabs, with a large crochet button in the center of each one, that run from the throat to the line of the skirt is a novel and easily made trimming.

Mrs. Herrick Advises Against Desultory Reading

MORE about the Reading Chapter, girls! I wish some of you would write and report to me how you are getting on with the work you have undertaken, and would turn in an account of how well you keep up to your promise to read fifteen minutes every day.

Many good letters have come to me about the plans for reading, and they have suggested to me some things I would like to say to you in the effort to help you as much as possible to make the best of yourselves and of the time you put into the reading you wish to do. And the first thing I would advise is to have some pretty definite plan of what you want to undertake. To show how some of you wander about let me quote from one letter I received:

"I am much interested in biographies, especially those of the English-speaking people. I also desire to know something of the life and customs of people in foreign countries. I give you my pledge to read fifteen minutes daily. Can you send me some suggestion as to how I can begin with either one of these subjects?"

You girls who have the well-established habit of reading will not wonder that I held my head when I came to this part of the letter and that I had a feeling of being a good deal overwhelmed with a contract which was too big for me to fill. I wondered what the girl wanted. She spoke of the biographies of English-speaking people. But in what lines? How was I to direct her? That was what I wrote and asked. Did she care for the biographies of great explorers or scientists, or men of letters or artists or educators or inventors or men of affairs or musicians or what? And which period did she wish to study? Should it be the present time or did she desire to go into the past, and how far back? Or if she wished to read of foreign countries, which one? She did not even go into details concerning the continent of her choice. Was it the people of European countries whom she wanted to know or those of Asia or the Dark Continent or Australia? Do you see how impossible it is for me to advise any one who gives so general an order as this?

VAGUENESS A COMMON FAULT

I think that is the vaguest of all the letters I have thus far received, but there are others lacking in definiteness. One girl says she would like to study English history from the beginning up to the present time. Now that is very commendable, and if she wishes just a superficial knowledge of the story of England she can get it by taking some good book like Green's Shorter History of the English People, which I have commended to many of the girls, and reading it carefully. But that is not the most interesting way of reading history, to my thought, and not the way to fix the different periods in the mind, either. Another woman comes nearer the best way of reading when she says: "I would like to take up the history of England as far back as William the Conqueror and include the Plantagenets, the Stuarts and their wars." (I may say, by the way, that English history is the subject the reading girls seem to find most attractive.) One tells me she wishes to give special attention to the Elizabethan and Stuart periods. Indeed, there are several who have announced their desire to know more about the period of Elizabeth.

The woman who comes nearer than any other to fulfilling my idea of what the Reading Chapter should mean tells me she has always been a great reader. "But," she adds, "I do not think I profit enough by my reading. I read everything, history, travel, fiction and biography, and like them all. Still, I have always wanted to make my reading a study by taking up a country or part of a country, reading the history of it, books of travel in that part, fiction and lives of noted persons of that country. For instance, I would like to take up the study of England, the history, travels, fiction and lives of its noted men and women. Please plan out for me such a course."

You see how this member narrows down the field of the work she desires—and yet she has laid out a good deal of work for herself. She can hardly hope to get a large and comprehensive knowledge of even one country unless she has a good deal more than fifteen minutes a day to devote to the study.

Does this sound discouraging? I don't mean it in that way. The point I am trying to make is that it is a mistake to choose too big a theme, for if you do you get disheartened before you become fairly introduced to it.

Suppose that any one who wishes to study English history should begin from the beginning, as the most recently quoted correspondent would probably care to do. The early history of England has a whole literature of its own and one to which certain students have devoted most of their lives. It is not worth while for the general reader to go into it too extensively. Something of the early Roman and Danish and Anglo-Saxon period she should know, but unless she wishes to give all her attention to this ... would better push on to later days and go on ... general history until she finds some time ... wishes to stop and settle, so to speak.

Let us look, for example, at this period of ... dors, to which reference has been made. All the ... of Elizabeth is of interest, and not only ... was a time of wonderful discoveries and trav... wars and conquests, but also because of the ... growth of literature. It is a period in which ... and study. But it is not the only one. The time ... Stuarts is another singularly interesting age; and ... are the times of the Georges, especially attr... Americans because of our peculiar relations ... home country at that time; the Victorian period, ... eral others.

But it is not England only that is of inter... may study France, whether under the Louis' ... istrations or in the time of the Revolution ... poleon or of the commune; Germany in ... wars, Russia in her oppression and her ... Italy, old and young. There is no use in ... all the countries of Europe, or even of turning ... periods of growth in our own land, beginning ... the early discoveries and coming down through ... different stages of the making of the nation ... present time.

THE VALUE OF CONCENTRATION

I am not outlining now the reading you ... I am only trying to give you some idea of ... Reading Chapter may introduce to you of ... profit in order that the girls who write ... they "just love reading" may have that love ... some practical use in helping them to direct ... they now spend without system. Indiscriminate ... ing may give pleasure, but it does little else.

Not that I mean to make light of pleasure, ... than I would of fun. We want that as well ... more serious things of life. But I think that if we ... into reading in the right way, taking up one ... history at a time, rather than skirmishing ... over the whole field, we will all find that the ... tration of interest does a great deal more for ... the scattering attention.

I am most desirous to have this Reading Chapter ... mean a great deal to all the girls who belong ... don't believe many of them begin to guess ... is in it for them of enjoyment. I wish to ... into a whole big new field of pleasure, and I ... it, I am sure, if they will only let me.

Some one suggests that we should form ... take hold of different lines of work. I think ... excellent idea, and I wish the girls who have ... subjects in common could get together and ... notes on their reading. Won't you, for instance, ... wish to study the times of Elizabeth let me know ... I may group you and bring you in touch with ... another?

And if you know girls outside of Each and All ... are interested in any special line of reading, ... could help and instruct in some special direction ... list their good offices. Bring them into Each ... and let them know how much there is for them ... and to get in our big society.

Christine Terhune

WHAT THE MANY WORKERS ARE DOING

I LEAD off today with a bunch of reports and talk about chapters new and old:

The Utopian Chapter

I am a member of the Utopian Chapter and have been for a year. We had our first anniversary recently and we had a splendid time. In our hall we had a beautiful table spread and enjoyed every minute. Fifteen members sat down—two were absent. Singing and dancing followed. I am very pleased with our chapter, and hope to see it a banner chapter yet.

K. L. (Lexington, Mass.).

The Name Chapter

Here is the first report of the Name Chapter: January 16 I sent out the first letter, and have sent one each week since then, making nine letters. These letters contain extracts from members' letters, short articles, poetry, quotations, recipes, etc., and an exchange list. The object of the Name Chapter is to help the girls in any way. I want to hear from those who have anything to exchange—fancy work, painting, books, ideas, etc. I also want to help the other chapters in getting members, or in any way that I can.

I have received $1.04 for an invalid to help pay her expenses in consulting a specialist; $1.34 for another invalid. We offer for sale bead necklaces. We will take orders for centerpieces. We want reading matter. I remember seeing on the page where a member asked how she could cure her boy of smoking. I wish she would read "The Second Mrs. Jim," by Stephen Conrad.

LIS (Chairman Name Chapter, Jersey City, N. J.).

Invalid-Help Chapter Report

My report is as follows: Souvenir postals, booklets, Easter cards and postals, mounted pictures, a fancy apron and money. I have heard from a number of my helpers who do not write very often and have learned that they are far from idle. They are carrying on the work and living up to their pledge, faithfully, though silently. One helper has made a number of garments for an invalid, and is planning to make some more. This same helper is doing some embroidery which she will present to one of the invalids, while to another she sends a great deal of music. Another helper writes me that she had her name taken from the Postcard Exchange so that she could devote her spare time and money to her invalids. Other helpers send silk and wool pieces and cigar bands, the latter to be used in making plates and trays.

E. P. D. (Aspinwall, Pa.).

The Walk-Over Chapter

I want you to know a little about our Easter work; I will try to put it briefly. I went around the room in our factory and collected the pennies, which amounted to $5.30. I bought a number of plants and little remembrances. I spent $5, and then telephoned to the Relief Hospital to see whether there were any who had not been remembered, and they said there were three—two men and a woman. I ordered flowers and carried them down, and then came home and collected the money on the floor where I live, so that in Easter week the chapter spent between $9 and $10. That is fine; isn't it? I had never been out and called on any of the people whom we have remembered until that Saturday, when I carried a basket of good things and a flower to a woman. She was delighted and said she was just on the verge of the blues—she had been alone so much. She said she had been wishing for a flower, and also that she knew it was Easter; but she didn't think it was Christmas! I promised I would come again, and shall next week, with the members whose names I sent this week. These three are among my very best friends and will make fine members.

A woman who used to work with us, and whose insurance we have been paying since we organized, died three weeks ago, and so our work there is finished. Her mother received her insurance, which she never would have if we had not paid the premium right along. One old man died to whom we had sent 50 cents. We never knew he was so poor. Mrs. Herrick, that man needed nourishment, but he would not give up that 50 cents—he was so pleased to have it—and two days before he died he gave it to his wife, and she told three of the girls who went to see her that she would never part with it if she was starving. It made me cry when I heard it; I felt so bad. We could have given him a great deal more had we known. He never grew tired of talking about this club. We sent a lily to an old lady who had never been remembered in that way by strangers before, and her daughter told me she cried and cried for joy to think perfect strangers had remembered her.

F. G. (Chairman Walk-Over Chapter, Brockton, Mass.).

Our Easton Chapter

I will write to you and tell you of our success in forming our Easton Chapter. We met last Thursday evening at my home. There were eleven of us in all. We elected a president, vice president, secretary and treasurer, and also a critic. We decided to meet every three weeks. I wonder if there are any more girls in Easton who belong to Each and All and who would like to join our chapter? Please put this notice in the paper.

F. B. L. (Easton, Pa.).

The Domestic Science Chapter

I have the "pupils" now in the chapter, but I want more "teachers," and I've been thinking if you would let my plea be known on the page, perhaps it would call out those members of Each and All who are wondering what they can do for the good of it. There are many, many mothers—yes, and grandmothers—who have had to lay aside the scepter and retire to the corner with not much in view but to look on! Do they know how much I need them? If I could have ten or twelve for an "advisory" board—they need not take a strictly active part unless they choose, though how welcome they would be! And our cook book! Well, I thought the collecting of the recipes would be the least of the work, but though it may be such, still they are very slow in coming. If only the girls would, in general, send me two or three, or even one recipe each, what a volume it would make!

E. P. R. (Santa Ana, Cal.).

Who will respond to this appeal and be enrolled among the "teachers"? And who will send recipes? Nearly every housekeeper can do this. Write to me for E. P. R.'s address, and then write to her.

The Christine Chapter

We met here at North Turner and organized our Christine Chapter with twenty-five members. Isn't that lovely? We have a president, vice president, secretary and treasurer. We will meet Tuesdays, bi-monthly. I will write you later about our line of work.

MEEKE (North Turner, Maine).

All these reports are encouraging, and although those referring to Easter work may seem a little belated, I cannot refuse the girls the pleasure of reading of the beautiful helpfulness displayed by our girls. I wish we could have new members for all these chapters and that they would grow to many times their present size.

Outings for Poor Children

A while ago I saw a letter from a member suggesting a club or something of the sort to raise funds for outings for poor children. I think this would be a fine way for the girls to help the poor little ones, and if such a club is organized, I will be glad to give my mite toward it.

E. J. H. (Germantown, Pa.).

Perhaps the best way to handle such work as this would be through our Invalid Help Chapters. Who else would like to help with it?

A Summer Vacation House

I am a married girl and would like to belong to the Mothers' Chapter and also to the Postcard Exchange.

Have any of the chapters a summer vacation house? If not, do you think any of the members would like one at a beach near Boston? M. E. McN. (Roxbury, Mass.).

Such a vacation cottage was run with great success near Los Angeles last year. I wish some of the chapters in and about Boston would combine on such an enterprise.

Orders Wanted for Fancy Work

I do quite a bit of fancy work and would like some orders. I make fancy chamois powder cloths for the face, or they can be used for jewelry—in heart shape or round. These are very pretty. I also make little dusters or penwipers of chamois, fancy hatpin holders, hair receivers, kimonos made of handkerchiefs, pin cushions, bow sachets for the waist, and other kinds of sachets. I work cushions on huck toweling in diamond shapes. I also do hemstitching. Dear girls, I would be glad to get any of your orders, and will do the best I can for you at reasonable prices.

BROWN EYES (Anadarko, Okla.).
(Formerly at Fairmount, W. Va.).

Those who recollect this old member at the East will be glad to know of her in her western home. I hope she may receive many orders for her work.

A Request for Quilt Squares

I read of some girls who would like to exchange squares for a birthday quilt, and I would like to exchange squares with someone for a quilt. If you will please send me the address of any one who wishes to exchange squares for postcards or postcards for squares. I have read of a western girl who would like squares of bleached muslin 6x6. I would like bleached muslin 8x8, with name, address and date of birth worked in red wash silk or red wash cotton.

Mrs. A. E. S. (Reading, Pa.).

There are other members interested in quilt making. Will they not send to me for this member's address and exchange squares with her?

An Appreciation and a Plea

I know you always like to hear about your "bees," and though I cannot say much for myself, I can tell you how dear and kind I find many of the others. During three weeks in January I was in the hospital for appendicitis. While there I had most delightful letters from several girls and many postcards. They were bright spots in the long, dreary days.

It seems to me that New Hampshire girls are very slow, especially the Concord girls. I know two members here, but, like myself, they do not feel like taking the initiative in forming a chapter; but we wish there were one here.

DAISY. (Concord, N. H.).

I hope there may be some Concord girls eager to start a chapter. If so, I will gladly give "Daisy's" address. It does me good to hear of how Each and All girls cheered her imprisonment in the hospital.

Varied Interests

I am 17 years old and am interested in music, the theater, reading, sewing and housework. If there is anything I can do to help, I will be very glad to do so.

FLORENCE J. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

This should make an interesting correspondent.

An Offer of Help in French

I always spend an hour or so every Sunday with my Each and All sisters, and have noticed that several asked for help in French. I can easily help them, and would take pleasure in doing so, as I am French myself, and have made a special study of the language, till illness obliged me to leave school. I then came to live here, and have attended high school since.

I should like to correspond with the western and southern girls.

ESPERANCE (Attleboro, Mass.).

OBJECTS AND AIMS OF EACH AND ALL

PERHAPS some of you, seeing this page for the first time, wonder just what the Each and All Society really is; what there is about its aims and objects to create so widespread an interest among "young girls of all ages."

The society was founded in February, 1905, with Christine Terhune Herrick for its president, and with an almost instant membership of girls in nearly every State in the Union and in Canada.

Its object is to help girls help themselves by developing their talents into something the world wants; to solve difficult problems—the sort a girl wants a calm, unbiased, out-of-the-family opinion upon—and to promote the exchange of general help.

Any girl may belong. There is no red tape about it. The sending of your name for membership gives you the range of every opportunity the society boasts. And Mrs. Herrick stands ready to welcome, to advise and to help.

An Attractive Offer of Exchange

I am a married girl of 32 (I am afraid that word "girl" is imposed on), but I don't feel at all old, although I have been married twelve years. I am the mother of six dear children, one pair of whom are twins (girl and boy). As I do my own work with the help of one servant, and have a ten-room house, you may think I am very busy. I never whip my children and find that they obey me better than some of my neighbors' children who are continually being whipped.

Now, will some of the girls tell me what to do with a large bundle of plush squares? I also have trouble with moths, although I frequently air all woolen articles of clothing. Also I do not quite know what I can do to help. There is only one thing I really excel in and that is in making infants' and children's fine clothing, and of course plain ones as well. I will be very glad to do this for the girls in exchange for fancy embroidering or battenberg, or crocheted lace.

L. E. C. (Wilkes-Barre, Pa.).

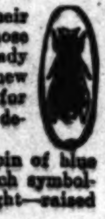
Will Teach How to Make Bead Chains

I will show any of the members how to make forget-me-not strings of beads from very small beads (blue and yellow).

I am very much interested in painting and drawing.

D. F. B. (Beaver Falls, Pa.).

How to Get a Badge



MOST of my girls have their badges by this time—those of them who are already members. But for my new girls, who've just seen the page for the first time today, a word of description should be given.

The badge is a pretty little pin of blue enamel, with our honey bee—which symbolizes industry, sweetness and light—raised in gold from the surface.

Into the back of the pin these three words are cut: "Each and All"—the name of our society.

In shape the pin is long and narrow—something the shape of the popular little pins that are just one remove from cuff pins, and several degrees more satisfactory.

Each pin is 50 cents, which may be sent to me in stamps, money order or registered letter, addressing me in care of this newspaper.

CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK,
President.

CORRESPONDENCE AND POSTCARDS

ADDRESSES of correspondents and postcard collectors will be given only to other members of Each and All. In order to secure these, the signature and place of residence as given on the page should be sent to me, accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope for reply.

I have some splendid recipes, and I would be glad to send any in exchange for view postcards, but no comic ones, please. The recipes are for cakes, candies, puddings, Spanish dishes, etc. I would send two to any one sending me one view postcard. I am getting a collection, and think they are very interesting and helpful to one, so if any one cares to make the exchange I will gladly send the recipes.

ELNORA (Lompoc, Cal.).

I would like to have my name put on the Postcard Exchange list. I am 11 years old, and would like to have some addresses of other girls of that age, so that I can exchange with them, views preferred. M. M. H. (Allentown, Pa.).

I will be glad to exchange letters and good postal cards of scenery and places of interest, even refined comics. California postcards are so pretty. I know you will all like them. ELSIE C. S. K. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

I am a young girl of about 18, and a graduate of high school. I should like to join the Postcard Exchange. I have collected many cards, but have room for more.

SKIDOO GIRL (Highlandville, Mass.).

I am 17 years old, and am interested in all out-of-door sports; also in collecting postal cards. I will gladly exchange cards with members from all the states, but especially from the South and West. DOT (Portsmouth, N. H.).

I would like to exchange cards with girls from western or southern states. I would like leather cards and scenery, especially from Mexico and Los Angeles, Cal.—no comical ones. ANNA C. V. (Roxbury, Mass.).

I am 12 years old, and would like to exchange postals with any one my age or older.

L. A. F. (Hartford, Conn.).

Will the girl from the village of Stillmein who sent a card to "Elsie, Hamilton, Canada," please send her name and address again, as the writer lost the first card, and wishes to send pictorial postals in return for one sent?

ELSIE (Hamilton, Canada.).

I am a middle-aged widow, working in the shop every day. I will gladly exchange postcards from any part of the country. I will also exchange leather ones with those who wish it. A. S. A. (Worcester, Mass.).

I would like to exchange postcards with girls of my age who live in the South. I am a sophomore, 15 years old, and hope to go to college. I am fond of books and painting.

R. H. M. (Scranton, Pa.).

I should like very much to have my name put on the page as one wishing to exchange both paper and leather postcards. L. V. (Watts, Cal.).

I would like to exchange postal cards or recipes with any one. I have quite a large collection of both already.

CLARA (Los Angeles, Cal.).

I would like to exchange postcards (comic not desired) and correspond with any girls of my age (16) who are interested in drawing, sewing, etc. I prefer those not from my own state. BUFF (Boston, Mass.).

I will exchange crochet patterns with any one who wishes to exchange. I also would like a few correspondents. I am a married girl of 24, have little children, and would like to correspond with other mothers and exchange ideas. I hope I shall hear from some of the Each and All girls soon.

Mrs. A. F. N. (Baldwinville, Mass.).

I wish to write and thank the Each and All members who have sent me postals. So many times I see members who say they do not receive cards for those they send, but I have received some from those I didn't send any to first, and I wish to thank them all. Please keep my name on the list.

F. H. (North Attleboro, Mass.).

If there are any old women or shut-ins who would like to exchange postals, stamps or fancy work, I would like very much to help them if I can. You may give my address to any who wish for postals from New Hampshire.

ELIZABETH (Concord, N. H.).

I would like to correspond with girls of about my own age, 18. I am very fond of reading, and would like to exchange books with the members; also to join the Postcard Exchange. T. B. (Altoona, Pa.).

I would like to correspond with some girl living on a ranch in Montana or Wyoming.

NOD (McKeesport, Pa.).

Please put my name on the postcard list for foreign cards, also some from Florida and California. I shall return all sent with pretty ones, and want only such myself.

M. V. H. R. (West Philadelphia, Pa.).

I would be glad to exchange postals or write letters to members of the club who desire to do so. As I am 16 years old, I would prefer to carry on correspondence with girls of that age. ANNA M. S. (Boston, Mass.).

I am 18 years old. I should like a postcard correspondent (of about my own age) from some western state. I should also like a letter correspondent near or around Boston. Perhaps some girl who may live near enjoys tramps and taking Brownie pictures. I would be very glad to exchange work with any of the girls. I am very fond of burning wood, painting, drawing or doing fancy work. Although I am a working girl, as bookkeeper, in the city, I find a good deal of time for pleasure with others, and greatly enjoy corresponding. I. A. H. (West Somerville, Mass.).

The girls complain about sending postals out to the other Each and All girls and not getting any in return. In reply, I wish to say that perhaps some of the girls do as I know several have done by me. Instead of writing to you for addresses, they send cards out under the initials to the town in which they are, and expect the girls to get them; but here they will not give the postals to any one unless they can be proven as yours, so I know of lots I have missed getting in that way. Of course, any one with the initials "K. E. S." can go to the postoffice and claim them, so the postman will not give them up to any one, but sends them to the Dead Letter Office, or else destroys them. So I think that the girls would better get the correct address ... they send out postals, if they want others sent back ... don't you? K. E. S. (Charlestown, ...

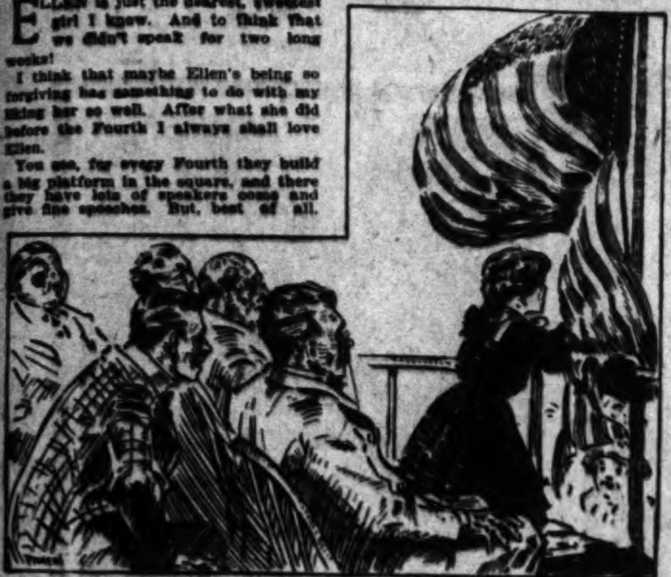
LOST ON PURPOSE

ELLEN is just the dearest, sweetest girl I know. And to think that we didn't speak for two long weeks!

I think that maybe Ellen's being so forgiving has something to do with my liking her so well. After what she did before the Fourth I always shall love Ellen.

You see, for every Fourth they build a big platform in the square, and there they have lots of speakers come and give fine speeches. But, best of all, there's an unfurling of a great flag, when the band plays and all cheer and take off their hats. Oh, it's simply fine!



"IT WAS GLORIOUS RAISING THE FLAG."

Some girl from Miss Jane's school is always chosen to do this, and, I can tell you, the one who raises the flag is as proud as a peacock.

Miss Jane told us two weeks before the Fourth that whoever made the best marks for the next ten days would be chosen. So we all set to work as hard as ever we could.

Of course, Ellen and I weren't speaking all this time, as I said, but we both wanted to make up, just the same. You know when you've had a chum as long as you can remember, it's hard to get used to being without her. (No, I've really forgotten what it was that led us not to speak.)

It so happened that by the day the winner was to be picked Ellen and I were even, and it all depended on the mark we got that afternoon for our composition.

Now, I'm better in examples than Ellen, but I don't like compositions, while she can write all kinds without the least trouble.

Just before school was over we were all waiting to hear the name of the winner, when Miss Jane asked, surprised-like, "Ellen, why didn't you write any composition?"

Ellen hung her head and said real low that she didn't want to write any. So I was chosen to unfurl the flag, although I just know Ellen gave up because of me. But, I can tell you, we were fast friends after that.

It was glorious, raising the flag, with so many people looking at you and such splendid music, but all the time I felt kind of sorry and wished Ellen had done it instead of me.

FUN IN NAMING THE TREES

BOYS and girls can have lots of fun playing the following game and will find some of the questions are not very easy to answer, either. The questions are given out on slips of paper without the answers, and the one who gets the largest number of correct answers is the winner of the game:

Which is the most level tree? Plane.

Which is the brightest colored tree? Redwood.

Which tree suggests thoughts of the ocean? Beech.

Which tree would we prefer on a very cold day? Fir.

Which tree contains a domestic animal? Mahogany.

Which tree might very properly wear a glove? Palm.

Which tree is a pronoun? Yew.

Which is the most melancholy tree? Blue gum.

Which tree is a tale teller? Peach.

Which tree is an insect? Locust.

Which is the dandy among trees? Spruce.

Which tree is an invalid? Pine.

Which tree is never barefooted? Sandalwood.

Which tree can best remember numbers? Date.

Which tree has passed through fire? Ash.

Which is the most ancient tree? Elder.

The Lazy Worm.

A youthful worm lay sleeping fast
Within his cozy bed,
And, as the hour grew late, at last
His mother came and said:
"Get up my dear; it's very late,
And such a lovely day;
I hear a clock just striking 8;
Get up at once, I say!"

I fear the lazy little worm
Unto his mother said,
As he began to writhe and squirm,
And wriggle out of bed:
"I dare not rise till it is late,
Or else, upon my word,
I know that it would be my fate
To meet that early bird!"

For the Sake of Old Glory

For the sake of Old Glory
things whizzed and fizzed,
They sputtered and fluttered and banged and sizzed.
For its sake-wide awake was the boy at his biz.

Wide awake" in the morning,
still eager at night-
For fireworks put even the sandmen to flight;
And when tardy sleep closed
his one open eye
He said he "wish't" all days was Fourth of July"

THE BEST FOURTH OF ALL

HARRY groaned dismally. "That's the way I feel," he explained, when his sister asked what troubled him.

"Ever since I've been a little bit of a duffer I've had a glorious time with crackers and pistols and fireworks. Now father says that there's no use buying any this year, because we can't celebrate with the lady so sick next door. I declare, I won't know what to do with myself."

"Don't let it worry you," returned Harriet, "mother will find a way to keep you busy."

Mother did find a way out of the difficulty. Next morning at breakfast she announced smilingly:

"Since you cannot have your usual boisterous celebration, children, I suppose we must substitute some other plan, for a day like the Fourth certainly has to be celebrated in some way.

"We have arranged to have your aunt and uncle and your cousins join us in making up a picnic party. We'll go far enough to have a good drive.

"I'm sure you'll enjoy your ride," she concluded, smiling mysteriously.

Indeed, they did enjoy their ride, for father that day presented them both with splendid ponies.

They had all manner of fun running races and engaging in other sport at their picnic.

Just before going to bed Harry sighed —but not dismally this time. "Don't know when I've had such a jolly time. This has been the best Fourth yet."

A Sharp Boy.

"I understand," said a youngster, looking up from his reading, "that there is only one man before whom the Czar of Russia is absolutely forced to take off his hat."

"Is that so? Who is it?"

"His hairdresser," said Bobby, suddenly becoming absorbed in his reading.

Had Heard Them Often.

Tommy—Has anybody ever spoken to you the sweetest three words in the language?

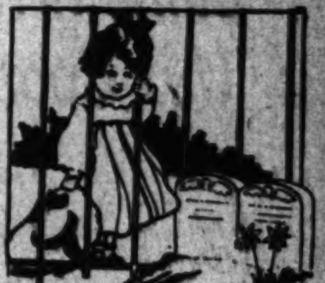
Lotta—Oh, yes; I suppose I have been asked a thousand times, 'Want some candy?'"

WAITING FOR HER GRAN'PA

THEY said gran'pa wouldn't come. But Mary knew he would. Hadn't he told her pos'tively, just a few weeks before, that he would take her to see the Fourth of July parade? Yes, gran'pa would come, he always did just as he said.

Then they told her he had been taken away in a big box and put in the cemetery over the hill, where the grass grew so prettily and the trees were nice and shady. But Mary knew that no box could keep gran'pa away.

She would go and look for him anyway. Trudging along until she came in the cemetery, she looked all around for gran'pa. Then she pressed her rosy little face against the railings and tried as hard as ever she could to see him.



"TRIED TO SEE HIM."

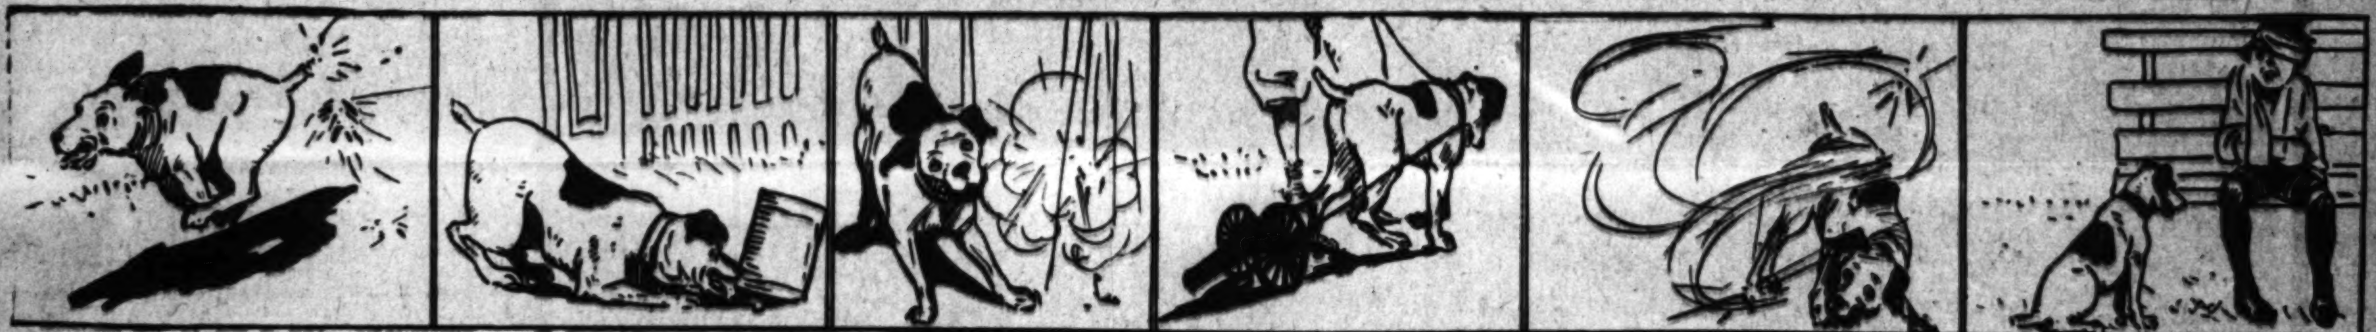
Mother didn't even call her naughty when she found her a long time afterward, still by the railings.

"I tan't fin' dranpa and I don't see his b'ack bots," she said, with tears in her eyes—and then, with a sigh, "Dess I tan't see p'rade today."

You see, Mary was very tiny and didn't quite understand.

How shall a candle be placed so that every person can see it except one, although he shall not be blindfolded nor prevented from examining every part of the room; neither shall the candle be hidden? Answer: Place the candle on the person's head.

PERHAPS YOU WOULDN'T LIKE THE FOURTH IF YOU WERE HE



I DON'T know what the folks can see
In the Fourth Day of July;
I'm just as glad as I can be
When it passes quickly by.

The morning's hardly dawned before
Crackers, tied to me behind,
Torpedoes thrown from every door,
Make me sore and almost blind.

They place a bone for you, perhaps,
Underneath a box or can;
And, though you'd never think of traps,
Soon you're blown 'most to Japan.

Of course, you have to do some work—
Cannons draw—they're heavy, too—
And it's a job you'd like to shirk;
Might go off—then what of you!

The "chasers" follow everywhere,
Chasing many fiery tails.
I'd never think fireworks'd care
Such things to try, when each dog fails.

Oh, yes! I'll say again I'm glad
When the Fourth has come and gone;
It leaves me bruised and sick and sad—
Where, I ask, is all the fun?

In spite of ev'ry ache and pain,
One thing cheers when all is o'er:
Master's hurt twice as much again—
Yet of Fourths he'd wish for more!

The SPIRIT OF THE FOURTH

"TOMORROW we'll make so much noise that the 'Pirates' won't be able to hear themselves," stoutly declared Pete Hamilton.

Captain Skinny nodded. "Just because every derned 'Bloody Robber' was broke last year, and the 'Pirates' were able to make all the noise for the town, they needn't feel so chesty about having things their own way this Fourth. We've been savin' up for the last six months, and we'll be able to get such a lot of fireworks that the 'Pirates 'll feel sick."

The "Bloody Robbers" on the great, flat stone by the creek's edge gave a rousing cheer, which was echoed by the members of the band who still disported themselves in the water.

"Guess I'll be going," said Pete; "I want to get some more firecrackers, and I hear old man Brown is nearly sold out."

After driving Ike Jones back into the water seven successive times to wash, Pete stopped throwing mud at him and went on his way.

As he was about to enter Brown's store he came across Uncle Joshua.

"Hello, Uncle Josh! How are you going to spend the Fourth?" he cried, cheerily.

"Not like you, young man, with nothin' but fireworks and noise, and never a thought of what the day means. I tell ye, the young folks ain't got the right sperit. When I was young we knew how to celebrate the Fourth." Uncle Joshua shook his cane fiercely.

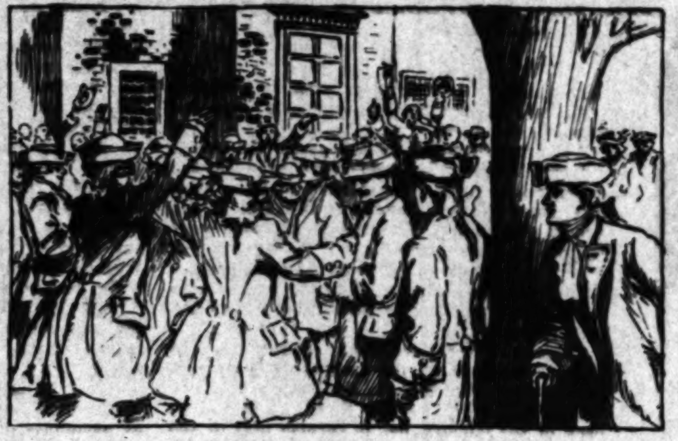
Laughing good naturedly, Pete purchased his fireworks and walked toward home.

"WHEN I WAS YOUNG."

But all the rest of the day Uncle Joshua's words rang in his ears, and as he went to sleep that night he muttered to himself, "I wonder if I have the right spirit?"

"Think you they will dare do it?" hoarsely questioned a thin, hawk-nosed man, glancing cautiously round him.

"Well, friend," calmly replied a giant Quaker, "the king has done much to anger his subjects. I fear there may be prolonged war, although I pray it be not so."



"WE'RE FREE! WE'RE FREE!"

A third broke in: "Dare! Aye, they dare anything. You know not the temper of these delegates from all the colonies who meet today."

Pete Hamilton looked around him curiously. Gathered in front of a long building, which he saw was like the picture in his history of Independence Hall, in Philadelphia, was a great throng of people, dressed in the style of the colonial period. Some were talking in tense whispers, many were silent; but all were watching the building intently, as though something were about to happen.

Suddenly the great bell in the tower above them crashed forth in a mighty peal.

A shout burst from one near the hall. Then spreading, as though by wildfire, there arose the cry:

"We're free! we're free! Liberty and independence forever!"

Men seized one another's arms, shook hands, clapped each other's backs, muskets were fired, and the shouts grew stronger, until it seemed that the dignified Quaker city had gone mad.

"Ah! 'tis a great day, my lad!" cried a man beside Pete; "one that will be boldly written in history and the story repeated hundreds of years from now. Fortunate, indeed, are we among men that we should see it!"

Great thrills chased one another up and down Pete's spine.

Tearing off his cap, he hurled it into the air, leaping after it.

"Hurrah! hurrah! hurrah!" cried he, with all his might and main.

When Pete Hamilton awoke he didn't jump out of the bed and proceed to fire off his biggest cannon cracker, as was his usual custom on the morning of the Fourth. Instead, he sat quietly up in bed for a moment, reviewing the events that had passed in his dream.

Then with a shout of "Liberty and independence forever!" he made the biggest racket of which he was capable.

Pete listened attentively to all the speeches made that afternoon on the market square, thereby bringing down upon him the wrath of Captain Skinny and the rest of the "Robbers," who considered this mere idleness.

But Pete believed that at last he had caught the right spirit of the Fourth.

A Bright Idea.

A little boy wanted to give his mother a birthday present, and he did not know what to give her, so at last he decided to give her a Bible. After he had bought it, he did not know what to put on the front page, so, after looking through some of the books in the library, he decided to put the following on: "To dear mother; with the author's compliments."

Misplaced Money.

A short time ago a gentleman in Boston sent a small boy in his neighborhood to deliver a note to a young lady who lived a few blocks away. He gave the boy a quarter to make him hurry. After a short time the messenger came back, and, handing the money, said: "Miss —— says she will be glad to see you tonight, but she didn't want the quarter."

A Jingle Game.

One of the players leaves the room, and the rest determine on a word. When he enters, he is told a noun that rhymes with the one chosen, which he must find out by their dumb movements. Say "bat" is the word selected. He is told that it rhymes with rat, and the players either try to imitate flying or hitting a ball with a bat.

AN INTELLIGENT PIG

A PIG and a dog who were passengers on the same ship used to eat their food from the same plate, and but for one thing would have had no trouble—the dog had a kennel and the pig had none. The pig disputed the ownership of the kennel, and every night there was a race for it. If the dog won, the pig had to lie on the softest plank he could find. If the pig got in first, "Toby" could not drive him out.

One rainy afternoon the pig found it rather unpleasant slipping about on deck, and made up his mind to retire early. But when he reached the kennel, he found the dog snug and warm inside. Suddenly an idea flashed upon him, and, trudging off to the place where their dinner plate was lying, he carried it to a part of the deck where the dog could see it, and began rattling the plate and munching as though he had a feast before him.

This was too much for "Toby." A good dinner, and he not there! The pig kept on until "Toby" had come round in front of him and pushed his nose into the empty plate. Then he turned, and was safe in the kennel before "Toby" knew whether there was any dinner on the plate or not!

GARDENING GAME

EACH of the players is asked in turn what was planted in his garden, and what came up.

Articles planted may be of any description, but must come up plants of some kinds whose names have some punning connection with the articles planted.

For example:

First player—I planted a calendar, and it came up dates.

Second player—I planted a ship, and it came up a dock.

Third player—I planted a watch, and it came up four o'clock.

Fourth player—I planted some steps, and they came up hops.

Fifth player—I planted an Irishman, and he came up a potato.

Helped the World Along.

If every little boy or girl
Some loving word would say,
Or just one kindly deed would do,
The world would be so gay.

No matter where you chanced to go,
You'd never see a tear;
And as for frowns, when people smile
They always disappear.

Why should not every boy and girl
Pass through life with a song?
If each one did his level best—
To help the world along—

The wrong things then would soon be right;
So try to do or say
One kindly deed, one loving word,
Beginning on this day.

Knew the Other Animal.

The class was discussing animals—how they walked, got up, etc. After she had explained the cow's method of rising to her feet, the teacher asked:

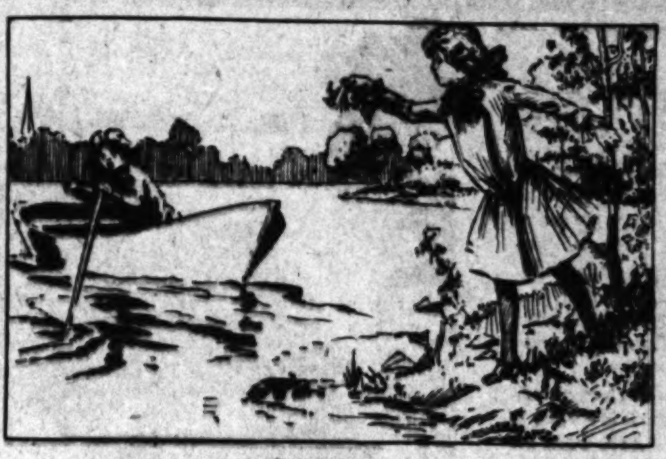
"Do you know any other animal that gets up like the cow?"

Silence reigned for a moment; then one little girl raised her hand.

"What is it?" asked the teacher.

"A calf," was the whispered reply.

ALLY, of TUMBLEDOWN COTTAGE



A FRIEND IN NEED.

"IF you are really so anxious to get away, Pet, suppose you go alone to Spencer's, and we'll be there in a few days."

Now that her father had given this permission, Emily was not slow in packing her goods for the trip, and the next day she was on the way.

The Spencers lived in a little village on the side of a mountain and they had invited the Grahams to spend a vacation with them. Mr. and Mrs. Graham had yet to make arrangements before departing, but Emily had hardly known what to do with herself since school had closed, and was glad of the consent to go at once.

Arriving at the little station, Emily was met by Mr. Spencer in a light carriage, for there was still some little distance to go. She had seen him often in the city, and so they were well acquainted with one another.

Just before they reached the home of the Spencers they passed by an old shaky-looking barn that seemed to be kept from falling only by stout poles propped against the outside.

"Who owns this wretched place?" asked Emily, with interest.

"We call him 'Peter Tumbledown,'" answered Mr. Spencer; "and that old house over there is where he and his little girl live."

The house looked as badly in need of repair as the barn. As she looked Emily saw dodge out of sight behind the side of it a little girl of about her own age, with a mass of tangled hair and a very tattered dress.

Mrs. Spencer welcomed Emily cordially, and she felt at home from the very first.

Everything was so new that Emily found much enjoyment in her walks about the place.

After a while she took longer trips from the house, and often passed by the barn of "Peter Tumbledown." Sometimes she saw the ragged little girl, but, as Emily was just a wee bit proud because she came from the city, and besides the girl was so very, very dirty-looking, she never spoke to her.

Nearby was a beautiful lake, with a tiny island right in the center of it. One day Emily ventured into a boat that lay by the shore and paddled out to the island.

Lying down to rest for a few moments she fell asleep, and it was late in the afternoon when she awoke.

You can imagine how frightened she was when she found that the boat had gone adrift and that there was no way of getting back to shore.

While she was wondering what to do, she saw approaching another boat, and in it the ragged girl of "Tumbledown Cottage."

"If you don't mind coming into my boat," said she shyly, when quite near, "I can take you to land."

"I'd be glad to," gratefully replied Emily, "and I'm much obliged to you for your trouble."

Emily soon learned that the little girl's name was Ally, that she never went to school, and that her dog, Gyp, was all she ever had to play with.

Ally really wasn't so bad once you knew her, and, too, you could not but pity her.

Emily thanked her again as she left for home, and they parted quite friendly.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham came the next day, so she had no chance to see Ally for some time. After that, however, they met often, and Emily soon found that although Ally had not been to school, there was nothing in the country that she and Gyp did not know.

Mr. Graham believes that Emily learned more from Ally about growing things than she ever learned in school.

Emily thinks so, too, and she has learned, besides, that though a little girl may be ragged, she may still be worth while having for a friend.

CUNNING SAYINGS

LITTLE IRENE, who had just moved to the country from the city of New York, was sitting on the porch with her brother Edgar. They had never seen lightning bugs before, so they were surprised when they saw several bugs flying and lighting in the air.

"They are bugs," cried Edgar.

"No, they're not," declared Irene; they're matches in the air!"

Little Tommy is very talkative, and on going out to tea with his father and mother the other night he was told that he mustn't speak until somebody asked him a question. After he had sat silent for half an hour, he could not stand it any longer, and he said, "I say, papa, when are they going to begin asking me questions?"

Little Henry was dining out, and was on his very best behavior. "Will you have light meat or dark?" asked his hostess, preparing to help him to chicken. "I'd like a drumstick, thank you; but I don't care at all whether it is white meat or dark," said he politely.

"Granny," said little Johnnie, as he counted a lot of nuts somebody had given him, "can you eat nuts?"

"No, dear," said the old lady, "I haven't got any teeth."

"Well, then," said Johnnie, emptying his nuts into granny's lap, "I'll give you these to mind till I come back."

Sadie was 11 and Alice was 7. At luncheon Sadie said:

"I wonder what part of an animal a chop is. Is it a leg?"

"Of course not," replied Alice; "it's the jawbone. Haven't you ever heard of animals licking their chops?"

Little Ian was trying to dress himself after his bath. He got his shirt on front side behind. Looking ruefully down at himself, he said:

"Guess I'd better turn myself around so my shirt will button in front."

"Why do they put the nation's flag on top of the schoolhouse?" asked the teacher, who wanted to instill a patriotic lesson.

"Please, ma'am," answered the head boy, "it's because the pole is there."

Two little girls walking in a field feared the cow would attack them.

"Let's go right on, and act as if we weren't afraid of her at all," said one.

"But," remonstrated the other, "wouldn't that be deceiving the cow?"

Filling the Drug Store from American Fields

Medicinal Plants of the World Now Being Grown in this Country.

IMPORTING health—or what was intended to preserve health—from other countries just about spoiled a $25,000,000 note for Uncle Sam last year.

The value of chemicals, drugs, dyes and medicines which he bought in a twelvemonth was $74,452,664, and, while much of this material was used for industrial purposes, it is probable that one-third was used in the interest of health.

And this immense importation while we possess the climate, the land—everything, apparently, but the determination—to grow practically any drug or medicinal plant in use!

This isn't a new thought—it occurred to the Department of Agriculture of the United States a few years ago, and with it came the logical question: Why can't we be doctor to our own people in every sense of the term?

Gathering Irish Sea Moss on Massachusetts Coast.

Camphor Trees at Quincy, Fla.

Belladonna at Washington, D.C.

Squeezing Poppy Juice in South Carolina.

Growing the Poppy in Vermont.

So the cultivation of drug plants has been given a good boost in various parts of the United States. Imports are growing less. Such things as opium, cascara, camphor, belladonna—these and many other drugs which we have become used to considering entirely foreign—are being raised right at home in constantly growing quantities.

And now we are informed that a large proportion of those drugs which are bought at fancy figures from abroad have been all along growing in this country—but they have been considered weeds!

THAT in the much-despised weeds of the field there is a source of profit far and away exceeding the damage they may do to other plants is one of the developments of the government's drug investigation.

"If the products concerned are not to entirely disappear from the materia medica," said Dr. Rodney H. True, physiologist in charge of this branch of the Department of Agriculture work, not long ago, "it is necessary now to cultivate, to domesticate many wild plants which are in danger of extermination from several sources."

As a result of apathy, until recently, in the United States concerning this phase of plant industry, Dr. True found at the beginning of his work that many of the most valuable of native drug plants had been almost exterminated by drug collectors; certain noxious weeds, instead of being profitably utilized, had remained to impoverish the soil, and millions of dollars were being needlessly sent abroad every year.

But now all this is changed. Not yet free from the foreign drug dealers' yoke, we have at least proved that we can raise our own medicines, and the next few years are expected to make us truly our own doctors.

As a first step to this work the government started the experimental cultivation of drug plants from foreign lands.

Success has attended these efforts to a degree altogether unforeseen even by the most optimistic of the experts who have been engaged in the work.

Plants imported from Europe and the Orient—from China and Japan—were used in the experimental work. Experiment stations were established at Washington, at Ebenezer, S. C., and at Burlington, Vt., and, as occasion warranted, at other places.

In several cases the behavior of important drug-producing plants of Europe and the Orient under conditions in the United States has been determined.

Great strides have been made with the poppy. In making this test, the poppy from China was used—not to facilitate the "hitting of the pipe" by Hip Sing and Hop Loy, back of the laundry, but to furnish part of the vast amount of opium products which America needs for medicinal purposes each year.

It was found that opium can be made to thrive in the most widely separated parts of the United States. In so cold a climate as Vermont and in the warm sectiors of the South it has shown ability to maintain a vigorous existence.

And this American poppy has been found to contain the product from which morphine, codeine and other medicinal alkaloids are extracted.

Indeed, the experiments have gone much further than this, for one of the attaches of the Bureau of Plant Industry, W. O. Richtmann, has experimented extensively with a process for separating the commercial product from the plant, a task which, under the old system, was accomplished with a common sausage grinder.

In a single year, recently, the importations of crude opium and other products of the poppy were over $2,600,000. Wouldn't this be worth saving?

South California has been found to have about the most favorable conditions for poppy culture in the United States, excepting that labor is not cheap. Some parts of Texas, it is thought, might more properly meet the requirements.

In Texas—in the town of Pierce—the government has lately begun to experiment with camphor, which has for a number of years been successfully raised in Florida.

Not alone for medicinal purposes is the growing of camphor expected to prove of use; as a wind-break about plantations rows of camphor trees may prove a godsend to many residents of the Southwest.

Derived, until recently, almost entirely from Japan, the world's supply of camphor is now being somewhat augmented from American soil, although the industry has not yet been placed on a commercial basis.

Since the camphor importations amount to about $1,000,000 a year, every effort is being made to get American farmers interested in the industry.

Importing camphor trees and distributing them through various parts of the South, the government has practically demonstrated that various sections of that territory are suited for its growth.

The readiness with which the camphor tree is propagated from seed, and its rapid growth, together with the large yield of gum and oil—in Florida the yield has been 1½ per cent. pure camphor—make the economic possibilities in camphor growing look very bright.

Although the bulk of licorice used for medicine in the United States—this item alone amounts to about $2,000,000 annually—comes from the countries bordering on the Mediterranean Sea, the Bureau of Plant Industry has found the plant to be hardy, capable of growing, almost in a wild state, as far north as Pennsylvania. This is one of the medicinal plants which will certainly be raised in the United States for home use before long.

Belladonna and digitalis are among the important minor crude drug importations which might just as well be produced in America as elsewhere; in fact, the cultivation of belladonna on a commercial scale has been successfully taken up during the last several years by an American firm.

It has been found easy to raise foxglove—the plant from which digitalis is secured—at Washington and in South Carolina.

Peppers are being readily raised in America; but, on account of the restricted demand, this industry is not likely to reach an important stage.

Another plant, used as medicine and food, which America has been importing, while it could just as well be gathered on American shores, is Irish moss.

The cultivation of the cascara sagrada tree has been carried on with great success at Washington and at Ebenezer, S. C. Not only is the bark in great demand in America, but in foreign lands; and, since a foreign shortage in the near future seems inevitable, American farmers have been advised to take up its culture.

Among the American native weeds, generally neglected, which are held to be valuable as medicines, are golden seal, burdock, lobelia (a poisonous weed), pokeweed and boneset. But there are many others.

Especially gratifying have been the results with regard to the golden seal root. By no means new is this remedy. The Indians used it not only to stain their faces and dye their clothing—they found the root a valuable medicine. Captain Lewis learned, when he was making his expedition with Clark, in 1804, across the West, that golden seal was a great remedy for sore eyes.

Yet it remains for the government to teach the people of the present day the desirability of cultivating it.

It is native from southern New York to Minnesota and western Ontario south to Georgia and Missouri, ascending to an altitude of 2500 feet in Virginia. Prior to 1900 there had been no record of any one who had attempted the cultivation of golden seal for the market.

The government started its cultivation on a small scale at Washington, and as a result it is now announced that it is susceptible of being profitably propagated.

As illustrating the profit that there would be in more general cultivation of golden seal, it may be cited that in ten years from 1894 the price has increased from 23 cents to $1.25 a pound, and has continued to climb.

Estimates by reliable dealers are that the annual consumption, or, rather, demand, is about 300,000 pounds. But, of course, if a large number of people should successfully engage in growing golden seal the price would soon go down.

Oversupply, indeed, seems to be the only thing to be feared, once America seriously determines to become her own doctor and druggist.

AUTOS SPEED ON OVAL AT LAKESIDE RACES.

Motor Cars Fly Over Long Course and Events Are Hotly Contested. Crowd Watches Close Finish of Flying Racers—Interest Flags Not.

LAKESIDE, June 29.—Interest centered in the automobile races on the Lakeside track yesterday. The heat did not interfere with the racers, and served only to add to the enthusiasm of the crowds along the track side. Each event was closely contested, and good time was made in several of the races.

The novelty race, the last event, proved one of the most exciting of the day. As the men raced from the starting line, 100 yards to their waiting machines, the crowd arose to its feet and cheered the flying contestants. As the two autos got away, and the element of uncertainty increased, the spectators went wild.

The thirty-mile race was closely contested. For sixteen miles a Peerless machine took the lead, made excellent time, and then dropped out. A Haynes machine, which had closely followed the Peerless, then took the lead, but was overhauled by the Elmore, which won on a small margin.

In the thirty-mile race for stock cars the following are entered: Haynes, Superior Auto Company; Peerless, J. W. McAllister; Elmore, A. J. Smith, and Tourist, W. M. Varney. Two other cars entered, but were scratched.

At the start the Peerless took the lead and began making the circuit in 1:12. The Haynes fell into second place, with the Elmore third. At the end of the sixteenth mile the Peerless blew out a pet cock. It had at this time a lead of 46 seconds on the Haynes. The Peerless pulled out of the race.

The Elmore, making an extremely even run, began to overhaul the Haynes, which held the lead until the twenty-sixth mile. At that point the Elmore passed the Haynes in the back stretch and won by a margin of 23 seconds. The time for the thirty miles was 39:47 3-5. Smith drove a steady and heady race, making his circuits in very even time. The two-cylinder Tourist had completed twenty-four miles when the winner passed the wire. In the six-mile race for touring cars costing under $1500, there started the following: Tourist, Kessler Machine Company; Ford, Standard Motor Car Company; Buick, Kessler Machine Company. The Tourist took the lead and held it easily to the end, winning in 7:44 flat. The Buick was second, a minute and a half behind the winner.

There were two entries in the eight-mile Cupid race, Ralph Hamlin's Lozier and J. W. McAllister's Peerless. Hamlin's lady passengers got aboard with greater speed, but the Peerless ran away from him on the stretches and won. The time, 11:32, was very good, as the car made three full stops in the eight miles.

Following the Cupid race, a special four-mile match race was run between C. E. Tranturn's American roadster and the press car of the run, a Simplex runabout, driven by Dan Kuhl. Kuhl took the lead and loafed around, winning easily in 5:32 2-5.

R. M. Bauzier's Tourist, Merwin's Moline and the Standard Motor Car Company's six-cylinder Ford started in the four-mile race for cars costing from $1501 to $3000. The Ford won easily in the good time of 4:47 from a standing start. The Moline was second. The last event was a novelty race between A. J. Smith in an Elmore and Dickey in McAllister's Peerless. The drivers left their cars 100 yards from the tape, ran to them, cranked them, ran two miles, stopped them 100 yards from the tape, and then raced to the finish.

Smith won the initial sprint, but his nickname of self-starting was honored in the breach rather than the observance. Dickey got his engine started and got away much in advance of Smith. Coming up to the tape he left his engine running, and after running fifty yards, had to return and stop it. Even then he had enough lead over Smith to win. The time was 3:49. There will be five races tomorrow, the first of which is the Lakeside Inn Derby. A. B. Daniels will run his six-cylinder Stevens-Duryea, defending the cup which he won at the previous meet. A. B. Jeffries created some excitement this afternoon by driving his Cadillac up the steps of the hotel, into the lobby, turning around and driving out again.

AUTO WINNERS.

Thirty miles: Elmore won, Haynes second, Peerless failed to finish; time 39:47 3-5.

Six miles, touring cars: Tourist won, Buick second; time, 7:44 flat.

Eight-mile cupid race: J. W. McAllister, Peerless, won; Ralph Hamlin, Lozier, second; time, 11:32.

Special four-mile race: Dan Kuhl, Simplex, won; C. E. Tranturns' American roadster, second; time, 5:32 2-5.

Four miles: Ford won, and Merwin's Moline second; R. M. Bauzier's Tourist, third; time, 4:47.

Novelty race: Dickey, Peerless, won; A. J. Smith, Elmore, second; time, 3:49.

TEST DOUBTFUL. JUDGING IS POSTPONED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LAKESIDE, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Not until tomorrow will the official results of the endurance run and economy test be known. It was hoped that the observers' cards might be run through today, but the confusion over the loss of gasoline at Elsinore has retarded the work of the judges so that they cannot announce any results today.

The unofficial figures given last night showing that twenty-two of the sixty-one starters completed the 185-mile trip without penalty, probably will stand as official when the results are announced. The economy contest is close in most divisions.

William R. Ruess brought through his Pope-Hartford with 822 pounds upon less than nine gallons, making over twenty-one miles to the gallon. There is little doubt but that he will win in his class.

P. A. Benton in a Great Smith, and E. J. Bennett, in a Wayne, also did well in this class in the economy line. In the class for touring cars, costing $1500 and under, the economy winner looks to be J. W. Wilcox, in a Maxwell, who had five people up, and used just over nine gallons of gasoline for the 185 miles.

In the small runabout class, Lester Pattee, in a Cadillac, will probably get the cup. A Ford is his only dangerous competitor. In the big-car class there is little to pick between C. S. Anthony, in a Marmon; Ralph Hamlin, in a Lozier, and the Moon car, of A. W. McCreedy, Jr.

The hot weather still continues, but at noon today it began to moderate. Before the breeze sprang up it was 104 deg. in the shade. The general opinion is that barring the fearful heat, the run is the most successful held on the Coast.

MAY SUTTON WINS AGAIN.

LONDON, June 29.—In the all-England lawn-tennis championship games, yesterday, Norman Brooks, Australian, beat Karl H. Behr, American, by 3 to 2, after the most exciting match of the present championship. The scores were 6-4, 6-2, 2-6, 3-6, 6-1.

Miss Sutton of California beat Miss Lowther, 6-4, 6-3.

ANTICIPATING HENLEY RACES.

ENGLISH OARSMEN SPECULATE OVER CREW'S CHANCES.

Automobiles to Play Prominent Part in Entertainment of Guards at Classic English Regatta—Leander Eight Considered Representative of English Crews.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Britishers hope that if summer is coming at all this year, it will arrive not later than Tuesday, for then the Henley regatta is to begin. Owing to the record number of entries, seventy-four, compared with last year's record number, sixty-nine, it will be a four days' affair. Many who remember the brilliant "street" of house boats a few years ago, will be sorry to learn that only fifteen house boats have been allotted positions this year. Bad weather is only in a small degree responsible for this shrinkage. Every one at Henley is agreed that the automobile has completely altered Riverside life, and all the hotels have wisely prepared for an invasion of cars by turning their yards into garages.

Chief interest, of course, settles in the grand challenge cup race, for which there are six entries only, compared with ten last year.

On this, Capt. Beddington, who is himself to have a try for the diamond sculls, writes to the Times as follows: "The Leander crew, which is going to try to win back for England from the Belgians the grand challenge cup, is a magnificent crew. Its seating and combination are perfect, and its weights carefully and properly adjusted. In every respect this eight appears to be superior to that which represented Cambridge against Oxford and Harvard. It is a pleasure to watch them work."

This Leander crew can fairly be considered a representative one. A good crew has been made into a first-class one. They move as one man. The exaggeratedly long English stroke is pulled right through every time by these powerful oarsmen. Their boat travels a tremendous distance between strokes. Not the slightest roll is perceptible. The Belgians move in a totally different style, with short stroke, wide blades, short oars and long slides. They finish the stroke with their bodies perpendicular. Everything, however, is done in unison. They resemble a piece of machinery, and a very good piece, too. Every one is confident that Leander will defeat the Belgians.

NEW YORK GETS THE A.A.W. MEET.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, June 29.—Barlow S. Weeks, chairman of the championship committee of the Amateur Athletic Union, has announced that the all-round championship of the United States will be held in New York City, July 4, instead of at the Jamestown Exposition.

The entry list includes Martin J. Sheridan and Richard Cotton of the Irish-American Athletic Club; Dennis Murray of Dublin, one of Ireland's greatest athletes, and John J. Dalton of the Christian Brothers' College of St. Louis, Mo.

GALA CROWDS AT AUTO RACES.

Enthusiasts in Motor Cars Enjoy Events.

Keen Rivalry of the Racers Adds Interest.

Many Angelenos Among Those at Track.

Crowds watched the closely contested events on the Lakeside track yesterday. Enthusiastic women, in the tonneaus of a hundred cars, waited at the track side a half-hour before the start of the first race. Though the day was warm, a light breeze, which swept across the two-mile course, contributed to the comfort of the spectators.

The din of the chug-chugging cars, as they manoeuvered for place at the starting line, was interspersed with the shrill staccato of the fair rooters, who encouraged their partisans scoring on the big track.

For nearly a hundred yards along the course opposite the grand stand the autos were lined in procession, making a pretty picture. Many well-known Los Angeles men, with their families, filled the cars. Several of these had brought streamers of gay bunting with which their cars were decorated. Pennants floating in the breeze added to the general display.

Before the breeze sprang up, the thermometer registered 104 in the shade. The weather conditions were exceptional, and, despite the heat, a large crowd from San Diego and other points attended the races. A special train carried the crowd from San Diego. The fearful heat began to moderate during the afternoon.

Most enthusiastic was the throng as the racers swung into line for the first event. An excellent opportunity to view the entire course is afforded by the topography of the long track. Many had field glasses trained on the racers during the speed struggle. This greatly added to the interest of the race.

Good-natured rivalry between the racers kept the crowd in fine spirits. There was not a dull moment during the afternoon, as the full list of entries insured the interest of the crowd until the last race of the day.

Though they had traveled far to witness the classy events, the spectators did not become wearied. Until the close of the day's programme, the interest was not allowed to flag, and rivalry, even for the last heat of the final event, was keen.

WATCHING THE RACES.

Los Angeles autoists who thronged the Lakeside course, yesterday, watching the exciting finishes in the closely contested events. Many well-known automobilists and their families enjoyed the races seated in their touring cars which were drawn up in order near the finish line. Those in group took part in the economy contest and endurance run.

EASTERN ROADS ARE POOR.

Automobile Man Tries Them With Machine, Comes Home to Enjoy Our Finer Highways.

Leon T. Shettler, one of the first Los Angeles men to engage in the automobile business, has just returned from a twenty days' sojourn in eastern cities, and he brings back with him a tale as to the condition of eastern roads that may well make the Los Angeles county resident pat himself on the back and decide that things here are not so bad, after all.

"I didn't strike a really first-class piece of road all the time I was gone," said Mr. Shettler, yesterday. "A friend took me in an auto over the main pike from Salt Lake to Ogden, and, say, it was something fierce. Don't you undertake to travel it. Then I took the trip by auto from Lansing to Detroit, Mich., and we actually bumped along on the old logs of the corduroy roads, or else went chug down into the sand. I tried the road from Detroit to Toledo, and that was still worse; and even in the suburbs of Chicago the roads are worse than anything we find here. I've come back with the belief that we're not so bad off, after all; and a whole lot could be learned about road-making by the easterners if they would visit Southern California."

PICKED TO WIN.

Probable winners in Lakeside endurance run and economy contest, are:

Class 1—Touring cars, costing $3001 and over: Ralph Hamlin, Lozier; A. W. McCreedy, Moon; C. S. Anthony, Marmon.

Class 2—Touring cars costing from $1501 to $3000: William R. Reuss, Pope-Hartford; F. A. Renton, Great Smith; E. Jr. Bennett, Wayne.

Class 3.—Runabouts costing $1500 and under: Lester Pattee, Cadillac.

Class 4—Touring cars costing $1500 and under: J. W. Wilcox, Maxwell.

WOULD BUILD LONG AUTO RUN.

BOULEVARD FROM ANGEL CITY TO SAN DIEGO.

Seventy-five Miles of Proposed Route Will Traverse Ocean Front Along Finest Scenic Roadway in Southern California—Motorists Are Taking Keen Interest in Proposition.

There is promise of a boulevard seventy-five miles in length, being built along the ocean front from a point ten miles north of Oceanside through San Juan Capistrano and Delmar to San Diego. This boulevard, if completed, would rival the splendid beach drive at Pismo, and would be one of the longest beach boulevards on the Pacific Coast. The Automobile Club of San Diego has plans for a boulevard from Delmar to Oceanside. The Orange county supervisors have a splendid road completed to the county line at San Mateo Creek.

The proposed boulevard would extend along the Ocean Front for its entire distance. With the section of the road soon to be completed from Delmar the boulevard could be extended to Capistrano to within a few feet of the ocean's sands. The supervisors of Riverside, Orange and San Diego counties have been approached on the question of right of way and the route for the boulevard is practically assured.

Automobilists are taking a keen interest in the plans for the long driveway. The beach boulevard would traverse a stretch of country which is comparatively level. Whereas, the back roads, over which travel is now possible, are hilly and rough, the boulevard would afford excellent facilities for smooth travel and would provide a delightful scenic run.

Richard O'Neill, who owns the Santa Margarita, the Los Flores, and the Trabuco ranches, has promised to grant a right of way through his great principality. Heretofore, O'Neill has frowned upon any attempt to enter his wide domain. He has always declared against trolley cars, and steam railways. His heart has opened to the boulevard plan and the proposed beach route. When approached on the subject recently, O'eill is reported to have said:

"You cannot climb a hill until you have come to the foot of it. When you get the road completed to Oceanside then it will be time enough to talk about going through this ranch." O'Neill is the largest tax payer in Orange county. Those who know him declare his statement is tantamount to a promise to allow a right of way through his domain.

From San Diego to the limits of Delmar on the beach a good road has already been built. The proposed Delmar to Oceanside boulevard already contracted for, and for which an appropriation of $15,000 has been made by the Supervisors of San Diego county, for bridges and culverts, will be completed, it is said, by the middle of August.

The proposed boulevard along the ocean front would be an added inducement to automobilists to make the run to San Diego. At present the interior roads of the county deter many from undertaking the run southward. With a level drive from along the entire water front of San Diego county an excellent speedway would be provided from Los Angeles to San Diego.

Many Cars Entered.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Estimates vary as to the probable number of entries in the fourth annual tour of the American Automobile Association. Chairman Frank B. Hower of the touring board of the American Automobile Association is conservative. He places the figure at one hundred cars, which would mean from four to five hundred people. Secretary D. H. Lewis may be in closer touch with matters in general, having the clerical work well in hand. Secretary Lewis places the figure at 125 cars. It is believed that 150 cars will be in line with from 600 to 750 people.

LITTLE SPARKS FROM MOTORDOM.

The Federal Bureau of Public Roads is pushing its inquiry into dust-laying devices.

Toledo, O., has cut the speed limit down to ten miles an hour and has organized a corps of motorcycle policemen to see that the ordinance is obeyed.

A western manufacturer has just turned out the first drop-frame motorcycle for feminine use that has been built in the United States. They are largely used in France.

A five-mile race for motor cars driven by women is a feature of a programme of events planned by the Automobile Club of Santa Rosa, Cal., for July 3 and 4. A handsome trophy is to be awarded.

Under an amendment to the bylaws, a club with one hundred or more members which joins the American Automobile Association, may organize as a State association. This the Colorado Automobile Club has done, it being the only club in the State.

A clever new fad, and one that serves a purpose, is being adopted by residents in the suburbs of New York. It consists of having the best automobile route from the city to their home printed on the reverse side of their personal visiting cards. This is a convenience to the friends who own cars and whom the suburban dweller really wishes to call.

A simple way for a car owner to test the quality of different grades of engine oils, is to heat a pane of glass and, holding it at an angle, see how far a few drops of the different oils will trickle along it before evaporating. Other things equal, the oil that runs farthest without vanishing will be best for the engine.

The Motor Club of Harrisburg, which recently ran a two days' endurance contest over some of Pennsylvania's roads, has planned to conduct a hill climbing test on July 4. The grade to be used has not been definitely settled upon, but it is likely that Peter's Mountain, which is ten miles from Harrisburg, will be selected.

Automobiles will soon be supplanting sledges and dogs in the far North, judging by a news item from Alberta, Canada, stating that nine motor cars, with more ordered, are now surprising the natives on that far Canadian frontier. According to a Medicine Hat journal, eight Maxwells are in commission in that town of 4000 population, or one for every five hundred inhabitants.

To keep the children from becoming lost or mixed up the New York Motor Club and Long Island Automobile Club tied colored ribbons and tags to the arms of their nearly 2000 little guests on the Orphans' Day run to Coney Island, and the scheme worked like a charm.

So pleased was Gen. Kuroki with his rides in American automobiles in several cities which he visited during his recent tour that he announced his intention of exporting several to use in the Japanese army maneuvers in the fall.

Far from satisfied with the present State laws regulating automobiles, Maryland motorists already are planning a campaign to induce the Legislature, which meets next January, to raise the speed limit on open roads from twelve to twenty miles an hour; to repeal the statute which allows local authorities to pass ordinances which conflict with the State laws, and to make other desirable changes.

Route is Changed.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Some alterations in the routing of the Glidden tour had to be made. From Canton to Pittsburgh has been resurveyed and a route of slightly less than one hundred miles via Beaver Falls has been named, saving the rough traveling and terrible hills encountered by the Pathfinders when they went over the route in May in the greater six-cylindered Arrow. Another route from Baltimore to Philadelphia has also been arranged to avoid the crossing of the river at Havre de Grace by railroad ferry. The tourists will travel 172 miles by the new route, but will follow new toll roads via York and Lancaster and will have no complaint to make over the increase of the distance.

WILL SET HOT PACE IN GRAND PRIX RACE.

WHILE entrants for the Grand Prix are being groomed in preparation for the great international race interest centers in the approaching contest. The entrance of Walter Christie, the contestant who will represent America, has given a special flavor to news from France concerning the Dieppe course speed trial. Christie's car bears his own name, and there is reason to believe the racer, who entered at the eleventh hour, will be heard from at the finish. Christie will start in the twelfth position. Just behind him will be the daredevil Jenatzy in a big Mercedes car.

Though a formal declaration was made by several large Italian factories that their cars would not enter the race, at least three cars built by the factories which objected to the Grand Prix terms will start. Emile Lamberjack, at his own expense, has had completed three cars, a Marchand, an Aquila Italiana, and a Fiat. The trio were entered under the double entrance fee clause, Lamberjack paying $6000 for the privilege of racing the cars. Such entries add considerable interest to the race and have caused general satisfaction.

Favored of fortune, Lancia, the last winner, will start first in his Fiat. The wheel of fortune has indeed favored the Italian, who is thus given a chance to rush round the Dieppe circuit at 6 o'clock on the morning of July 1 with no one to hinder his wild flight. Number 1 is always looked upon as the position of honor and there is no doubt but that Lancia will take full advantage to be derived from a clear course on the first round. Starting one minute after Lancia, on a Corre' d'Hespel, [illegible] second place. With D'Hespel [illegible] Wagner, the Vanderbilt champion, will send his Darracq out on the course in close pursuit of the flying pair ahead. Cars will start at intervals of one again until the time limit for the last car has expired.

King Edward may visit the Dieppe course as the guest of President Fallieres, who is taking a keen interest in the contest. Great crowds are expected, and precautions have been taken for handling the throng which will crowd about the starting line.

France has twenty-four machines in the Grand Prix, consisting of three Bayard-Clement, three Darracq, three Motobloc, one Corre, three Panhard-Levessor, three Renault-Freres, three Lorraine-Dietrich, one Porthos, three Brasier, one Gobron. Germany has three Mercedes; Italy five cars, a Marchand, an Aquila Italiana and three Fiat cars; Belgium enters three Germain; England, two Weigel; American, one Christie.

Following is the list of entries in the order of starting:

1.	Fiat, Lancia	F	1
2.	Corre, d'Hespel	C	1
3.	Darracq, Wagner	D	1
4.	Dietrich, Duray	L	1
5.	Porthos, Stricker	P	1
6.	Dufaux-Marchand, F. Dufaux	DM	1
7.	Bayard-Clement, Albert Clement	BC	1
8.	Motobloc	MB	1
9.	Renault, Sisz	R	1
10.	Germain, Perpere	GE	1
11.	Panhard, Le Blon	PL	1
12.	Christie, Walter Christie	WC	1
13.	Mercedes, Jenatzy	M	1
14.	Weigel, Lee Guinness	W	1
15.	Gobron	GB	1
16.	Aquila Italiana, Richat	A	1
17.	Brasier, Barillier	B	1
18.	Fiat, Nazzaro	F	2
19.	Darracq, Hanriot	D	2
20.	Dietrich, Rougier	L	2
21.	Bayard-Clement, Garcet	BC	2
22.	Motobloc	MB	2
23.	Renault, Edmond	R	2
24.	Germain, Degrais	GE	2
25.	Panhard, Heath	PL	2
26.	Mercedes, Werner	M	2
27.	Weigel, Weigel	W	2
28.	Brasier, Baras	B	2
29.	Fiat, Wellschott	F	3
30.	Darracq, Demogeot	D	3
31.	Dietrich, Gabriel	L	3
32.	Bayard-Clement, Gauderman	BC	3
33.	Motobloc	MB	3
34.	Renault, Riches	R	3
35.	Germain, Roth Brault	GE	3
36.	Panhard, Dutemple	PL	3
37.	Mercedes, Willy Poege	M	3
38.	Brasier, Baiblot	B	3

A new system of numbering has been adopted. Each car is given a team letter and numbered one, two or three, according to the position occupied on the starting line. Thus, the Fiat team letter is F, and Lancia, the first starter, takes F 1. Wagner, in his Darracq, will carry D 1, Hanriot, also in a Darracq, D 2, and Demogeot, in the third Darracq in the race, D 3. Christie's team letter will be W C 1. Baiblot, in a Brazier, with letter B 3, will close the procession.

Though the entries for the Grand Prix number thirty-eight, there are nine smaller racers, seven French and two Italian, engaged in the race for the sporting commission cup. This will make a total of forty-seven machines which will fly around the Dieppe course. Three firms have entered for the tire competition run in connection with the race, and other firms have engaged stands on the course. All taking part in the race will be painted yellow.

Machines will be drawn up in Indian file ready for the start on the loop and not on the main course. By this means the main track will be kept clear. Official numbers will be painted on each machine. The night before the race each auto will be given an allowance of gasoline, the tank being filled and the surplus being put [illegible] and sealed. Each racer will be placed in a separate box and guarded all night by a commissaire. There will be a separate tire and gasoline station for each contestant, and they will be hung on the outside of the barricade separating the stations from the course. Drivers will slow down, change tires and throw the old ones over the barrier.

Special effort is being made by the Automobile Club of France to make the run safe for all. The difficult turn at La Fourche will have an escape road. Almost the entire fifty miles of the circuit will be rebuilt, and the whole course will be tarred or treated with tar. Trees bordering the road will be cut down, and the grade crossings near Londinieres will be abolished by filling the openings between the rails with cement. Trains will not be run on the day of the race. At certain points along the course the road will be widened to twenty-one feet. Every by-road will be barricaded, and every village will have a stout fence along the main street. Overhead bridges will allow communication from one side of the village street to the other, but will not be permitted for use as vantage points during the race. Around the entire circuit of the course will be stationed about 4000 troops, with the same number in reserve. A few hours before the start the road will be closed, and will not be opened

…of racing monsters that are prominent contestants for the Grand Prix. America is represented by one car, the front-drive machine of Walter Christie, who will probably pilot it himself; England has two machines in the race, the two eight-cylinder Weigel cars, probably the most powerful ever built for a road race, while France has two newly designed cars, although they are the product of old and established houses—the Renault and Panhard.

Has Many Autos.

While Winthrop E. Scarritt, former president of the Automobile Club of America, has had fifteen automobiles during his career as a driver, it is safe to say that the largest stable of motor cars in the country is being maintained by Col. John Jacob Astor, who has twenty automobiles, worth not less than $100,000, and which it is claimed cost him something like $15,000 to maintain, including the expense of his chauffeurs, fuel and storage. Jefferson Seligman of New York, former treasurer of the Automobile Club, has had fifteen cars, while C. K. G. Billings maintains a stable numbering twelve gasoline-fed machines and one electric runabout.

Another Hill Climb.

NEW YORK, June 29.—That the great hill climb to be held on the Schooley's Mountain Hill near Hackettstown, N. J., on July 4, under the management of W. J. Morgan, will be a success, is beyond question for the contests are all for fully-equipped touring cars and touring runabouts. The hill is over 1½ miles long, and has a grade of from 10 to 20 per cent., with some interesting turns, including one genuine hairpin turn. The hill has been named "New Jersey's Terror," and is so pronounced by those who have tried it. The demand for entry blanks and information is so general as to insure an almost record-breaking entry list. The roads to and from the hill are New Jersey's best, passing through Morristown, and the motorists will gather in great numbers on the holiday to witness the great climb.

MOTORCYCLES ON LONG RUN.

Endurance Test to Bay City and Back Again.

Score and Two Gasoline Bikes Leave Angel City.

Will Give Gold Medals to Perfect Score Makers.

This morning at 5 o'clock the Los Angeles Motorcycle Club will start its 1000-mile endurance run from the Courthouse in this city to San Francisco and return. This is the longest motorcycle run ever undertaken, and will probably traverse a greater distance than any automobile event of the kind.

Today's run will be to Santa Barbara, and the twenty-two contestants will be escorted to the Channel City by members of the local club. Others will accompany the riders as far as Calabasas.

The contestants will pair on, so that each man will have a partner to help him in case of break-down. President W. G. Collins, on his big French machine, will be the captain, and will start the others off each day after leaving Los Angeles. The lieutenants of the four squads are J. H. Shafer, O. D. Stanton, Harry E. Canfield and C. F. Dunham.

Several who had intended to take part in the big run, which will last about two weeks, were unable to get away and at the final meeting of the club committee and the contestants Friday evening, the number of actual starters was cut down.

The starters with their machines, horse power and weight, are as follows: Gus Fink, Wagner, 3, V-belt, 170; Albert Racker, Wagner, 3, V-belt, 135; C. M. Frink, 3 V-belt, 155; L. A. Hoskins, California, 2, flat belt, 140; W. G. Collins, Peugiot, 5, V-belt, 145; O. D. Stanton, Navajo, 2 1-4, chain, 165; P. T. Lehman, Light, 2 1-4, chain, 140; E. C. Kehl, Racycle, 2 1-4, chain, 130; C. W. Risden, Indian, 4, chain-roller, 155; F. Benkert, Indian, 2 1-4, chain-roller, 185; C. E. Johnson, Indian, 2 1-4, chain-roller, 140; H. White, Indian, 2 1-4, chain, 160; V. Herbelin, Indian, 2 1-4, chain, 129; E. Carver, Indian, 2 1-4, chain, 120; G. J. Swinnerton, Indian, 2 1-4, chain, 140; C. F. Dunham, Indian, 1 3-4, chain, 145; B. P. Beattie, Indian, 1 3-4, chain, 140; H. E. Canfield, Indian, 1 3-4, chain, 160; J. F. Cooper, Reading, 2 1-4, chain, 160; J. H. Shafer, Reading, 2 1-4, chain, 158; A. Avise, Reading, 2 1-4, chain, 140; A. T. Werner, Reading, 2 1-4, chain, 125.

There are but two machines with double cylinders, one an American, the other the best of the French makes. Collins rides the Peugiot, rated 5 horse power, and Risden the twin-cylinder Indian of 4 horse power. The rivalry between these machines and their riders is keen. Collins and Risden have often met in track and beach racing and honors up to now are about even.

The itinerary is as follows: First day, leave Los Angeles Courthouse, 5 minutes apart, first off at 5 a.m. Dinner stop at Ventura. Evening stop at Wodds-Redding garage, Santa Barbara.

Second day, leave from Santa Barbara county Courthouse from 6 a.m. to 7 o'clock. Dinner stop at Alamo Pintado Inn near Santa Ynez mission. Night stop at San Luis Obispo, or possibly Pismo Beach. Third day, leave from 6 a.m. to 7 o'clock from San Luis Obispo Courthouse. Noon stop at King City. Night stop Salinas.

Fourth day, leave Salinas Courthouse from 6 a.m. to 7 o'clock. Noon stop at San José. Night stop, Oakland or San Francisco, finishing at Oakland City Hall at 6 p.m.

There will be several days' rest and sight-seeing at Oakland and San Francisco before starting back. Same towns and stops will be made in reverse order on return if coast route is used. If inland is covered on return itinerary will be thus: First day, leave Oakland at 5 a.m. to 6 o'clock. Dinner at Tracy. Night stop at Modesto. Second day, start hour later, day's run to Fresno. Third day, run to Bakersfield. Fourth day, from Bakersfield to Los Angeles.

All who reach Oakland by motorcycle will receive a gold medal but with only 500 points score engraved upon it if with clean score.

Each contestant will begin with a score of 1000 points and will lose points as follows: Failing to complete any day's run on power of motorcycle or unaided except by rider's feet, penalty 1000 points. Thus, outside help or towing will mean loss of all points. Using open muffler in towns or passing a team on road, 50 points.

Not stopping for the signal of distress (both hands upraised,) 50 points.

Every minute late in finishing or in starting in morning or absence from roll call, one point for each minute. Repairs can be made without penalty, but must be recorded and time taken.

Tire troubles will not count. A contestant delayed in helping out another does not lose any points but the delayed contestant must be marked full time against his score. Special medals will be given any who finish the 1000 miles with 1000 points.

Muffler cut-outs which do not work at start will bar out machine or contestant can remove cut-out and close muffler permanently for the contest. Scoring in full will be made each night. Noon score will be by lieutenants for each squad. Disabled contestant cannot resume place in his squad after repairing but must ride in squad that is nearest and resume place at next control.

Dock Galoway will be the official starter at Los Angeles with Victor Schot as assistant. The timers at start are W. Brown and C. L. Smith. R. K. Holmes will act as official at Oakland finish.

The 1000-mile endurance run will end at the clubhouse of the Los Angeles Motorcycle Club, 120 West Thirty-third street.

The squads are made up in following order, first squad leaving earliest and others following with each pair of riders five minutes apart at start: First squad, Shafer and Kehl, Johnson and Herbelin, Hoskins and Collins. Second squad, Stanton and Cooper, Frink and Fink, Avis and Werner. Third squad, Canfield and Risden, Carver and Racker. Fourth squad, Dunham and Lehman, White and Beattie, Swinnerton and Benkert. While at San Francisco and Oakland the motorcycle clubs there will give smokers in honor of the contestants.

Hill Climb Popular.

Hill-climbing contests appear to be less popular here than in England, where they are of frequent occurrence and where all the best known makes of European and English cars, such as Panhard, Napier, Fiat, Mercedes, etc., are competitors. In the contests of this spring the Berliet, which has just begun to compete in these affairs, seems to be having its own way. On the Hill of Frome, a light forty-horse-power Berliet, won against thirty-two competitors and on the Isle of Man a sixty-horse-power car of this make was first and a twenty-four-horse-power car second, with a thirty-five-horse-power Daimler third. The English climbs usually are longer than those held here, the course on the Isle of Man being two and three-eighths miles in length.

Desire Uniform Laws.

Everything is moving favorably toward the Federal bill, requiring uniformity of State automobile laws, being reported to the House of Representatives by the Judiciary Committee next September. If the American Automobile Association accomplishes this work, it will be the greatest boon ever bestowed upon motorists and will constitute an enduring monument to the organization. The act will benefit all motorists.

ROAD ON FIRE, AUTO BURNS.

STRAW-PACKED CARBURETER CAUSES BLAZE.

Accident Overtakes Angeleno on Bakersfield Road—Handsome Pope-Toledo Touring Car Is Burned and Driver's Hands and Arms Are Blistered.

Al Ehmann, a Los Angeles automobilist, was the victim of a serious auto accident Tuesday. His handsome Pope-Toledo touring car was destroyed, and he was burned on the hands and arms. Ehmann was on his way to Fresno, from this city, and was driving along a straw-packed stretch of road, north of Bakersfield, when his auto took fire. He was forced to abandon the car and seek medical aid.

Fresh straw to the depth of a yard or more had just been dumped on the roadway, and when the motor car passed over it some of the inflammable material became packed into the space between the muffler and the gasoline tank. The heat of the muffler evidently ignited the straw, and it caught fire and burned for a half mile or more. When Mr. Ehmann's car passed through Tipton, the people at the Rochdale store noticed the fire under the car, but did not tell the two occupants. They later informed the unfortunate owner that they had supposed his machine was a steam car with a burner. For a mile or more the car was run with the straw burning underneath. The heat melted the solder about the feed pipe from the gasoline tank. As soon as the autoists smelled burning paint and rubber the car was stopped. Smoke was noticed coming out of the tonneau, which was packed full of tires, cameras, guns, ammunition and other supplies, including extra gasoline and oil.

As the things in the tonneau were removed the fire blazed up. Dirt was thrown upon the flames, but they could not be checked. There was no hope of saving the car, but the two shovels were kept busy keeping the flames off the engine and tires, which were thus saved, though the body and the expensive attachments on the dashboard were destroyed.

Mr. Ehmann, who is well knows in Los Angeles, had fitted his car with speedometer, gauges and those other things dear to the motorist's heart, which on a big car would amount to the price of a small automobile. The latest attachment was a hand pump and air connections to force the gasoline into the carbureter from the tank so as to produce greater speed and power.

To relieve this pressure Mr. Ehmann tried to draw off the gasoline and in doing so burned himself. His fingers were partly roasted and the flesh on some of his fingers came off. His shoulders and arms were also burned. Pain obliged the gritty owner to leave the fire and seek medical aid. A doctor had been telephoned for, Mr. Hobson, a former partner of the burned man, in Fresno, had been warned, and at once started by automobile to meet his old friend in Tulare and bring him to Fresno, where his family were awaiting him.

Charles Fuller Gates of this city, who was accompanying Mr. Ehmann on the trip to Fresno, kept up the fight to save at least part of the valuable car. The lower part of the car was literally buried in dirt thrown by the two shovels, which saved most of the machinery. Three of the new tires were also saved and the fourth tire was only partly burned, thanks to the steady rush of dirt.

Ten gallons or more of gasoline had exploded the nearly airtight tank and had scattered the flames, but the gasoline did not stop burning, and a little later the acetylene gas tank exploded. Straw roads have caused a number of similar accidents. Motorists should equip their cars with hand fire extinguishers.

The experience of this fire shows that air pressure should not be used on gasoline tanks to force feed unless there is a means of quickly releasing this pressure. It would be better to depend entirely on gravity pressure.

Another thing which has, in a number of accidents similar to this, caused factories to change construction, is the careless plan of placing the muffler close to the gasoline storage tank. These are two parts of the car that should be as far apart as possible.

This car, which was nearly destroyed at Tipton last Tuesday afternoon, has a romantic history. It was first owned by L. P. Lowe, a San Francisco millionaire, and in 1903 was pronounced the smartest motor car at Del Monte tournament.

Before the car was in use three months Bert Dingley, the well-known speed driver, collided at full speed with a San Francisco street car. Later on, when the car had passed to other owners, "Bud" Fowler, one of the best-known drivers in San Francisco, landed it in a ditch near San Leandro when the car was loaded with prominent San Francisco people.

MINT CANYON ROAD BEST.

Auto Tourists Should Take Route Through Antelope Valley on Journeys North.

Automobile tourists using the inland route up the State are advised to travel by the Mint Cañon route to the Antelope Valley instead of either through Soledad or San Francisquito Cañons, as both are said to have over a half hundred fords at present, while there is no water in the Mint Cañon.

Do not under any considerations use the crossroad between Palmdale and Elizabeth Lake, except for two miles west of Palmdale to reach the road to Del Sur. In the Leonas Valley near Elizabeth Lake on this route there is much water and a swamp that cannot be crossed even with ease by horses.

There is a good road from Palmdale to the north through Del Sur and Fairmount. About four miles east of Fairmount are deep ruts which can be avoided by taking the ground just north of the road. In the daytime this will be done naturally.

About eighteen miles south of Bakersfield, and less than three miles south of Towne ranch, an irrigation ditch has overflowed into the sagebrush and left a square mile or more of standing water which will mire an automobile. The road here is a cross-cut, running diagonally across a section. A dry road is found to the west by keeping west instead of crossing the dry gulch on the road here. This reaches the main road at the big white gates on the southeast corner of Towne ranch. The coast road to San Diego can be used but is not as satisfactory as the inland route, which is marked by the Automobile Club signs.

RUN FOR CHURCH TROPHY IS NEXT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Definite announcement was made today of new touring competition, to be conducted in 1908 for a trophy, to be given by A. W. Church of the Automobile Club of America. This event, besides being a test of the reliability of competing machines, is to serve as a medium for calling public attention to road conditions in the States toured through, and likewise to the lack of uniformity in speed regulations.

Mr. Church already has outlined a tentative route for the opening tour of the series in the spring of 1908. The start will be from New York, and the Governors of the various States will be met by arrangement at the following points: Hartford for Connecticut, Springfield for Massachusetts, Concord for New Hampshire, Albany for New York, Columbus for Ohio, Charleston for West Virginia, Richmond for Virginia, Harrisburg for Pennsylvania and Trenton for New Jersey.

Stop will be made at Washington on the return North from Richmond. Though not announced, it is understood that the deed of gift will be made to the Automobile Club of America, and the tour may be conducted each year by a club designated by the winner of the previous year. The competition is to be judged on a point system, with penalties attached to every mechanically enforced stop, and to every replacement and adjustment. Mr. Church will appoint a technical committee to assist in framing conditions for the deed of gift.

FROM BOSTON AND BACK TO HARLEM.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The feat of driving from Boston to New York and return, a distance of 523 miles, by cyclometer measurement, with the high-speed gear, sealed and without once stopping the engine, was successfully completed by an oldsmobile touring car yesterday.

This particular car captured the 100-mile race at Readville on Memorial Day last when it established a world's record for the distance. In all the engine was running one minute longer than thirty-one hours. Never once did it overheat or show signs of distress.

The fact that the motor was in operation throughout the time was not by any means as remarkable as that of the car traveling the long distance up hill and down without once being able to utilize anything save high gear.

ACROSS CONTINENT IN BIG MOTOR CAR.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BERLIN, June 29.—Lieut. Graetz of the Persian army will leave here soon to make the first effort to cross Africa in an automobile. He proposes to start from Dar-Es-Salaam on the east coast, about August 10, riding through German East Africa, British Central Africa, Rhodesia and German Southwest Africa, to Swakopmund. He proposes to make the journey in not less than six weeks. He will drive a specially-made 45-horse-power car with very heavy wheels and compartments for holding sufficient gasoline for 1000 kilometers. He will also provide himself with a big larder. Accompanying him will be a machinist, a cook and a negro servant. He will have an elaborate photographic outfit. The Kaiser is said to be much interested in the venture and has desired that a report of the trip be made to him.

RACE MASSED BY MOTO RCAR CRASH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—A twenty-four-hour automobile race which began at the Point Breeze track at 7:18 o'clock, under the auspices of the Quaker City Motor Club, was marred early today, by a collision of two cars, in which John Harkins, driver of one of the racers, was seriously hurt. Harkins sustained internal injuries and remained in a semi-conscious condition until late in the afternoon. The automobiles were speeding at a terrific clip when Harkins's car collided with another competitor.

Eleven cars started in the race and nine are still upon the track. The leading automobile at the twenty-four hours had covered 540 miles, which is forty-six miles ahead of the world's record.

NEW RECORD ON CEMENT TRACK.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

LONDON, June 29.—S. F. Edge, the automobilist, who yesterday evening started to drive a sixty-horse-power car around the new Brookland cement motor track at an average speed of sixty miles an hour for twenty-four hours, is beating all records.

Edge covered a thousand miles in fourteen hours, 54 minutes and 15 seconds. At the nineteenth hour he had completed 1263 miles, 612 miles better than the record. The ride closes at 6 o'clock this evening.

GOSSIP ALONG GASOLINE ROW.

R. M. Sippel of Azusa has purchased a Model D, shaft-drive Jackson. M. Cook of Redlands has also purchased a Jackson of the same model. J. E. Ward of Redlands and E. F. Wickersham of Santa Ana have bought Model D Jacksons the past week.

The Electrical Supply Company expect a carload of Baker Electric Victorias on Wednesday.

Lewis Landreth of Whittier has secured the agency for the Northern in his home town. He has ordered three machines.

B. K. Brant of Uplands purchased a Northern last week. Allan Craig has purchased a two-cylinder Northern runabout, in addition to the one he recently bought.

Gasoline Row was almost deserted last week. Everybody, except those who positively had to remain, were on the road run to Lakeside.

ANGLERS PLAN FEAST.

Rod and Reel Club to Hold Barbecue at Terminal—Bait Casting Tournament in Conjunction.

The Southern California Rod and Reel Club has arranged to give a basket picnic, fish barbecue and casting tournament at Terminal Island Sunday, July 21. Committees have been appointed to make all the preliminary arrangements, and a postal card canvass of the membership will be made at once, returnable not later than Tuesday noon.

As the affair is to be the first of its kind, it has been decided to make it a stag event, the ladies being welcomed later at succeeding barbecues of the kind, it being the plan to make them a regular feature at stated intervals provided the forthcoming celebration proves the success that is predicted for it. The club may attempt to secure a special train.

Terminal Island has been selected because of its proximity to the outside trolling. Other points may be tried later.

About noon, the casting tournament will be started. This will be the first official event of its kind ever consummated on the South Coast. It is proposed to make three classes—a half-ounce and a two and one-half ounce competition with light tackle as defined by the club's angling tournament rules, nine-thread line, and rod not under six feet in length, and an unlimited class open to any rod, any line and any weight of sinker. This will give the heavy tackle anglers a chance, and it is thought the entire tournament will prove a powerful argument in favor of the light tackle when the records are perused after the casting is done.

There may be two classes of casting, one from the beach, the other from the elevation of the wharf, according to the number of contestants and the time available.

A casting course of sufficient width will be staked off at right angles to which will be measured lines at forty, forty-five, fifty, fifty-five, sixty, sixty-five and seventy yards to simplify the making of the count. Each contestant will have three casts allotted him, the best to count and the others to be averaged.

Judges will be appointed to attend to this part of the work, and the president of the club was named as a committee of one to draft rules, referees and make preliminary arrangements. The weights will be furnished by the club.

The half-ounce competition will be substantially the same as the Eastern black bass bait casting tournaments with the exception that the Rod and Reel Club rules will specify linen lines. Inasmuch as the local sinkershiers are not equipped for distance no such records can be expected as those made in New York recently, although a number of former competitors in casting tournaments reside in this city.

The following committees were appointed to arrange for the fish barbecue: Emile Parker and J. F. Jones, transportation and beach arrangements; E. E. Salyer, postal card canvass; Frank E. Knapp and E. R. Abbott, commissary.

GOODWIN SEES THE EAST.

Willard Goodwin has returned from a five weeks' visit to Eastern cities, including stops at St. Louis, Chicago, New York, the Jamestown Exposition, Niagara Falls and Atlantic City. He says the Southern California exhibit on the famous board walk continues to be a center of attraction. Everywhere he went, he says, he found people evincing a keen interest in California. Goodwin says politics is a subject of general conversation in the East. It appeared to him the sentiment for President is about equally divided between Taft and Hughes.

Carrying Seven Passengers and Baggage

Made the Only Perfect Score

That is indisputable in the Lakeside endurance run. The Royal was the only car entered that the agent had enough confidence in to start with a sealed bonnet. The bonnet is still sealed, and will remain sealed until it returns to Los Angeles. Jim Morley drove the car. It does not require an expert from the factory to make a record for a Royal Tourist. Anyone can do the same.

OLDSMOBIL

THE OLDSMOBILE

100% Usefulness

The Oldsmobile has a distinct advantage over a horse carriage for family use—in that it is available at any for any distance, over any road. It has 40 rated actual power, and its roadability has been demonstrated over worst roads in America. The Oldsmobile is the only rival of the horse. It is under absolute control, and has complications, can be stopped instantly with a single ment—in four different ways—cannot tip over, never tired, never shies, or gets frightened. Eats only when ing, and furnishes the sport of Oldsmobiling or the quiet in the country lanes, at the will of the operator

JOYFUL SEALS FINALLY WIN.

Sandwich Islander Pitches Shut-out Contest.

Carnes Has Off Day and Lets Mohler's Men Hit Ball.

Final Game of Series to Be Played This Afternoon.

The Seals won their first game since coming to town, yesterday, shutting out Los Angeles with a score of 7 to 0. The presence of Joy in the pitcher's box was the biggest factor in this reversal of the score, but the local team was weakened by the absence of Carlisle in the field, while Carnes had an off day. Carlisle was out of the game with a strained tendon and was replaced by Ellis, and the difference was noticeable.

The same Losloos who secured [illegible] hits off of Willis Friday had to be content with three scattered bingles yesterday. Two of them netted [illegible] bases, but there were no safe ones forthcoming when a run could have been scored. Sandwich Island Joy was in fine form, and assorted his curves with perfect control. The Seals found Carnes an easy mark. He allowed eight hits and walked four men. Joy passed one.

San Francisco started the first inning with a determination to win, and scored three runs before the side was out. The first of these was forced in by Carnes, who hit Joy with the bases full, forcing Mohler's tally.

Spencer was up first and fanned. Mohler followed with a hit to right, and went to third on Moriarity's double. Hildebrand got free transportation, filling the bases. Irwin was hit and Mohler scored the Seals' first run. On a fielder's choice on Williams Moriarity ran in, reaching the plate on a bad throw by Smith. Williams scored on a long fly by Hildebrand, netting the third run. Los Angeles was put out in one, two, three order by a strike-out and two put-outs at first.

The Los Angeles battery was responsible for the two runs secured by Mohler's players in the second. Spencer and Moriarity got first on balls, with Mohler's put-out sandwiched in between the two walks. Joy, the first man up, was safe at first on a grounder fielded by Dillon to Carnes, who covered the bag, but neglected to touch it. With Irwin at bat, Joy and Spencer scored on a wild pitch by Carnes.

Joy was up first again in the fourth, and scored a run. He was passed to first, stole second, and advanced to third on a sacrifice by Mohler. Moriarity then scored him with a long two-bagger to left field.

AFTER MORE RUNS.

The fifth came near netting the northern team another run. Irwin and Williams both singled, but Irwin was caught at third on a quick throw in by Ellis of Williams's drive. Shaughnessy went out on a grounder, and Williams was run down between third and home. Again, in the sixth, the Seals got Moriarity all the way around the diamond, only to have him tagged at the plate on a throw-in by Cravath from right field.

The seventh and final run for San Francisco, in the ninth, was made by Street, who singled, stole second, and was advanced to third by a short bunt down the third-base line by Spencer. He scored when Hogan threw to second to catch Spencer, beating out the throw-in.

Catcher Street was hit on the hand by a bad foul in the seventh, but was able to play out the game. He made several very difficult catches of high flies, and was in the game from start to finish.

Hildebrand made a great try for Cravath's fly to the center fence in the second. He made a long run, and got his hand on the ball, but arrived too late to hold it. Cravath was credited with a deserved two-base hit.

San Francisco played better ball than the fans have witnessed from the Seals for a long time. It was up to them to win a game, and they did it in good style. Hen Berry, of course, was sorry to see his boys lose, but he couldn't help looking relieved, for he won't have to make good his dinner offer. Berry had invitations out for a free feed if Los Angeles won all of the week's series, and on Friday was looking worried, but a complete shut-out was even more than he hoped for.

This afternoon the two teams meet for the last time in this series, and a good game is expected at the last inning. The score:

ARIZONA BASEBALL.

TALK OF NEW LEAGUE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) June 28.—There is renewed talk of a Southwestern Baseball League, for which strong teams are ready in Phoenix, Tucson, Prescott, Humboldt, Jerome, Globe, Mesa, Tempe and Bisbee. Tucson, with three organizations that play extremely good ball, probably is the best baseball town in the Territory, though Phoenix now has a half-dozen minor nines that are turning up good timber for the major team.

Last Sunday's game in Phoenix between the Phoenix athletes and Prescott resulted in a cleanly-won victory for the visitors, with a score of 10 to 4. The previous Sunday Phoenix and Mesa played. In the last [illegible] Wyncoop of Tucson umpired [illegible] was dis[illegible] an objection was raised to the order. Wyncoop is the best umpire ever known on the Arizona diamond and is unable to accept more than a part of the many demands made upon him by clubs all over the Territory. He will preside at the games at Prescott on July 3, 4 and 5, between the Prescott, Mesa, Jerome and Humboldt teams. Williams and Cuber will be the battery for Mesa.

It has been arranged that Prescott and Tucson should meet in Phoenix next Sunday, but Prescott refused to come unless guaranteed $300 gate receipts, a proposition which had to be turned down.

The Phoenix Athletics will go to Globe July 4 to try for a $750 purse hung up by the Celebration Committee. Ayer, of the Temple Normal School, considered the best pitcher in the Southwest, will be in the box for Phoenix. Scott and Delgado will alternate in the pitching with Ayer, if necessary.

Harry West, an old-time player, today organized a new local team, to be known as the "Phoenix," in distinction with the Athletics. Catcher Magoffin and First Baseman Graham of the Athletics will sign. Byron Hartwell, known on the Coast as a clever, though erratic player, and Williams, now in the box for Mesa, will be the pitchers.

FALLS SENSELESS.

BALL PLAYER'S GREAT STUNT.

In the game between the Edison Electrics and Y.M.C.A. in the Mercantile League, yesterday, Cornet, left fielder for the Edison team, made a play which sent the spectators wild with enthusiasm. He made a long run for a fly, but in catching it fell and was knocked senseless. He was picked up in this condition by Louis Lamar, the first baseman, with the ball still in his hand. The E.E. team won the game by the score of 9 to 1. The game was the second at the St. Vincent's grounds.

In the first game Playgrounds and the Pacific Mutuals played an eleven-inning tie game. Each side netted four runs, but the game had to be called in order to allow the Edison Electrics and Y.M.C.A. to play. Score:

TURNS TURTLE; CARRIES DEATH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ELGIN, (Ill.,) June 28.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] David Boswell, driving the Branstetter Dragon, in the endurance test of the Chicago Motor Club, probably was fatally injured, yesterday, by the machine turning turtle one mile out of Elgin and Norman R. New, owner of the car, was also injured. Boswell sustained a broken hip and internal injuries and he was taken to the Sherman hospital in Elgin.

SCHOOLBOYS HIT BULLSEYES.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, June 29.—School boys hobnobbed with officers of the National Guard, yesterday, at Creedmoor Park, and shot with a coolness and precision under the critical inspection of colonels, majors and captains that evoked favorable comment.

The event of the day was the first of two days' shooting, held under the auspices of the Public Schools' Athletic League, and was an individual competition for the Peters prize.

Fifty-nine students from nine high schools kept the rifles cracking during the afternoon and the ease with which some of the youngest aspirants for honors hit the bullseye time and again would have aroused the enthusiasm of President Roosevelt. The lads are anxiously awaiting the presence of the President at Creedmoor, today, when the final match for the President's trophy will be shot, the prize being an autograph letter from Mr. Roosevelt.

All of the contestants in these school shoots must be under 21 years of age. The winner of the prize and the gold medal was A. V. Arnold of the Boys' High School, Brooklyn. He scored 47 out of a possible 50, getting three bullseyes out of his five shots in the 100-yard shoot and four bullseyes in the 400-yard shoot.

AMERICAN BOATS SHIPPED ABROAD.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BOSTON, June 29. The three Sonder class yachts Marblehead, Chewink VIII., and Spokane, which have been selected to represent the United States in the races with Germany of the same class at Kiel in August, were shipped today upon the steamship Sylvia for Hamburg.

The Sylvia, which sails by way of Baltimore, will take sixteen or eighteen days for the voyage to Hamburg. The races are to be sailed August 15.

CATCHES BIG TARPON.

Pasadena Man Breaks Record on Gulf by Catching Fish on Light Line and Rod.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FORT WORTH (Tex.) June 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] L. H. Streeter of Pasadena, Cal., is the tarpon hero of the season. He broke the record for tarpon today when he landed a silver king on a five-foot 9-inch rod.

After fighting the gamey fish all over the pass he finally took to the breakers to save himself, but Mr. Streeter was not daunted at this.

When the boat got in the breakers, overboard he went, in water up to his neck, the breakers going over him again and again. Here the odds were in favor of the tarpon and it looked as if it were impossible for the fisherman to hold out, but after one hour's hard fight, Mr. Streeter had his prize on the beach.

PLAN FUTURITY ANNUAL EVENT.

California Breeders' Association Is Formed.

Los Angeles Horsemen to Promote Breeding.

Canfield Is Elected to Head Organization.

To hold annually a futurity race for 2-year-olds in Southern California similar to the great Kentucky Futurity is the plan of the California Breeders' Association, organized Friday night. The association has been formed to promote the interests of the harness horse, and includes many of the prominent horsemen of the Coast, as well as a large number of local breeders and horse fanciers. The futurity will go to the track or association making the highest bid, but will be kept in Southern California, and, if possible, in Los Angeles.

At the first meeting C. A. Canfield was unanimously chosen president of the new association. John W. Snowden is secretary, L. J. Christopher, treasurer, and W. G. Durpee, first vice-president.

The list of directors includes the following local horsemen: C. A. Canfield, L. J. Christopher, George A. Pounder, W. S. Maben, Charles Sadler, Fred E. Ward, Robert E. Moorehead, John W. Snowden, I. C. Masher, W. G. Durpee, J. A. Fairchilds, J. G. Mott, Dr. William Dodge, John H. Norton, M. S. Severance, J. H. Reynolds, M. M. Potter, H. N. Henderson, John Springer, Robert Smith, E. J. DeLory, N. Bonfilio, Henry Berry, J. C. Cline, Byron Erkenbrecher, Dr. Ralph Hagan, Capt. William Banning, L. H. Mabury, J. H. Williams and F. H. Messmore.

Other directors from various parts of the State are: James Wallace and James Connell, San Diego; E. D. Waffle, Santa Ana; Prescott, San Bernardino; George Marlow, Fresno; William Loftus, Fullerton; S. S. Bailey and A. T. Van De Vanter, Seattle; F. W. Kelly, John A. McKerron, M. A. Murphy and Prof. E. P. Heald, San Francisco; William Morgan and Capt. J. C. Newton, Pasadena; Lon Crellan, Pleasanton; Charles Donlan, Oxnard; M. D. Wisdom, Portland; C. A. Durfee, Oakland; Charles F. Silva and Frank E. Wright, Sacramento; Alexander Brown, Woodland; Judge Thomas H. Brents, Walla Walla; C. H. Thompson and J. S. Bransford, Salt Lake; S. H. Hay, Winters; Joe Terry, Long Beach; Judge Colburn, Denver; Jacob Brolliar, Exeter.

The formation of the new organization is said to mean the decay of the Los Angeles Harness Horse Association, which has had bad luck in recent years, and has conducted losing ventures in the meets held at Agricultural Park. All the strength of the professional horsemen in these parts is said to be pledged to the new association, which in no way conflicts with the Los Angeles Driving Club, a purely amateur organization.

The members of the association hope to secure concessions from the city authorities relative to conducting meets at Agricultural Park. If not, the San Bernardino and San Diego tracks will be given an opportunity to secure the races.

The directors have called a meeting for one week from Monday night to form bylaws and elect an executive board, which will have charge of the business affairs of the organization.

BIG CIRCUIT FOR SHOOTERS.

FULL WEEK OF SAUCER SMASHING FOR LOS ANGELES.

Celebrated Eastern Experts, Led by Redoubtable William R. Crosby to Be on Hand Again in Greater Force Than Ever—Many to Follow Circuit.

Pleased at the reception they were accorded on their first visit to the Coast, the celebrated eastern expert shots, headed by William R. Crosby, will again go down the line of the Coast Circuit this fall, and will be in Los Angeles during all of "Tournament Week."

Among those already planning to come are William R. Crosby, Rolla O. Heikes, Thomas A. Marshall, Fred Gilbert, William H. Heer, Ralph Trimble, Charles A. Young, Otto Sens and others of the southern squad. Hirschy and the northern brigade are sure to be on hand. Gilbert was not out with the rest, owing to illness, but is fully recovered. H. D. Freeman of Peters fame also will be here with the rest of the Peters squad.

In addition, the full force of the San Francisco, mid-State and Puget Sound champions will make the trip, including such cracks as the professionals, Dick Reed, Emil Holling, W. S. Wattles, Charles Sylvester and an extra turnout of amateurs. William H. (Redshirt) Varian, the Stones from Fresno, and about a dozen in all are scheduled to come from Valley points. Clarence Naumann has reëntered the shooting game, and, with Otto Feudner and Clarence Haight, will represent San Francisco.

This phenomenal turnout of shotgun masters only is made possible by the syndicating of the clubs into a big association with power to allot dates. This year a circuit has been arranged which permits those who care to do so to take a trip beginning at Spokane, Wash., September 10, and ending at Douglas, Ariz., October 13, with only an occasional day off during all the interim, with the exception of the time necessarily passed on the trains traveling to and fro.

Locally, there will be a full week of trap-shooting. The new Western Gun Club, which recently built a house and put in extensive improvements at its grounds near Li Fur station on the Pasadena Short Line, will open up with a three days' bombardment of the bluerock, September 25, 26 and 27; the Los Angeles Gun Club will, after skipping a day, follow with another three days' shoot, September 29, 30, and October 1.

This will give the trapshots a rare opportunity to do some sight-seeing along with their shooting.

The Western Handicap will be shot off at the Western Gun Club the third day. Details are to be announced later on. Both the local clubs propose to add money and put up inducements worth the while of the visitors, and entertainment of the visiting guests is also contemplated.

The Coast Circuit dates are: Spokane, Wash., September 10, 11, 12; Portland, Or., September 15, 16, 17; San Francisco, September 20, 21, 22; Western Gun Club at Los Angeles September 25, 26, 27; Los Angeles Gun Club, September 29, 30, October 1; Coronado, October 3, 4, 5; Douglas, Ariz., October 11, 12, 13.

A little over a month is required, and the shooters who make the journey will take part in at least seven tournaments, and each one will burn about eight cases, or 4000 shells, on an average. Preparations already are being made by the local tournament committees.

J. E. Vaughan, who has just finished breaking 162 out of 170, and 147 out of his last 150 at the San José tournament, also will be on hand when the Grand Circuit of Coast trapshooting changes its scene to Los Angeles.

Fred B. Mills and M. G. Lane, who attended the Grand American Handicap in the East, have returned. They say the climatic conditions are very trying to a western shooter, who is confronted with them for the first time.

NEW RECORD FOR CASTING IS SET.

Eastern casters are getting busy with their bait rods in the sinkershying tournaments. The amateur record with half-ounce weight, placed at 200 feet by Charles Stepath in New York, has been raised nine inches by a Chicago angler, and it is thought better still will be done at the Racine National Association of Scientific Angling Clubs tournament the middle of August.

In the Boston tourney, 155 feet was the best work done in bait casting. The amateurs were away down the line.

In the tournaments held where there is available water, such as the Boston event, in conjunction with the sportsmen's show, and in Madison Square Garden, New York, a new competition has been devised, which has proven the most interesting of all. It is an actual fishing competition with barbless hooks, for form and accuracy in handling and landing fish, generally trout. It is practiced both from the shore and from a canoe. The casting is similar to that of actual practice, and the fish are returned to the water unharmed. Judges demerit the anglers for all bad moves, lost strikes, poorly-handled fish, the perfect score being 100. Several at the Boston show scored 100 per cent., among them Call J. McCarthy and F. H. Talbott. The fishing was conducted in both manners, from canoe, and by donning boots and wading out into the lake.

GAMBLING LAW CONSTITUTIONAL.

JACKSON (Tenn.) June 29.—The State Supreme Court today declared the anti-race gambling law passed by the last Legislature to be constitutional. This will prevent the proposed race meetings at Memphis and Nashville.

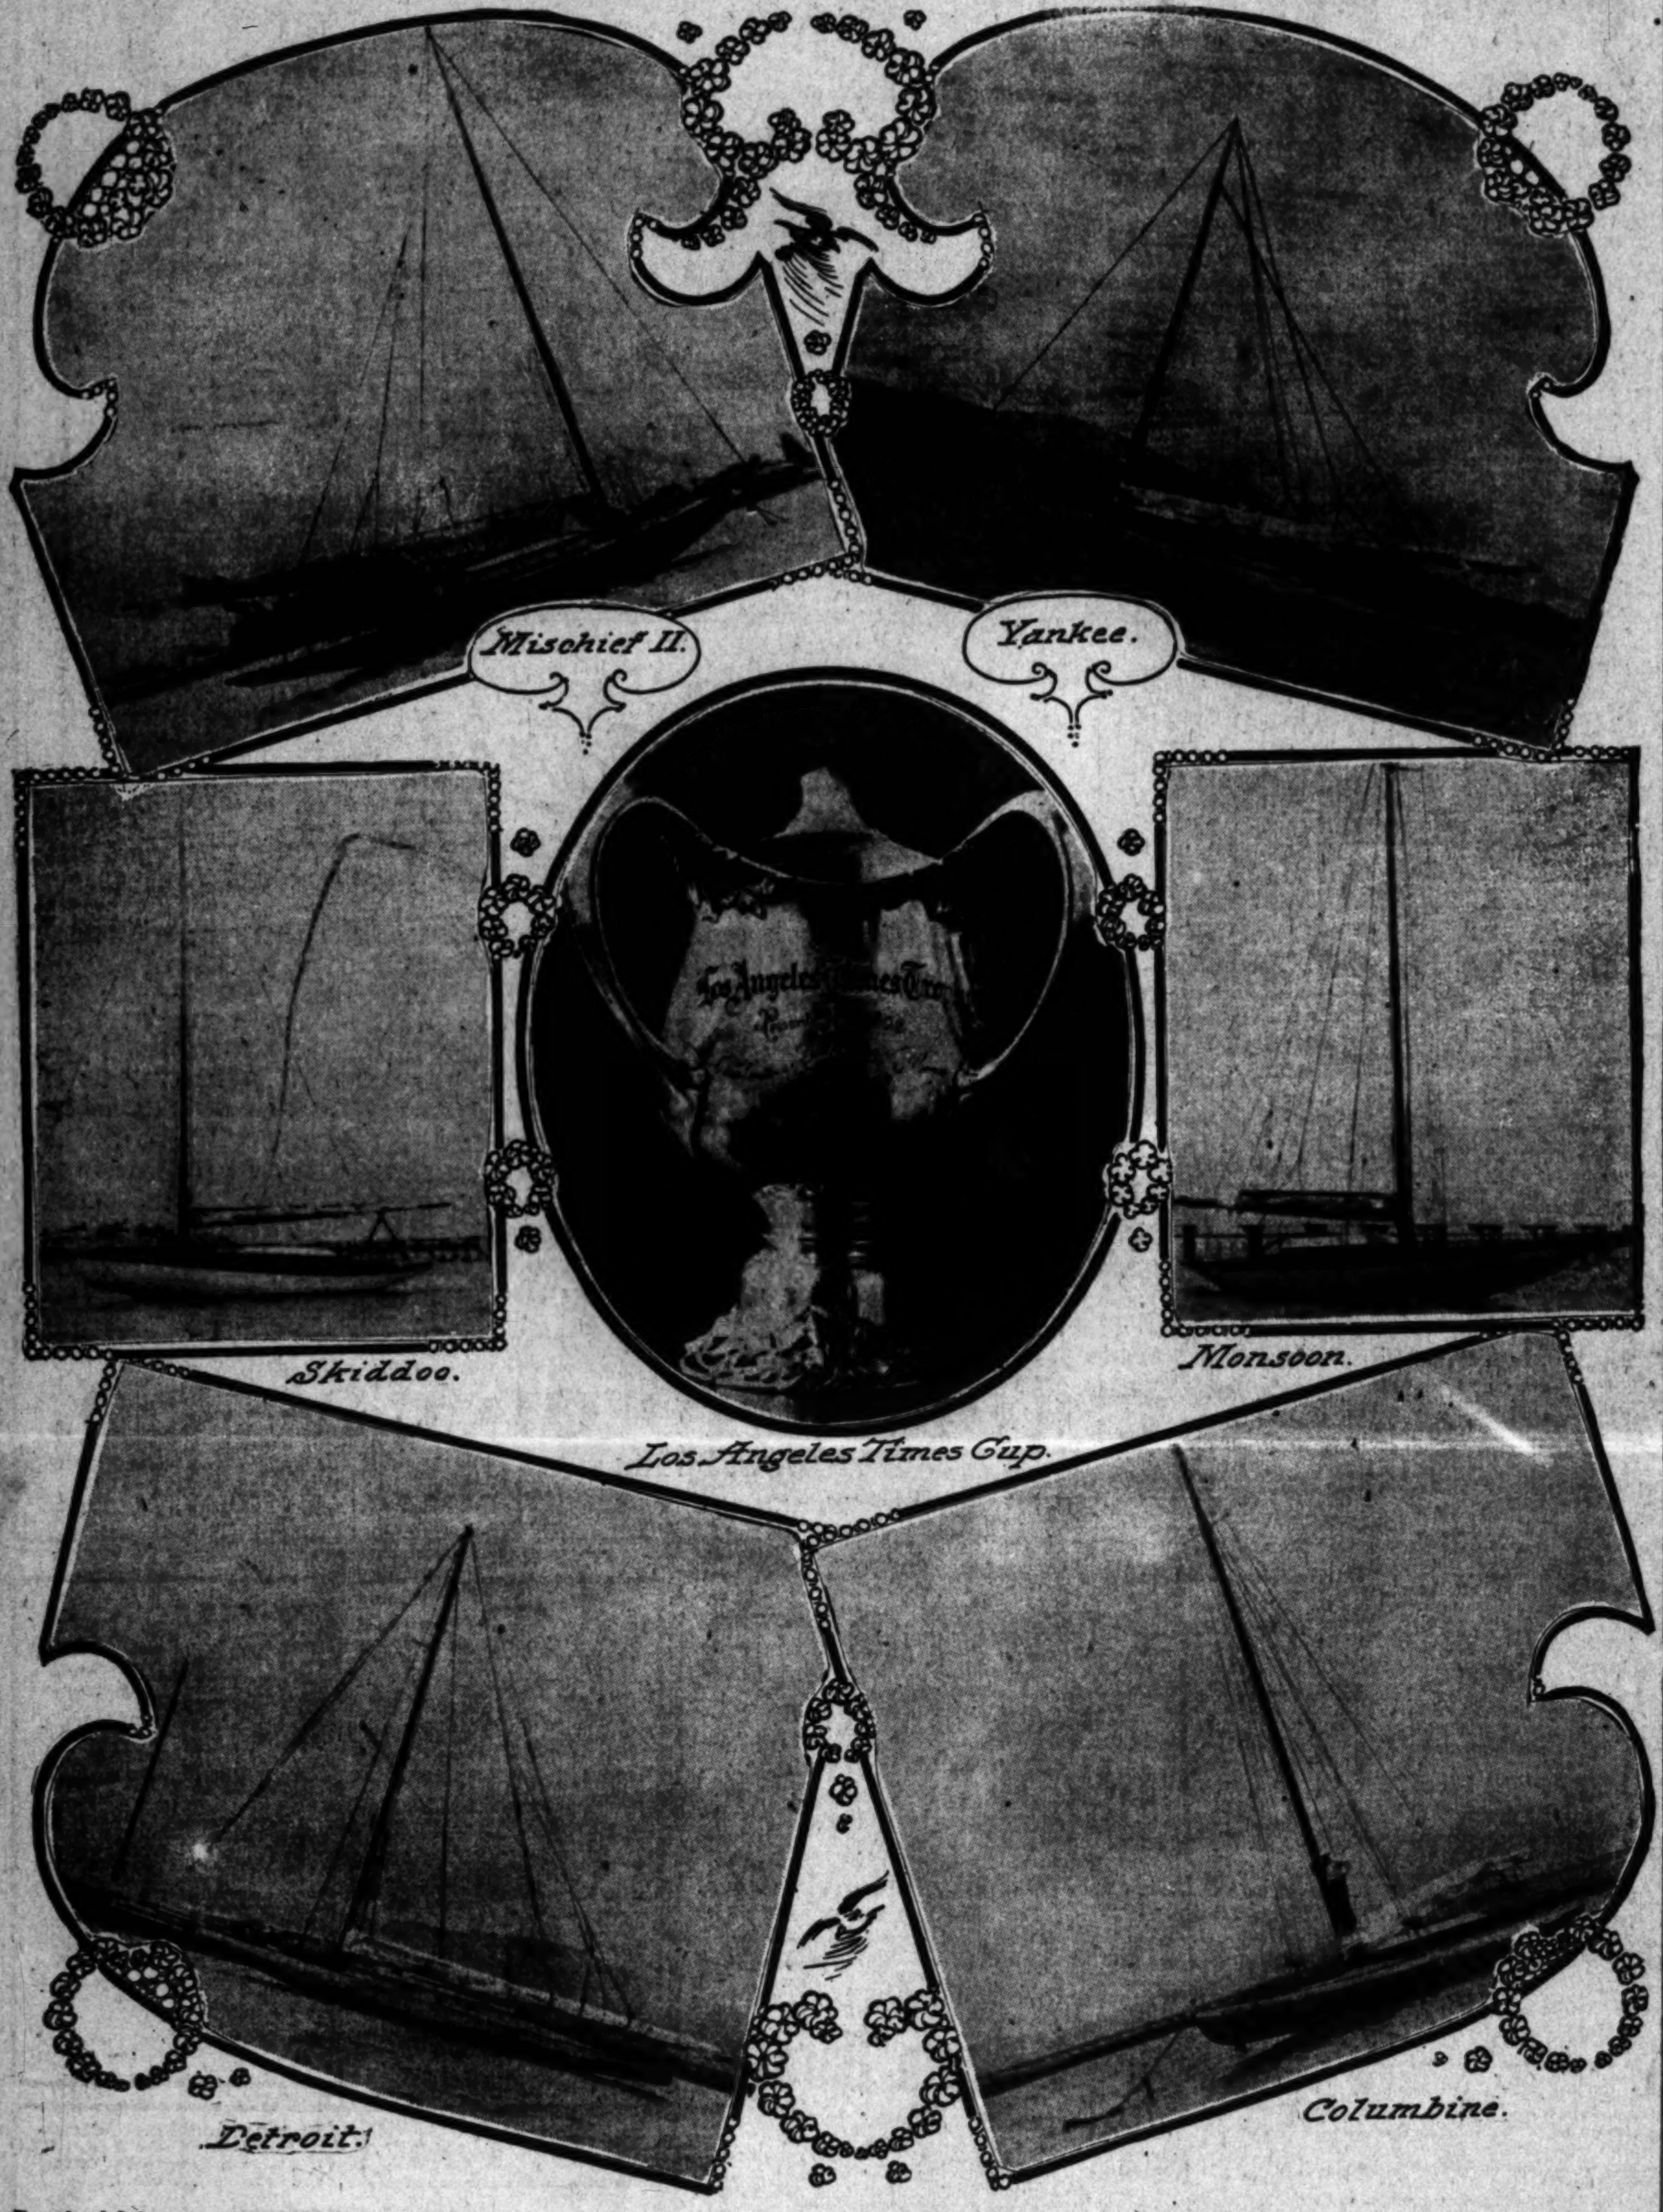
THE TIMES PERPETUAL CHALLENGE CUP AND SIX OF THE YACHTS TO CONTEST FOR TROPHY.



Fourth of July races are expected to prove the big feature of the Southern California yachting season, this year Best boats in the south are entered in their respective classes.

SOUTH COAST YACHTS AFTER TIMES TROPHY.

Great Race to Be Held Off San Pedro July 4—Detroit, Holder of the Cup, Will Have Strong Competition. Six Yachts to Contend.

THE official time allowances of the racers so far, one or two being omitted as they are not yet in shape for the measurer:

Yankee	(scratch.)
Mischief II.	32.43 seconds.
Monsoon.	35.14 seconds.
Columbine.	36.51 seconds.
Venus.	75.41 seconds.
Osborn.	86.79 seconds.
Merlin.	105.64 seconds.
Valkyre.	107.88 seconds.

In this table is the allowance in seconds of each boat from scratch, for each mile of the course. As the course is estimated at 15 miles, it is only necessary to multiply the allowance in the table by fifteen in order to get the full allowance, in seconds, for the whole race.

Every yachtsman that belongs to the South Coast Yacht Club, and every member of each crew of the many racers, is going to be full of business for the next four days. From truck to keison and from boom end to bowsprit tip, keen eyes will search for possible improvements. Sails, running gear, and standing rigging will receive the most severe overhauling and nearly all the boats will be hauled out to receive a good polishing below the water line.

At 1 o'clock, on the Fourth of July, the crack boats of the club will cross the line in the start of the race for the "Times Perpetual Challenge Cup," in the fifth race that so far has been held for that trophy.

Under the deed of gift, the race is open to all yachts under thirty-five feet racing length, and also to any reputable yacht club, but outside clubs so far have not made any entries.

While the race is an open one, the actual contestants are practically confined to classes "A" and "B," for owners of the smaller boats, knowing the speed of the crack sloops, will, as a general rule, content themselves with the races for classes "C" and "D," which will be held over the same course with a quarter of an hour's difference in the starting time.

Heretofore there has been considerable objection to a course that would take the boats off Long Beach, owing to the flukey winds generally encountered in and around the lee of Deadman's Island, so that the course selected by the club for the Independence Day race generally is hailed with satisfaction by all the men who will be called on to cover the distance laid off, between Point Firmin and Point Vincente whistling buoys.

RULES OF CONTEST.

Official general rules to be observed by the contestants are:

INDEPENDENCE DAY REGATTA.

The race for The Times Perpetual Challenge Cup is open to all yachts under thirty-five feet racing length. The course for The Times Cup race is as follows:

Start at whistle buoy off Point Firmin, crossing line between lighthouse and buoy, thence to whistle buoy off Point Vincente, thence to flag at easterly end of San Pedro breakwater, thence to whistle buoy off Point Firmin. All marks are to be left to port. The San Pedro Chamber of Commerce offers a silver cup for the boat finishing second in The Times Cup class.

In the race for "C" (twenty-five-foot) class, the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce offers a silver cup for first place and a merchandise prize for second place in this class.

In the race for "D" (twenty-one-foot) class, the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce offers a silver cup for first place in this class.

The course for "C" and "D" classes is: Start at whistle buoy off Point Firmin, crossing line between lighthouse and buoy, thence to whistle buoy off Point Vincente, thence to whistle buoy off Point Firmin. All marks are to be left to port and yachts at the finish must round up and cross the line between the lighthouse and buoy.

The start for the C and D classes is set for 12:45 o'clock; preparatory gun at 12:40. The start for The Times Cup class is scheduled for 1 o'clock, preparatory gun at 12:55.

The course laid out is about fourteen miles, that is, the whistling buoys approximately are seven miles apart. Under general conditions, it will be a beat to the first turn, a free run back, with a haul around the Point Firmin buoy in order to cross the finish line between the lighthouse and the buoy, making one of the best courses that could have been selected, and, with a good breeze, promising good performances by the sloops.

SIX BOATS TO RACE.

There are six boats expected to sail for The Times Cup, and each one of these will carry a skipper that believes he has a winner under him. There may be more entries for this race, but there is little doubt that the winner will be among this group: Yankee, (the scratch boat,) Detroit, Monsoon, Mischief II, Columbine, and Skiddoo.

Of these the Detroit and Skiddoo have not yet been measured by H. E. Corse, the official measurer of the club. Since her last season the Detroit has been changed from a center-board boat to a keel boat, and as a result there can be no forecast based on her past performances. She is an unknown quantity in the race, and the result of that fact is to make any attempt at prophesy a reckless proceeding. The Skiddoo will have a new suit of sails, now due from eastern makers, and may turn out a surprise to the knowing ones.

On the other hand the wind may be light or strong, a factor that will aid some boats and hurt others in the seven-mile thrash to windward. Despite the change in her character by the loss of her board there are not a few men who believe in the Detroit, particularly if the breeze is fresh, and despite the fact that such a change as has been made in this boat generally results in slower performances.

Several of the best-posted men in the club said the other day, that if the present course was selected, Detroit would win, with Monsoon or Mischief II fighting for second place. This hardly meets with the approval of Walter Folsom, who will sail his Mischief II, for when he learned of the course that had been picked out, he made several desperate promises as to what he would do if he did not cross the line first at the end of the race, and boat for boat at that. On the other hand, J. T. Pugh is tuning up his Monsoon and does not appear at all undecided as to what she will do in such a race.

Then there is the Columbine to be taken into consideration. So far she never has been beaten, and there are not a few members who believe that she will give the Detroit all kinds of trouble.

WANT PLENTY WIND.

All of the men want wind, they say, and the consensus of opinion outside of the racing skipers themselves favors Columbine, Mischief II and Monsoon as the three first boats, with any one as the likely winner. In a race like this one for The Times Cup, the men who are sailing the boats and the men who handle the gear and canvas are factors quite as important as the course or the nature of the weather.

The Columbine, A. J. Mitchell's boat, according to the official measurer, will get nearly thirty-seven seconds per mile from the scratch which, calling the course fifteen miles, would mean about 9 minutes, while the Mischief II would get about eight minutes, and the Monsoon would get 8 min. 47 sec.; but in this race it would be surprising if the time allowance had any material effect on the results. It is likely that "Fritz" Whitney will sail the Columbine or act in an advisory capacity, and with only moderate weather, this boat has a very good chance.

The Detroit practically is the favorite if there is a fresh breeze, but it is impossible to make any guess as to what she will do. However, if H. A. Hodge sails her as is expected, she must deteriorate considerably in her sailing if she does not bunch in along the finish with the best of them. Dodge is said to be one of the best all-around racing skippers in the South Coast Club, and rarely fails to get all out of his boat that there is on tap.

There is not much chance of the Yankee doing better than a place, according to the form handed out by the shellbacks. Norman Densham will sail her and she is known as a good boat on windward beat. In her last race with the Columbine she made a good showing but it is not generally believed that she will show any other of the racers the way across the finish line.

Mischief II is a very decided factor in the run and nobody seems to be willing to say that she will not win, and her most earnest rivals decline to go on record as prophesying her defeat by either Columbine or Monsoon. She has had the worst kind of luck lately, and passed hours in a flat calm in the island race, the other day, with all the other boats hull down astern, only to be defeated by the Monsoon, with less than a minute's difference, boat for boat, in a race of considerably more than a hundred miles. Her owner and skipper, Walter Folsom, is satisfied that he will hold The Times Cup for the year following the race and his crew seem equally determined.

J. T. Pugh is leaving nothing undone that will put her into proper shape for the contest. Interest in the struggle between the Monsoon and Mischief II is at fever heat.

SKIDDOO OUT-CLASSED.

There is a very general opinion that the Skiddoo is out-classed by the other boats but with her new sails she is likely to improve on her past work, although barring accident to other boats or serious flukes, the general impression is that Wedgewood must perform a very unusual stunt if he brings his boat in among the first three.

The "C" and "D" classes will cross the line, bound over the same course fifteen minutes before the larger boats start, and the smaller fellows promise to make a showing of which any yacht clubmates, the junior classes carry canvas and have skippers and crews that will go almost anywhere that the bigger boats will lead. Of course, in a very heavy breeze the smaller boats will have to shorten sail and take a club in the country would have reason to be proud. Although not so long on the water line as some of their good ducking.

In C class there is a prize for the first and second boats offered by the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce. The starters probably will be the Venus, Valkyrie, Muriel and Merlin, and between the lot there is no such thing as a forecast of results in a race like this one. On the weather will hang the ultimate decision. Venus has done good work, won a lot of races, and has in K. P. Bradley a good skipper, besides carrying a crew that knows the boat and is not afraid to sail her.

Joe Fellows, skipper of the Valkyrie, is as foxy a man as will be found at any of the tillers and has, in addition, a very thorough knowledge of the course and the kind of weather to be found in odd corners. That sort of knowledge has won many a race for a boat against faster opponents, and the Valkyrie may be busy at the finish looking back at the procession.

HAS PLENTY NERVE.

On the Merlin, George Wallace will handle the stick and although he has not had so much experience as some of his rivals, he is a good sailor and not apt to lose anything through timidity.

W. F. Ashbridge, owner and skipper of the Osborn, knows his boat and has a crew that knows how to do their work and get all out of the boat that is to be had, but it is doubtful if they really expect to be first at the finish.

V. D. Stewart, the commodore of the club, will sail his Muriel, and has a fine lot of fellows to handle canvas, but although he will go over the course, the Muriel is much more of a cruising boat than a racer, and Stewart has not built any rosewood shelf for the cup in his class.

There has been some talk of the Katrina sailing, but as yet "Fritz" Overton has not made any formal declarations of his intentions.

"D" class probably will bring out the Myth, Portola and Hilda. These boats are not keyed to the racing pitch that marks the larger yachts, but their owners and crews are always ready for a try-out, and are not afraid of a little weather. Charlie Richardson will sail the Myth, and is likely to carry a scratch crew but one full of enthusiasm. Richardson is a good skipper, and the little Myth can get up and travel when the weather conditions are about right, so she may have something to brag about after the race.

Neither Mellen of the Portola nor Smith of the Hilda are identified particularly with the racing game, although they both know how to handle their boats in good style, but in this instance the boats are more cruisers than racing machines, but it is safe to say that those who sail on the little ships will have just as good a sail and as earnest a race as those on any of the entries.

Taken all togethed, the Independence Day races of the South Coast Yacht Club promise to make a splendid showing and furnish lots of entertainment for those who go down to the sea to watch the test of speed and nerve.

GEORGE KISTLER AND DAN RENEAR, famous long distance swimmer and instructor, with his prodigy, Penn's intercollegiate champion.

ABNORMAL TRAINING BECOMES DANGEROUS.

BY HERBERT FORDER,

Senior Gold Medalist, late instructor Sandow's Crystal Palace School, Lecturer Earl's Court, etc.

NUMBER III.

SEVERAL years in the camps of the great European athletes, Sandow, Apollo, Vansittart, Georges Hackenschmidt, Milo, Tom Cannon and Tom McInerney, convinced me that their methods of training were not only worthless, but absolutely dangerous to the average man. To begin with, these men—likewise all the great professionals—are abnormal; there is nothing in their physical or mental make-up that can be likened to that of the average man; they are just as phenomenal physically as are great geniuses in music, poetry or painting mentally. They are geniuses of muscle and physical brain matter, and just as the average man will not attempt to imitate the methods of the intellectual giants, so he will come to see the folly of attempting any imitation of the muscle kings.

Vansittart eats food enough for three men, then takes patent medicines by the box and bottleful, to keep his internal organs on the move. As he says, with a long, aristocratic drawl, "You know, bah Jove! My muscles are a lot of hungry wolves that feed on my body, and I have to eat three men's food to keep alive."

I once saw a giant French wrestler, Paulo Perouse, the Lion of Vendee, after a bout with Georges Hackenschmidt, in Manchester, eat for his supper a roast leg of Welsh mutton, a tureen of roast potatoes, some tomatoes, a cauliflower and some small French rolls. It was a supper set for a party of four. When we arrived the "Lion of Vendee" was snoring like a bull elephant on the floor, the couch being not large enough. On the table among the ruins was four empty pint bottles of Bass ale.

That is only a sample of the abnormality in many ways of these men. In various stages of the world's history there has been a cropping up of remarkable athletes, due to several causes, foremost among them is a renaissance of physical training and new forms of athletics, such as the world has experienced during the last twenty years. This is the environment that sets the stage ready for the Hackenschmidts and Sandows, and sends enterprising managers on the hunt into obscure villages and towns for promising material. Thus England's greatest weight lifter and most beautiful physical man, Launceston Elliot, was found running a live stock farm in Berkshire. Sandow hails from Konigsberg, Hackenschmidt from St. Petersburg, and so on.

HEREDITARY STRENGTH.

I think the explanation of the birth of these men is to be found in two ways: The mating of two persons with an exceptionally powerful line of ancestors on both sides, and in other cases where neither of the parents are remarkable physically, the law of atavism sets in, and we have a child that does not seem to belong to such parents, but clearly is the likeness of some powerful ancestor, that has become almost a legend in the family group of bygone worthies.

From such as these we get the statues of the Gladiator of the Borghese and the great figures of Michael Angelo. In the Greek period, the statues of the Hercules, the Apollo, the Venus and the lighter but more beautiful Discobolus. In the Victorian era we have Lord Leighton's "Athlete and Python," and Thorneycroft's "Sluggard." Then there is Fred [illegible]'s "Huntsman With Dogs" and [illegible]'s "Rescued."

All these are types produced in the manner I have outlined. Therefore let us put away the idea that we can become like these, by any system of training ever invented, if we were not born with great physical powers. We can all be better than we are. So few of us live up to the level of all the good gifts we are endowed with. So many of us fall short of what we could be if we try. The most remarkable instance of self-development I have met with is that of Arthur P. Claque of Liverpool. A school teacher, who, at 11 years of age, met with a frightful accident on a wheel that resulted in concussion of the brain. He was in bed for six months. After regaining consciousness, it was found that the sight of one eye was gone. During the last two months of convalescence he studied anatomy. Two years later he was a very fine physical specimen, a moderate gymnast, a fair wrestler and fencer, the proprietor of a smart physical training school and the cleverest teacher of remedial physical training and courses for women and children I have yet seen. I was chief instructor to Claque for a couple of years, and there learned the system of work, which I have not seen equaled.

Continuing the exercises begun last Sunday, we may take up the following:

SET NUMBER TWO.

First exercise — Deep breathing. Ready, commence. Raise both arms at full length straight up to front, palms downward, till full stretched above the head, taking a long, deep breath through the nostrils, till lungs are packed and chest inflated; then lower arms outward and sideward to commencing position at side of thighs, while breath is blown out forcibly through the mouth. Relax completely and repeat not less than six and not more than twelve.

Second exercise—Biceps alternately. Position, with arms stretched out to side on line with shoulders, palms upward. Flex left bicep till clenched fist comes over to shoulder, head turned and eye fixed on the bicep in action; now relax left arm, turn head to right arm and contract right bicep; then relax and repeat on alternate sides till arms are tired. In this movement it is necessary to work arms until tired, as position is difficult one in which to work bicep fully, it being one of the largest, most frequently in use, and therefore a muscle hard to overwork.

Third exercise—Triceps. Position with forearms lifted gently so as to form an angle from the chest to the front. It is just half of the first bicep movement. Palms open and upward; commence, grip tight and press arms downward and backward till they make a straight line to the rear of the body, care being taken to keep high arm close to chest. Now relax and lift without effort or contraction to ready position and repeat. Six of these movements done properly should cause triceps to ache and demand entire relaxation.

Fourth exercise—Pectorals. Position with arms stretched out on line with shoulders to the side, palms down; chest walls lifted to highest point. Commence, grip tight, bring arms together downward and across front of body, the high arms pressed well into front of chest, till wrists are crossed in front on a line with the waist. Relax and swing up to commencing position, and repeat until chest muscles are tired.

Fifth exercise—Forearms. Position with arms lifted in V-shaped position on front of chest, palms open and to the front. Commence, grip and move hands on wrist downward and backward till forearms are tired.

Sixth exercise—Calves and thighs. Position, with hands resting on hips. Commence, rise up on toes, then squat down till buttocks rest on heels, then rise slowly and, once legs are straight, drop heels to ground and relax. Rise on toes and repeat movement six times.

SET NUMBER THREE.

An extra set for muscles already used in sets Nos. 1 and 2. They may be added to work in the order placed after a couple of months' work, or used alternately in place of No. 2 from the commencement.

First exercise — Breathing movement. Position, with hands raised to front on line with shoulders, palms together. Draw arms backward to full stretch till they are on line with shoulders to the side, drawing in deep breath through the nostrils till chest is fully elevated and lungs are packed. Bring hands quickly forward to ready position and exhale forcibly through the mouth. Repeat six, and not more than twelve times.

Second exercise—Biceps supinator, then flexor. (Note—The biceps have two actions, flexion, the bending of the forearm upward or inward, and the secondary action of turning the forearm over and outward, as in the manner of turning gimlet or screw-driver. In this action the biceps work in conjunction with the large muscle on the outside of the forearm near the elbow, the supinator longus.)

Ready position, first section of movement, attention, with arms held into side, palms down, and on a line with the waist. Commence, grip hands tightly and turn over and outward, as in the manner of using screw-driver. The biceps will be seen to bunch and swell. Relax by turning the forearm over to the side, relax grip and turn open palms down. Repeat till tired.

Second section—Position, with arms out on line with shoulders to the side, palms up. Commence, grip tight and pull both hands over till they touch the shoulder. Relax and take back to ready position, turn arms over till palms face front, then grip and pull into shoulders on the side, relax to ready position, then turn arms over till palms face downward, now grip and pull under till fists are into the arm pits. Relax and turn to first position, palms up. Repeat the set, over, sideward and under not less than three times.

Third exercise—Triceps. Position, with arms drawn up in V shape on chest. Commence with left arm by pressing up to full stretch above the head, bend body slightly under it, grip hand as in manner of lifting weight. Relax to commencing position, and press up right arm in same manner, not less than twelve.

Fourth exercise—Forearms. Position, with arms stretched out to front in slanting direction till hands are on line with the waist, palms upward. Commence, hold fingers into palm but point first finger to front, now circle both hands inward and outward on wrists till forearms are thoroughly tired.

Fifth exercise—Calves. Ready position, with hands on hips. Commence, push left knee out to left front, at the same time raising left heel to limit. Now straighten left leg and drop heel to floor. Repeat on alternate legs till tired, care being taken to put the pressure on toe.

Only MEN

The Reason

And the Only Reason For

The remarkable success I have enjoyed, and the splendid reputation I have achieved in the treatment of diseases of men is the direct result of the exceptional care and painstaking methods I adopt in each and every case. But in addition to this, I have made many important discoveries, in the course of my long medical career, and these further enable me to accomplish results that are impossible with the average practitioner.

I HAVE A CURE FOR EVERY AILMENT to which men are commonly subject. I have every appliance necessary to aid in rapid and permanent relief. My examinations are very carefully made. Consultation is free and strictly confidential. I furnish all medicines needed without additional expense. My charges are within the reach of any man, and are as fair as you could ask for. And I guarantee to do exactly what I say I will do.

If you suffer from Nervous Debility, Blood Poisoning, Kidney Trouble, Varicose Veins, Bladder Trouble, Contracted Diseases, Gravel (Stone), Local Deformities, Stricture, and Loss of Nerve Power, I can cure you.

Are You a Perfect Man?
With No Back Pains
No Nervousness
No Waste of Power
No Loss of Ambition
But with plenty of life and energy and the vigor of youth

To be strong and manly is the aim of every young man, and yet how many we find who are wasting the vitality and strength which nature gives them. Instead of developing into the strong, vigorous, manly young fellows that nature intended them to be, they find themselves weak, stunted and despondent—no ambition to do anything. They struggle aimlessly along, sooner or later to become victims of that dread disease, nervous debility; their finer sensibilities blunted and their nerves shattered.

DR. TAYLOR
The Leading Specialist

I Cure Men's Diseases

I have treated hundreds of men who had long suffered a gradual decline of physical and mental energy as a result of private ailments, and have been interested in noting the marked general improvement that follows a thorough cure of the chief disorder. My success in curing difficult cases of long standing has made me the foremost specialist treating men's diseases. This success is due to several things. It is due to the study I have given my specialty, to my having ascertained the exact nature of men's ailments, and to the original, distinctive and thoroughly scientific methods of treatment I employ.

To those in doubt as to their true condition who wish to avoid the serious results that may follow neglect, I offer free consultation and advice, either at my office or through correspondence. If your case is one of the few that has reached an incurable stage, I will not accept it for treatment, nor will I urge my services upon any one. I treat curable cases only, and cure all cases I treat.

Weakness
You've probably been treated for so-called weakness and helped temporarily or not at all, and the reason is very apparent when cause of loss of power in men is understood. Weakness is merely a symptom of chronic inflammation of the prostate gland, which my treatment removes, thereby permanently restoring strength and vigor.

Specific Blood Poison
No dangerous minerals to drive the virus to the interior, but harmless, blood-cleansing remedies that remove the last poisonous taint.

Varicocele
Absolutely painless treatment that cures completely in one week. Investigate my method. It is the only thoroughly scientific treatment for this disease being employed.

FREE
My colored chart, showing the male anatomy and affording an interesting study in men's diseases, will be given free upon application.

Contracted Disorders
You can depend upon a quick and thorough cure by my treatment. A quick cure is desirable because a slow cure is apt to be no cure at all, and a chronic development will come later. I cure you beyond the possibility of a relapse and in half the usual time required.

Reflex Ailments
Often the condition appearing to be the chief disorder is only a reflex ailment resulting from some other disease. Weakness sometimes comes from varicocele or stricture; skin and bone diseases result from blood poison taint, and physical and mental decline follow long-standing functional disorder. My long experience in treating men enables me to determine the exact conditions that exist and to treat accordingly, thus removing every damaging cause and its effects.

NOTICE TO MEN! Do you feel you are NOT the man you once were? Are your powers of manhood in a declining state? Is there an unnatural drain upon your system? If so, we urge upon you the necessity of the skilled services of a qualified specialist.

BLOOD POISON
If you have sore throat, mucous patches, pimples, copper-colored spots, sores and ulcers, bone pains, falling hair or any other symptoms of this disease, in either primary, secondary or tertiary stages, you should consult us and be forever rid of it. Our treatment cleanses and eradicates every taint of poison and every impurity of the blood and system. All danger of transmission or recurrence is removed. Why take poisonous drugs for years when a thorough cure can be obtained without? Consult us at once.

WEAK MEN
Our cure for weak men removes all the ill effects of former follies and dissipation, stops every loss and drain of vigor, makes the nerves strong and steady, enriches the blood, invigorates the wasted pelvic organs, and, most important of all, restores the wasted power of manhood. Avoid temporary stimulants. Seek a lasting cure.

VARICOCELE
Cured without pain, inconvenience or suspension from business. Soreness, swelling and congestion of the dilated veins quickly vanish. Losses are checked and all the parts strengthened and revitalized.

PROSTATITIS
Our cure removes every obstruction from the urinary passage, allays inflammation, stops every discharge, reduces the prostate gland, cleanses and heals the bladder, kidneys, invigorates the weakened organs and restores health and soundness to every part of the body afflicted with the disease.

MATINEE JUDGES FINE BECKERS.

HORSEMAN REFUSED TO START AFTER FILING ENTRIES.

Exceptionally Good Races at Matinee of the Los Angeles Driving Club—Glenita Wins the Mixed 2:30 Class, Which Proves the Feature of the Afternoon.

Good sport was the order of the day at the matinée given by the Los Angeles Driving Club at Agricultural Park yesterday afternoon. Though none of the records were in any way remarkable, the time was, in most cases, good and competition was close.

The first real excitement of the afternoon happened in the second race, the 2:40 trot. George T. Beckers refused to start his bay mare, Ramona S., claiming that she had been wrongly classified and stood no chance to win. As there was but one other entry in the event it was necessary to call the race off. In teh fifth race, the 2:20 trot, Beckers again scratched his entry, Zoyboyette, for the same reason.

When the judges were apprised of Becker's action, they summoned him to the stand and, after listening to his side of the story, fined him $5 for each offense. With these two exceptions the meet went off without untoward happenings.

The officials of the club reserve the right to classify all entries as they see fit in order to insure sportsmanlike competition, and, that there may be no breaks in the programme, a rule has been made that any owner scratching his entry shall forfeit the sum of $5.

The great feature of the matinée was the sixth race, the 2:30 mixed, open, to trotters and pacers alike, won by Glenita. In this event the contest was so close that three heats were required to settle the matter, and in the last heat the three leading horses finished neck and neck.

The summary of the afternoon's racing is as follows:

The 2:40 pace:

Zela (b. m.,) G. W. Dixon	1	1
Isabel (s. m.,) Perry Low	2	2
Omos Ketchem (s. g.,) L. E. McLelan	3	3
Barney (b. g.,) Joseph Walker	4	4

Time, 2:26, 2:29.

The 2:40 trot declared off.

RUBE WADDELL IN FORM.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BOSTON, June 29.—Two Boston errors and two Philadelphia hits in the sixth gave the visitors three runs and the game. Boston filled the bases in the fifth inning but a jump catch by Nichols, prevented a score. Waddell struck out twelve men. Score:

Philadelphia, 3; hits, 6; errors, 1.

Boston, 0; hits, 8; errors, 3.

Batteries—Waddell and Schreck; Glaze and Shaw.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

DETROIT, June 29—Both Cleveland pitchers were easy while Mullen had the batsmen at his mercy. Cobb collided with Bemis at the plate in the second. He was safe and Bemis struck Cobb several times as he lay on the ground, for which the catcher was put out. Score:

Detroit, 12; hits, 13; errors, 8.

Cleveland, 2; hits, 6; errors, 5.

Batteries—Mullin and Archer; Berger, Hess and Bemis, Wakefield.
